A copy of every list of crew¹, including all changes in it notified to the owner², must be maintained by the owner of the ship at an address in the United Kingdom³; and a person who fails to do so commits an offence⁴.

The master must, as soon as practicable and in any event within three days of any change being made in the list of crew, notify the change to the owner of the ship⁵; and a master who fails to do so commits an offence⁶.

When any person having in his possession the copy of a list of crew⁷ has reason to believe that the ship to which it relates has been lost or abandoned, he must immediately deliver the copy of the list to a superintendent⁸. A person who fails to do so commits an offence⁹.

A person having in his possession a copy of a list of crew¹⁰ must produce it on demand to a superintendent¹¹; and a person who fails to do so commits an offence¹².

Except in the case where a crew agreement for the ship¹ covers an indefinite period, a list of crew remains in force²:

- 292 (1) if any person is employed³ in the ship under a crew agreement, until all the persons employed under that agreement in that ship have been discharged⁴; and

542. Delivery of list of crew.

The master must, within three days after a list of crew (other than one relating to a ship¹ of less than 25 gross tons² or to a ship belonging to a general lighthouse authority³) has ceased to be in force (or, if it is not practicable within that period, as soon as practicable thereafter), deliver the list to a superintendent or proper officer for the place where the ship is when the list of crew ceases to be in force⁴. A master who fails so to comply commits an offence⁵.

Where the crew agreement covers an indefinite period, the owner must deliver a list every six month after the crew agreement is opened, showing all changes that have occurred since the list was last submitted⁶:

561. Disbandment of Merchant Navy Reserve scheme.

Under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995¹, the Secretary of State² has power to maintain the Merchant Navy Reserve whose members may, in such circumstances and for such periods as the Secretary of State may determine, be required by him to serve in ships³ belonging to or employed in the service of Her Majesty⁴. However, the Merchant Navy Reserve scheme was disbanded on 23 May 2000⁵.

2 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 38.

3 As to the meaning of 'ship' see PARA 229.

4 See the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 82(1). Under s 82, the Secretary of State may make regulations with respect to the calling into, and discharge from, service of members of the Merchant Navy Reserve and with respect to other matters relating to the service of members of the Reserve; and any such regulations may make other provision: see s 82(4)-(7). By virtue of the Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b), the Merchant Shipping (Merchant Navy Reserve) Regulations 1989, SI 1989/662, had effect as if made under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 82 but these regulations were revoked with effect from 15 December 2003: see the Merchant Shipping (Merchant Navy Reserve) (Revocation) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2861, regs 1, 2.

6. PILOTAGE AND TOWAGE

(1) PILOTAGE

(i) In general

562. Regulation of pilotage.

Pilotage is regulated almost entirely by statute. The Pilotage Act 1913 consolidated with amendments the general law relating to pilotage¹ and provided for the complete reorganisation and revision of pilotage in all parts of the United Kingdom². That Act provided for pilotage authorities³ and pilotage districts⁴ to be established by pilotage orders⁵; empowered a pilotage authority to make byelaws⁶, subject to confirmation by the Secretary of State, for regulating pilotage in its district, to license pilots for its district⁷ and to grant pilotage certificates⁸; and provided for a number of other matters in relation to pilotage. The Pilotage Authorities (Limitation of Liability) Act 1936 enabled a pilotage authority to limit its liability in certain circumstances⁹; and the Merchant Shipping Act 1979 provided for the establishment of the Pilotage Commission¹⁰, the review of pilotage services and non-compulsory pilotage areas¹¹, changes in the obligations which applied where pilotage was compulsory¹² and in the method of making pilotage charges¹³ and other matters in relation to pilotage, including a number of miscellaneous amendments of the Pilotage Act 1913. The provisions of the Pilotage Act 1913, the Pilotage Authorities (Limitation of Liability) Act 1936 and the Merchant Shipping Act 1979 were repealed by¹⁴, and consolidated in, the Pilotage Act 1983, which was itself repealed and replaced by the Pilotage Act 1987¹⁵.

The 1987 Act abolished the Pilotage Commission¹⁶ and the then existing pilotage authorities¹⁷; and pilotage functions are now exercised by competent harbour authorities¹⁸. Competent harbour authorities are under a general duty to consider whether any, and if so what, pilotage services need to be provided and whether such services should be compulsory¹⁹. The authorities have power to license and employ pilots²⁰ and to make reasonable charges for pilotage services²¹. Provision is also made as to the rights and powers of pilots²², misconduct by pilots²³ and the limitation of liability in respect of pilots²⁴.

At the date at which this volume states the law, the Marine Navigation Bill had not yet completed its progress through Parliament, but it is concerned very specifically with improving safety at sea and in ports, and with updating the powers of the bodies responsible for maritime safety²⁵. To this end, it contains proposals (amongst other things) allowing a Competent Harbour Authority to relinquish its unwanted pilotage powers²⁶; providing for regulations to specify compulsory qualifications for pilots²⁷; amending the offence that arises where a master gives inadequate notification in relation to compulsory pilotage²⁸; and improving the regulation of pilotage exemption certificates²⁹.

1 The law had previously been contained partly in general and partly in local legislation with no clear distinction between the two.

563. Meanings of 'pilot' and 'authorised pilot' for the purposes of the Pilotage Act 1987.

In the Pilotage Act 1987, except where the context otherwise requires, 'pilot' means any person not belonging to a ship¹ who has the conduct thereof; and 'pilotage' is to be construed accordingly². 'Authorised pilot', in relation to any area, means a person authorised³ for that area and, in relation to any ship, a person so authorised in respect of ships of that description⁴.

1 For these purposes, 'ship' has the same meaning as in the Harbours Act 1964 (see PORTS AND HARBOURS vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 611) and includes both British ships and foreign ships: Pilotage Act 1987 s 31(1).

3 The provision was made as follows: for the transfer of the staff of the pilotage authorities (see the Pilotage Act 1987 s 25 (amended by the Employment Rights Act 1996 s 240, Sch 1 para 32; the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 2004)); for the abolition of the Pilotage Commission (see the Pilotage Act 1987 s 26 (repealed by the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 2004); and the Pilotage Act 1987 s 27 (repealed by the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 1993)); for pilots' compensation schemes (see the Pilotage Act 1987 s 28 (repealed by the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 2004)); and for the funding of reorganisation (see the Pilotage Act 1987 s 29 (s 29(1)-(4) repealed by the Statute Law (Repeals) Act 2004)).

PILOTAGE AND TOWAGE/(1) PILOTAGE/(iii) Pilotage Functions of Competent Harbour Authorities/A. IN GENERAL/565. Meanings of 'competent harbour authority' and 'harbour' under the Pilotage Act 1987.

(iii) Pilotage Functions of Competent Harbour Authorities

A. IN GENERAL

565. Meanings of 'competent harbour authority' and 'harbour' under the Pilotage Act 1987.

'Competent harbour authority' means any harbour authority¹:

- 362 (1) which has statutory powers² in relation to the regulation of shipping movements and the safety of navigation within its harbour³; and
- 363 (2) whose harbour falls wholly or partly within an active former pilotage district⁴; and references to a harbour authority's harbour are to the area or areas inside the limits of which its statutory powers and duties⁵ as a harbour authority are exercisable but, where there are two or more separate such areas, include only those areas which fall wholly or partly within an active former pilotage district⁶.

If the Secretary of State⁷ considers that in the interests of efficiency and safety of navigation a competent harbour authority should exercise pilotage functions both as respects its harbour and another area, he may by order⁸ provide:

- 364 (a) that the Pilotage Act 1987 is to apply to that authority as if its harbour included that other area⁹; and
- 365 (b) in a case where the other area is or falls within the harbour of another competent harbour authority, that that other authority is not to be a competent harbour authority for the purposes of the 1987 Act¹⁰.

A harbour authority which is not a competent harbour authority may apply to the Secretary of State to be treated for the purpose of the 1987 Act as such an authority; and on such an application the Secretary of State may by order provide that the applicant is to be a competent harbour authority for the purposes of the 1987 Act¹¹.

The Secretary of State may by order amend or revoke such an order¹² if it appears to him to be appropriate to do so, having regard to any change of circumstances which has occurred since the order was made¹³.

Before making such an order¹⁴, the Secretary of State must inform the persons he considers may be affected by the order of the terms of the proposed order and that they may, within such reasonable period as he may specify, object to the making of the order by giving him notice in writing¹⁵.

The Secretary of State must maintain a list of the authorities which are for the time being competent harbour authorities for the purposes of the 1987 Act¹⁶.

1 In the Pilotage Act 1987, except where the context otherwise requires, 'competent harbour authority' has the meaning given in s 1; and 'harbour authority' has the same meaning as in the Harbours Act 1964 (see PORTS AND HARBOURS vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 619): Pilotage Act 1987 s 31(1). However, for the purposes of s 1(1), 'harbour authority' does not include:

848 (1) any authority excluded by virtue of the Harbours Act 1964 s 58 (see PORTS AND HARBOURS vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 619) from being taken as a harbour authority for the purposes of the Harbours Act 1964 (Pilotage Act 1987 s 1(9)(a));

849 (2) a Queen's harbour master (s 1(9)(b)); or

850 (3) any own account operator (s 1(9)(c)).

For this purpose, 'own account operator' means a statutory harbour undertaker within the meaning of the Harbours Act 1964 s 42 (see PORTS AND HARBOURS vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 684) whose activities in the harbour in question relate wholly or mainly to ships resorting to the harbour wholly or mainly for the purpose of bringing or receiving goods which:

851 (a) have been manufactured or produced by the statutory harbour undertaker or any connected person (Pilotage Act 1987 s 1(11)(a)); or

852 (b) are to be used by him or any connected person for the manufacture or production of goods or electricity (s 1(11)(b)); and, for these purposes, a person is connected with a statutory harbour undertaker if he is a holding company or subsidiary of the undertaker or a member of a consortium the members of which between them own, directly or indirectly, more than half of the issued share capital of the undertaker (s 1(11)). As to the meaning of 'ship' see PARA 563 note 1. As to Queen's harbour masters see PORTS AND HARBOURS vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 693.

2 For these purposes, 'statutory powers' has the same meaning as in the Harbours Act 1964 (see PORTS AND HARBOURS vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 605): Pilotage Act 1987 s 31(1).

3 Pilotage Act 1987 s 1(1)(a). For these purposes, powers exercisable by the harbour master for a harbour are to be taken to be exercisable by the harbour authority which appointed him: s 1(10). 'Harbour', in relation to a competent harbour authority, has the meaning given in s 1 (see the text and notes 5-6): see s 31(1).

4 Pilotage Act 1987 s 1(1)(b). For these purposes, any reference to a former pilotage district is to a district which was a pilotage district within the meaning of the Pilotage Act 1983 (repealed) immediately before 1 October 1988 (Pilotage Act 1987 ss 1(2), 31(1)); and, for the purposes of s 1(1), such a district is an active district if:

853 (1) at least one act of pilotage was performed there in 1984, 1985, 1986 or 1987 in respect of which information was given by the pilotage authority for the district in a return made by it under the Pilotage Act 1983 s 19 (repealed) (see the Pilotage Act 1987 s 1(2)(a)); or 854 (2) a certificate granted under the Pilotage Act 1983 s 20 (repealed) (masters' and first mates' pilotage certificates) was in force in respect of the district at any time in any of those years in respect of which information was so given (see the Pilotage Act 1987 s 1(2)(b)).

As to the meaning of 'pilotage' see PARA 563.

5 For these purposes, 'statutory duties' has the same meaning as in the Harbours Act 1964 (see PORTS AND HARBOURS vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 605): Pilotage Act 1987 s 31(1).

6 Pilotage Act 1987 s 1(1).

7 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 38.

8 Any power to make an order or regulations under the Pilotage Act 1987 is exercisable by statutory instrument (s 30(1)); and any statutory instrument containing such an order or regulations is, except in relation to an order made under s 1 to which s 1(8) (see note 15) applies or an order made under s 33 (commencement orders), subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament (s 30(2)). The Secretary of State may by regulations make such transitional, consequential or incidental provision, including provision repealing or amending any local enactment, as he considers necessary or expedient for the purpose of giving effect to or in consequence of any provision of the Pilotage Act 1987: see s 32(1). For these purposes, 'local enactment' includes an Act confirming a provisional order, an instrument made under a local enactment and an instrument in the nature of a local enactment made under any other Act: s 32(2). As orders under s 1 are local in nature, they are not noted in this work.

B. PROVISION OF PILOTAGE SERVICES

566. General duties as to provision of pilotage services.

Each competent harbour authority¹ must keep under consideration:

- 366 (1) whether any and, if so, what pilotage² services need to be provided to secure the safety of ships³ navigating⁴ in or in the approaches to its harbour⁵; and
- 367 (2) whether in the interests of safety pilotage should be compulsory for ships navigating in any part of that harbour or its approaches and, if so, for which ships and in which circumstances and what pilotage services need to be provided for those ships⁶.

Each competent harbour authority must, in performing these functions⁷, have regard in particular⁸ to the hazards involved in the carriage of dangerous goods or harmful substances by ship⁹.

Each competent harbour authority must provide such pilotage services as it considers need to be provided as mentioned in heads (1) and (2) above¹⁰.

PILOTAGE AND TOWAGE/(1) PILOTAGE/(iii) Pilotage Functions of Competent Harbour Authorities/B. PROVISION OF PILOTAGE SERVICES/567. Authorisation of pilots.

567. Authorisation of pilots.

A competent harbour authority¹ may authorise² such persons to act as pilots³ in or in any part of the area in relation to which its statutory duty to provide pilotage services⁴ is exercisable as it considers are suitably qualified to do so⁵; and such an authorisation must specify the area within which it has effect and may specify that it only has effect in relation to ships⁶ of a particular description⁷.

The authority may determine the qualifications in respect of physical fitness, time of service, local knowledge, skill, character and otherwise to be required from persons applying for authorisation and provide for the examination of such persons⁸.

A competent harbour authority may suspend or revoke such an authorisation granted by it⁹ if it appears to it:

- 368 (1) that the authorised person has been guilty of any incompetence or misconduct affecting his capability as a pilot¹⁰;
- 369 (2) that the authorised person has ceased to have the qualifications required from persons applying for authorisation¹¹ or has failed to provide evidence that he continues to have those qualifications¹²;
- 370 (3) that the number of persons for the time being so authorised by it¹³ exceeds the number required to be authorised¹⁴; or
- 371 (4) that it is appropriate to do so by virtue of the termination of any contract or other arrangement under which the services of pilots are provided within its harbour¹⁵.

Before suspending or revoking an authorisation under head (1) or head (2) above, a competent harbour authority must give written notice of its intention to do so to the authorised person, stating the reasons for which it proposes to act, and must give him a reasonable opportunity of making representations¹⁶. Where a competent harbour authority suspends or revokes an authorisation of any person by virtue of head (3) or head (4) above, it must give him notice in writing stating that the suspension or revocation was by virtue of head (3) or head (4) above and specifying the duration of the authorisation in question and any previous authorisations granted to that person by the authority¹⁷.

If any person who is not an authorised pilot¹⁸ for an area describes himself while he is in that area as being such a pilot or so holds himself out as to indicate or be reasonably understood to indicate that he is such a pilot, he is guilty of an offence¹⁹.

A person who is an authorised pilot for a harbour for which the competent harbour authority is a local authority²⁰ is not by reason of his holding any office or employment as a pilot disqualified for being a member of any committee of that local authority with any functions in respect of which knowledge or experience relevant to pilotage is material or for being a representative of the local authority on a joint committee of the authority and another authority with such functions²¹. Similarly, a person who is an authorised pilot for a harbour for which the competent harbour authority is a local authority which is operating executive arrangements²² is not by reason of his holding any office or employment as a pilot disqualified²³:
(a) for being a member of the executive of the local authority where that executive is to any extent responsible for any function in respect of which knowledge or experience relevant to pilotage is material²⁴; or (b) for being a member of a committee of the executive of the local authority with any functions in respect of which knowledge or experience relevant to pilotage is material²⁵.

5 Pilotage Act 1987 s 3(1) (as amended: see note 2). In considering whether a person is suitably qualified either to be authorised under s 3(1) to act as a pilot in inland waters only, or in inland waters and other waters, or to continue to be so authorised, a competent harbour authority must act in accordance with Sch A1 (added by SI 2003/1230): Pilotage Act 1987 s 3(1A) (added by SI 2003/1230). The Pilotage Act 1987 Sch A1 (as so added) applies:

855 (1) where a competent harbour authority requires particular formal qualifications from persons applying for authorisation, and a person applying for authorisation is a national of an EEA state other than the United Kingdom, and does not hold the required qualifications, but holds formal qualifications obtained in an EEA state other than the United Kingdom (see Sch A1 paras 2, 4 (as so added));

856 (2) where a competent harbour authority requires persons applying for authorisation to have knowledge of, and to demonstrate that they apply, specific national rules in force, and a person applying for authorisation is a national of an EEA State other than the United Kingdom and envisages acting as a pilot in a self-employed capacity or as a manager of an undertaking (see Sch A1 paras 3, 4 (as so added)); and

857 (3) where a competent harbour authority requires general commercial or professional knowledge and ability from persons applying for authorisation, and such an applicant has appropriate experience gained in an EEA state other than the United Kingdom (see Sch A1 paras 5, 6 (as so added)).

As to the proof required of various matters in relation to applications made under heads (1) to (3) see Sch A1 paras 7-11 (as so added). For these purposes, 'EEA state' means any state which is a contracting party to the Agreement on the European Economic Area (Oporto, 2 May 1992; EC 7 (1992); Cm 2183) as adjusted by the Protocol (Brussels, 17 March 1993; EC 2 (1993); Cm 2183): see the Pilotage Act 1987 Sch A1 para 1(2) (as so added). 7 Pilotage Act 1987 s 3(1) (as amended: see note 2).

8 Pilotage Act 1987 s 3(2) (amended by SI 2006/1031). However, nothing in any determination made by a competent harbour authority under the Pilotage Act 1987 s 3(2) permits the authority to act in such a way as to contravene Sch A1 (see note 5), which makes provision about persons with qualifications obtained in EEA states other than the United Kingdom: s 3(2A) (added by SI 2003/1230). Transitional provision was made as to the qualifications required for authorisation under the Pilotage Act 1987 s 3 in relation to persons who immediately before 1 October 1988 were the holders of licences under the Pilotage Act 1983 s 12 (repealed), time-expired apprentice pilots or recognised assistant pilots (see the Pilotage Act 1987 s 3(2) (as so amended)); and in relation to persons who were not immediately before that date holders of full licences (see s 3(3), (4)). For these purposes, 'recognised assistant pilot' means a person who acts as an assistant to pilots in a pilotage district and is recognised as such an assistant by the pilotage authority for the district but is not the holder of such a licence; and 'time-expired apprentice pilot' means a person who has served the full term of his apprenticeship as a pilot but is not the holder of a licence under the Pilotage Act 1983 s 12 (repealed): Pilotage Act 1987 s 3(10).

PILOTAGE AND TOWAGE/(1) PILOTAGE/(iii) Pilotage Functions of Competent Harbour Authorities/B. PROVISION OF PILOTAGE SERVICES/568. Employment etc of authorised pilots.

568. Employment etc of authorised pilots.

A competent harbour authority¹ may make such arrangements as it considers appropriate for the provision of the services of authorised pilots² in the area in relation to which its statutory duty to provide pilotage services³ is exercisable, whether under a contract of employment or a contract for services⁴.

A competent harbour authority may refuse to authorise any person who is not willing to provide his services as a pilot in accordance with the arrangements made for the provision of such services in its area⁵.

A competent harbour authority may pay into any pilots' benefit fund⁶ such contributions as may be required by the rules governing that fund in respect of any authorised pilot providing his services under such arrangements as mentioned above⁷.

4 Pilotage Act 1987 s 4(1). Transitional provision was made for a competent harbour authority, should it be so required, to offer contracts of employment to persons authorised under s 3 (see PARA 567) who were not, around the time of commencement of the Pilotage Act 1987 (ie 1 October 1988) employed by it under such a contract: see s 4(2), (3).

5 Pilotage Act 1987 s 4(4).

6 Ie established under the Pilotage Act 1983 s 15(1) (repealed): see the Pilotage Act 1987 s 4(5). Any pilots' benefit fund established under the Pilotage Act 1983 s 15(1)(i) (repealed) continued in existence notwithstanding the repeal of s 15 by the Pilotage Act 1987; and the Secretary of State had power by order to make such provision as he considered appropriate as to:

858 (1) the operation after the repeal of the Pilotage Act 1983 s 15 (repealed) of the byelaws under which any such fund was established (Pilotage Act 1987 s 32(3), Sch 1 para 4(1)(a));

859 (2) the appointment of the managers of any such fund and any powers to be exercisable as respects the management of the fund by the persons who were to appoint those managers (Sch 1 para 4(1)(b)); and 860 (3) the powers of any such managers to amend or revoke the byelaws or any other provision governing the fund (Sch 1 para 4(1)(c)).

Before making such an order in respect of any fund, the Secretary of State had to consult such persons or organisations as appeared to him to be representative of competent harbour authorities and such persons as appeared to him to be representative of the persons who might benefit from the fund: Sch 1 para 4(2). In exercise of the power so conferred the Secretary of State made (inter alia) the Pilotage Act 1987 (Pilots' National Pension Fund) Order 1987, SI 1987/2139. 569. Pilot boats.

Ships¹ regularly employed in pilotage² services provided by or on behalf of any competent harbour authority³ ('pilot boats') must:

- 372 (1) if they are operated by the authority, be approved by the authority⁴; and
- 373 (2) otherwise be licensed by it⁵;

and the authority must not so approve or license any ship unless it is satisfied that it is suitable for use as a pilot boat⁶.

A competent harbour authority must make such other provision as it considers necessary for the operation of pilot boats⁷.

C. COMPULSORY PILOTAGE

570. Pilotage directions.

If a competent harbour authority¹ considers that in the interests of safety it should do so, it must direct that pilotage² is compulsory for ships³ navigating⁴ in any area or part of an area in relation to which its statutory duty to provide pilotage services⁵ is exercisable⁶. Such a direction is called a 'pilotage direction'⁷.

A pilotage direction:

- 374 (1) may⁸ apply to all ships or all ships of a description specified in the direction, subject to any exceptions there specified⁹;
- 375 (2) must specify the area and circumstances in which it applies¹⁰;
- 376 (3) may specify the circumstances in which an authorised pilot¹¹ in charge of a ship to which it applies is to be accompanied by an assistant who is also an authorised pilot¹²; and
- 377 (4) may contain such supplementary provisions as the authority considers appropriate¹³.

A pilotage direction does not apply to ships of less than 20 metres in length or to fishing boats of which the registered length is less than 47.5 metres¹⁴.

Before giving a pilotage direction, a competent harbour authority must consult:

- 378 (a) the owners of ships which customarily navigate in the area to which the proposed direction would apply¹⁵; and
- 379 (b) any other persons who carry on harbour operations¹⁶ within the harbour¹⁷ of the authority¹⁸; or, in either case, such persons as it considers to be representative of them¹⁹.

If a competent harbour authority considers that pilotage should be compulsory for ships navigating in any area outside its harbour, it must apply for a harbour revision order to be made²⁰ to extend the limits within which the authority has jurisdiction for the purposes of pilotage to include that area; and a pilotage direction given by it does not apply to that area until the limits have been so extended²¹.

A competent harbour authority must arrange for any pilotage direction given by it to be published in such manner as to bring it to the notice of those persons likely to be interested²².

571. Pilotage exemption certificates.

A competent harbour authority¹ which has given a pilotage direction² must, on application by any person who is bona fide the master³ or first mate of any ship⁴, grant a certificate (a 'pilotage exemption certificate')⁵ to him if it is satisfied (by examination or by reference to such other requirements as it may reasonably impose)⁶:

- 380 (1) that his skill, experience and local knowledge are sufficient for him to be capable of piloting the ship of which he is master or first mate (or that and any other ships specified in the certificate) within its harbour⁷ or such part of its harbour as may be so specified⁸; and
- 381 (2) in any case where it appears to the authority to be necessary in the interests of safety, that his knowledge of English is sufficient for that purpose⁹.

The requirements so imposed¹⁰:

- 382 (a) must not be unduly onerous having regard to the difficulties and danger of navigation in the harbour in question¹¹; and
- 383 (b) must not be more onerous than those required to be met by a person¹² applying to the authority¹³ for authorisation¹⁴.

If the Secretary of State¹⁵ is satisfied, on application by a competent harbour authority, that it is appropriate to do so by reason of the unusual hazards involved in shipping movements within its harbour, he may direct that during such period, not exceeding three years, as he may specify, notwithstanding that the authority is satisfied as to the matters mentioned in heads (1) and (2) above¹⁶, it may refuse to grant¹⁷ pilotage exemption certificates¹⁸. Where a direction is so given¹⁹ in respect of a competent harbour authority, any pilotage exemption certificate granted by the authority ceases to have effect and the authority must notify the holders of such certificates of that fact²⁰.

A pilotage exemption certificate does not remain in force for more than three years from the date on which it is granted²¹; but:

- 384 (i) if the holder continues to be the master or first mate of a ship, may be renewed annually by the competent harbour authority on application by the holder if the authority continues to be satisfied as to the matters mentioned in heads (1) and (2) above²²; and
- 385 (ii) on the application of the holder may be altered so as to refer to different ships from those to which it previously referred if the authority is so satisfied as respects those ships²³.

A competent harbour authority may suspend or revoke such a certificate granted by it²⁴ if it appears to it that the holder has been guilty of any incompetence or misconduct affecting his capability to pilot the ship of which he is master or first mate or any other ships specified in the certificate²⁵.

Before refusing an application by any person²⁶ for the grant, renewal or alteration of a certificate or suspending or revoking a certificate held by any person, a competent harbour authority must give him written notice of its intention to do so, stating the reasons for which it proposes to act, and must give him a reasonable opportunity of making representations²⁷.

A competent harbour authority may charge such fees in respect of any examination so required to be taken²⁸ or the grant, renewal or alteration of any pilotage exemption certificate as the authority considers reasonable for the purposes of meeting its administrative costs in connection therewith²⁹.

A competent harbour authority¹ must secure that any ship² owned or operated by it and used by it in the exercise of its functions otherwise than under the Pilotage Act 1987 is subject to the same obligations as respects pilotage³ whilst navigating⁴ within its harbour⁵ as any other ship⁶.

D. CHARGING BY AUTHORITIES

573. Pilotage charges.

A competent harbour authority¹ may make reasonable charges in respect of the pilotage services provided by it². The charges to be so made may include³:

- 386 (1) charges for the services of a pilot⁴ authorised by the authority⁵;
- 387 (2) charges in respect of any expenses reasonably incurred by such a pilot in connection with the provision of his services as a pilot⁶;
- 388 (3) charges by way of penalties payable in cases where the estimated time of arrival or departure of a ship⁷ is not notified as required by the authority or the ship does not arrive or depart at the notified time⁸;
- 389 (4) charges in respect of the cost of providing, maintaining and operating pilot boats⁹ for the area¹⁰; and
- 390 (5) charges in respect of any other costs involved in providing and maintaining the pilotage organisation provided by the authority¹¹.

A competent harbour authority which has given a pilotage direction¹² may also make reasonable charges in respect of any ship navigating¹³ within the area to which the direction applies under the pilotage of a master¹⁴ or first mate who is the holder of a pilotage exemption certificate¹⁵ in respect of the area and ship in question¹⁶.

Different charges may be made¹⁷ in different circumstances¹⁸.

A competent harbour authority must arrange for the charges to be made by it¹⁹ to be published in such manner as to bring them to the notice of those persons likely to be interested²⁰.

Charges so imposed by a competent harbour authority²¹ are recoverable as a civil debt or in any other manner in which ship, passenger and goods dues²² are recoverable by the authority²³.

E. AGENTS AND JOINT ARRANGEMENTS

574. Use of agents; joint arrangements.

A competent harbour authority¹ may arrange for its functions in relation to the provision of pilotage services, with exceptions², to be exercised on its behalf by such other persons as it thinks fit and may establish such companies as it thinks fit to exercise those functions on its behalf³.

A competent harbour authority may arrange for all or any of its functions relating to pilotage⁴, other than its statutory duty to provide pilotage services⁵, to be exercised on its behalf by another competent harbour authority⁶.

Two or more competent harbour authorities may arrange to discharge any of their functions relating to pilotage jointly; and such arrangements may provide for the discharge of such functions by a joint committee or any other body established by the authorities for that purpose⁷.

An authority which has so entered into such arrangements with another authority⁸ may withdraw from the arrangements on giving reasonable notice to the other authority⁹.

- 391 (1) the harbours¹ of two or more competent harbour authorities² fall wholly or partly within a single former pilotage district³;
- 392 (2) access for ships⁴ to the harbour of a competent harbour authority is customarily available through the harbour of another competent harbour authority⁵;

If the Secretary of State considers that any arrangements of which particulars are so provided¹⁵ are not satisfactory, he may direct that they are to have effect subject to such modifications as he may specify in the direction¹⁶ or he may direct the authorities (or authority) concerned to make different arrangements¹⁷.

If the statement so provided¹⁸ is to the effect that no arrangements have been made or proposed by the authorities (or authority) in question for the provision of pilotage services in the area concerned and the Secretary of State considers that such arrangements should be made, he must direct the authorities (or authority) in question to make appropriate arrangements¹⁹.

A. COMPULSORY PILOTAGE

578. Requirements where compulsory pilotage in force.

A ship¹ which is being navigated² in an area and in circumstances in which pilotage³ is compulsory for it by virtue of a pilotage direction⁴ must be:

- 405 (1) under the pilotage of an authorised pilot⁵ accompanied by such an assistant, if any, as is required by virtue of the direction⁶; or
- 406 (2) under the pilotage of a master⁷ or first mate possessing a pilotage exemption certificate⁸ in respect of that area and ship⁹.

If any ship is not under pilotage as so required¹⁰ after an authorised pilot has offered to take charge of the ship, the master of the ship is guilty of an offence¹¹; and if the master of a ship navigates the ship in an area and in circumstances in which pilotage is compulsory for it by virtue of a pilotage direction without notifying the competent harbour authority¹² which gave the direction that he proposes to do so, he is guilty of an offence¹³.

B. RIGHTS OF PILOTS

580. Rights of authorised pilot to supersede unauthorised pilot.

An authorised pilot¹ may, within the harbour² in relation to which or a part of which he is authorised, supersede as the pilot³ of a ship⁴ any unauthorised person who has been employed to pilot it⁵.

If: (1) the master of any ship navigates it in any part of a harbour under the pilotage⁶ of an unauthorised person without first notifying the competent harbour authority that he proposes to do so, he is guilty of an offence⁷; (2) an unauthorised person pilots a ship within a harbour knowing that an authorised pilot has offered to pilot it, he is guilty of an offence⁸; (3) the master of a ship navigating within a harbour knowingly employs or continues to employ an unauthorised person to pilot the ship after an authorised pilot has offered to pilot it, he is guilty of an offence⁹.

For these purposes, a person is an unauthorised person if he is neither an authorised pilot nor the holder of a pilotage exemption certificate in respect of the ship and the area in question; and any person, other than the master or one of the crew of a ship, who is on the bridge of the ship or in any other position from which the ship is navigated, whether on board or elsewhere, is deemed to be piloting the ship unless he proves otherwise: s 17(5). As to the meaning of 'master' see PARA 571 note 3; and as to the meaning of 'pilotage exemption certificate' see PARA 571. As to the meaning of references to a ship navigating or being navigated see PARA 566 note 4.

Section 17(1) and s 17(2)-(4) (see the text and notes 6-9) do not apply:

861 (1) to a ship which a person is piloting or ordered to pilot in a dockyard port, within the meaning of the Dockyard Ports Regulation Act 1865 (see PORTS AND HARBOURS vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 613), in the course of his duties as a servant of the Crown (Pilotage Act 1987 s 17(7)(a)); or

862 (2) if the competent harbour authority has directed that the provisions of s 17(1)-(4) are not to apply to movements in its harbour or a specified part of its harbour for the purpose of changing a ship or a ship of a specified description from one mooring to another or of taking it into or out of any dock, to a ship or a ship of that description being moved in that harbour or that part for that purpose (s 17(7)(b));

but nothing in s 17(7)(a) (see head (1)) is to be construed as derogating from any immunity which affects such a ship as there mentioned apart from head (1) (s 17(7)). A competent harbour authority must not give a direction under s 17(7)(b) (see head (2)) unless the area in relation to which it will apply is either:

863 (a) an area in relation to which a byelaw under the Pilotage Act 1983 s 38 (repealed) (exemptions from compulsory pilotage for ships moving within harbours, docks etc) was in force immediately before 1 October 1988 (Pilotage Act 1987 s 17(8)(a)); or 864 (b) a closed dock, lock or other closed work which is not in a former pilotage district (s 17(8) (b)).

581. Declaration as to draught etc of ship.

A pilot¹ may require the master² of any ship³ which he is piloting to declare its draught of water, length and beam, and to provide him with such other information relating to the ship or its cargo as the pilot specifies and is necessary to enable him to carry out his duties as the pilot of the ship⁴.

The master of a ship must bring to the notice of any person who pilots the ship any defects in, and any matter peculiar to, the ship and its machinery and equipment of which the master knows and which might materially affect the navigation of the ship⁵.

Any master of a ship who:

- 407 (1) refuses to comply with such a request⁶; or
- 408 (2) makes a statement which is false in a material particular in answer to such a request, knowing it to be false or being reckless as to whether it is false, or fails without reasonable excuse to correct such a statement made by another person in answer to such a request, although himself knowing it to be false⁷; or
- 409 (3) without reasonable excuse fails to bring to the notice of any person who pilots the ship any defects in, and any matter peculiar to, the ship and its machinery and equipment of which the master knows and which might materially affect the navigation of the ship⁸,

- 411 (2) the master of a ship accepts the services of an authorised pilot in any other circumstances⁹,

PILOTAGE AND TOWAGE/(1) PILOTAGE/(iv) General Provisions concerning Pilotage/C. LIMITATION OF LIABILITY/584. Limitation of liability in respect of pilots.

C. LIMITATION OF LIABILITY

584. Limitation of liability in respect of pilots.

The liability of an authorised pilot¹ for any loss or damage caused by any act or omission of his while acting as such a pilot must not exceed £1,000 and the amount of the pilotage charges² in respect of the voyage during which the liability arose³. For these purposes, a person is deemed to be an authorised pilot notwithstanding that he is acting as a pilot of a ship⁴ navigating⁵ outside the area in relation to which he is authorised if:

- 412 (1) he is piloting the ship to that area from a place where pilots authorised for that harbour⁶ regularly board ships navigating to it⁷; or
- 413 (2) he is piloting the ship from that harbour to a place where such pilots regularly leave ships navigating from it⁸; and
- 414 (3) in either case, the ship is one in respect of which he is authorised⁹.

Where, without any personal act or omission by a competent harbour authority¹⁰, any loss or damage to any ship, to any property on board any ship or to any property or rights of any kind is caused by an authorised pilot employed by it, the authority is not liable to damages beyond the amount of £1,000 multiplied by the number of authorised pilots employed by it at the date when the loss or damage occurs¹¹. Where, without any such personal act or omission by a person providing pilotage services on behalf of a competent harbour authority (the 'agent'), any such loss or damage is caused by an authorised pilot employed by him, the agent is not liable to damages beyond the amount of £1,000 multiplied by the number of authorised pilots employed by him providing pilotage services for that authority at the date when the loss or damage occurs¹².

The limit of liability under these provisions¹³ applies to the whole of any losses and damages which may arise upon any one distinct occasion although such losses and damages may be sustained by more than one person¹⁴.

Where any proceedings are taken against any person (the 'defendant') for any act or omission in respect of which liability is limited as so provided¹⁵ and other claims are or appear likely to be made in respect of the same act or omission, the court¹⁶ in which the proceedings are taken may:

- 415 (a) determine the amount of the liability¹⁷;
- 416 (b) upon payment by the defendant of that amount into court, distribute that amount rateably among the claimants¹⁸;
- 417 (c) stay any proceedings pending in any other court in relation to the same matter¹⁹;
- 418 (d) proceed in such manner and subject to such requirements as the court thinks just²⁰;

35

- 81. (i) as to making interested persons parties to the proceedings²¹;
- 82. (ii) as to the exclusion of any claimants whose claims are not made within a certain time²²;

- 83. (iii) as to requiring security from the defendant²³; and
 - 84. (iv) as to payment of any costs²⁴.
- 36

A competent harbour authority is not liable for any loss or damage caused by any act or omission of a pilot authorised by it²⁵ by virtue only of that authorisation²⁶.

585. Deep sea pilotage certificates.

The Secretary of State¹ may authorise any body appearing to him to be competent to do so to grant certificates ('deep sea pilotage certificates') in respect of such part of the sea falling outside the harbour² of any competent harbour authority³ as he may specify⁴.

Any body for the time being so authorised by the Secretary of State⁵ may grant a deep sea pilotage certificate to any person on application by him if it is satisfied (by examination or by reference to such criteria as it may reasonably impose) that he is qualified to act as a pilot⁶ of a ship⁷ for the area in respect of which the body is so authorised by the Secretary of State⁸.

586. Pilotage of vessels by deep-sea pilots in the North Sea and English Channel.

Member states which have coasts bordering the North Sea and the English Channel must take all necessary and appropriate measures to ensure that vessels availing themselves of the services of a deep-sea pilot for pilotage in those waters are provided with adequately qualified deep-sea pilots in possession of a certificate delivered by a competent authority of one of those member states certifying that such pilots are qualified to pilot vessels in those waters¹. Furthermore, each member state must take all necessary and appropriate measures to encourage vessels flying its national flag to avail themselves in those waters of the services of only those deep-sea pilots who are in possession of such a certificate or of an equivalent certificate delivered by another North Sea coastal state, when seeking the assistance of deep-sea pilots².

(2) TOWAGE

587. Ordinary obligations as to efficiency of tug.

In an ordinary contract of towage¹, the owner of the tug contracts that the tug is to be efficient for the purpose for which she is employed, and that her crew, tackle and equipment are to be equal to the work to be accomplished, in the weather and in the circumstances reasonably to be expected². There is a warranty implied in such a contract that at the outset the crew, tackle and equipment are equal to the work to be accomplished in circumstances reasonably to be expected³, and there is an implied obligation that competent skill and best endeavours are to be used in doing the work⁴. The grounding of a vessel in tow may in some circumstances constitute prima facie evidence either of the insufficient power of the tug, or of the inefficiency of her crew, tackle or equipment⁵.

There is no implied warranty that the tug is to be able to accomplish the work in all circumstances and at all hazards, and, if the contract is rendered impossible by force majeure, the obligation of the tug is discharged, but the occurrence of unforeseen difficulties does not in itself discharge the tug from her contract; but such difficulties may be of a nature to entitle the tug to salvage remuneration instead of mere towage remuneration⁶.

Where the contract is for the service of a specified tug, there is no implied warranty that she is fit for the purpose for which she was supplied⁷.

588. Ordinary mutual obligation to use due care.

Where an ordinary contract of towage¹ has been made, there is an implied agreement that each vessel will perform her duty in accomplishing it, that proper skill and diligence will be used on board of each, and that neither vessel will by neglect or misconduct create unnecessary risk to the other or increase any risk which may be incidental to the service undertaken². Where the breach by either vessel of this duty causes damage to the other, the vessel committing the breach will be liable to the other unless the sufferer has by misconduct or lack of skill on her own part contributed to the accident³, in which case the loss is divided in proportion to the degrees of fault⁴. This obligation continues until the work undertaken to be done is carried out to its conclusion⁵ or the contract is otherwise determined.

Where, in the course of carrying out such a contract, a tug fails to fulfil her obligations, and in consequence of the failure the services become of a salvage nature, the tug is not permitted to recover as for salvage⁶.

589. Tug ordinarily under control of tow.

In an ordinary contract of towage¹, the tug is under the control of the tow, and must obey the directions given to her by those in charge of the tow². In such a case the tug is not liable if, by reason of these directions, the tow gets into a position of danger³, but, if without good cause these directions are disobeyed by the tug, and damage ensues to the tow, the tug is liable for any resulting damage and may forfeit her towage remuneration⁴. A tug is not obliged, however, to obey these directions if to do so would threaten the destruction of the vessel towed and endanger lives and property⁵. Although in general the tow should give directions to the tug, the question as to the relation between them is one of fact⁶. The tow is not bound on all occasions to give detailed directions to the tug⁷, and, where no directions are given by the tow, it is the duty of the tug to direct the course⁸. It is also always the duty of the tug, although she is controlled by the tow, to look out both for herself and the tow⁹.

590. Special conditions relieving the tug.

It is competent for a tug by her contract¹ to relieve herself, during the period of towage², from any of the ordinary obligations³ incident to the contract of towage⁴. Where, however, there is any ambiguity in the terms of such relieving conditions, they are strictly construed against the party relying upon them⁵. Moreover, a tug owner may be precluded from relying on an exception clause by his own breach of the contract⁶. Where the cause of the damage complained of is the negligence of himself or his employees, the tug owner cannot rely upon conditions exempting him from liability, if negligence is not expressly excepted⁷, and the conditions exempting from liability must be read, unless clear words indicate the contrary intention, as applying only when the tug owner has fulfilled his duty as to the fitness of the tug when the towage service begins⁸. Although, as between the owner of the tug and the owner of the tow, the owner of the tug may by his contract be freed from liability for damage done by a vessel in tow, such a contract does not amount to an indemnity by the owner of the tow against any damages for which the tug has been held liable⁹.

7. SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA

(1) SAFETY AND HEALTH ON SHIPS

(i) In general

591. Safety and health on ships; power to make regulations.

The Secretary of State¹ may by regulations ('safety regulations')² make such provision as he considers appropriate for all or any of the following purposes³:

- 419 (1) for securing the safety of United Kingdom ships⁴ and persons on them, and for protecting the health of persons on United Kingdom ships⁵;
- 420 (2) for securing the safety of other ships and persons on them while they are within United Kingdom waters⁶ and for protecting the health of persons on ships other than United Kingdom ships while they are within United Kingdom waters⁷.

Safety regulations do not apply in relation to a qualifying foreign ship⁸ while it is exercising the right of innocent passage⁹ or the right of transit passage¹⁰ through straits used for international navigation¹¹ or in relation to persons on such a ship while it is exercising any such right¹²; but safety regulations do apply in relation to a qualifying foreign ship, and persons on such a ship, even though the ship is exercising the right of innocent passage or the right of transit passage through straits used for international navigation, to the extent that the safety regulations give effect to any provisions of an international agreement ratified by the United Kingdom so far as it relates to the safety of ships or persons on them or to the protection of the health of persons or ships¹³.

Regulations in pursuance of head (1) or head (2) above may make provision with respect to any of the following matters, that is to say¹⁴:

- 421 (a) the design, construction, maintenance, repair, alteration, inspection, surveying and marking of ships and their machinery and equipment¹⁵;
- 422 (b) the packaging, marking, loading, placing, moving, inspection, testing and measuring of cargo and anything on a ship which is not cargo, machinery or equipment¹⁶;
- 423 (c) the carrying out of any operation involving a ship¹⁷;
- 424 (d) the use of the machinery and equipment of a ship and of everything on a ship which is not cargo, machinery or equipment¹⁸;
- 425 (e) the manning of ships, including the employment on ships of persons qualified to attend to the health and safety of persons on the ships¹⁹;
- 426 (f) the arrangements for ensuring communication between persons in different parts of a ship and between persons in the ship and other persons²⁰;
- 427 (g) the access to, presence in and egress from a ship, and different parts of it, of persons of any description²¹;
- 428 (h) the ventilation, temperature and lighting of different parts of a ship²²;

- 429 (i) the steps to be taken to prevent or control noise, vibration and radiation in and from a ship and the emission in or from a ship of smoke, gas and dust²³;
- 430 (j) the steps to be taken to prevent, detect and deal with outbreaks of fire on a ship²⁴;
- 431 (k) the steps to be taken to prevent any collision involving a ship and in consequence of any collision involving a ship²⁵;
- 432 (l) the steps to be taken, in a case where a ship is in distress or stranded or wrecked, for the purpose of saving the ship and its machinery, equipment and cargo and the lives of persons on or from the ship, including the steps to be taken by other persons for giving assistance in such a case²⁶;
- 433 (m) the removal, by jettisoning or otherwise, of its equipment and of other things from a ship for the purpose of avoiding, removing or reducing danger to persons or property²⁷;
- 434 (n) the steps to be taken, in a case where danger of any kind occurs or is suspected on a ship, for removing or reducing the danger and for warning persons who are not on the ship of the danger or suspected danger²⁸;
- 435 (o) the making of records and the keeping of documents relating to ships and the keeping and use on a ship of information to facilitate the navigation of the ship²⁹;
- 436 (p) the keeping of registers and the issue of certificates in cases for which registration or a certificate is required by virtue of the regulations³⁰; and
- 437 (q) the furnishing of information³¹;

but the mention of specific matters in heads (a) to (q) above is not to be construed as restricting the generality of the power conferred by head (1) or head (2) above³².

The power to make regulations conferred by head (1) or head (2) above extends also to the making of regulations for the prevention of collisions between seaplanes on the surface of water and between ships and seaplanes³³.

Safety regulations:

- 438 (i) may make provision in terms of approvals given by the Secretary of State or another person and in terms of any document which the Secretary of State or another person considers relevant from time to time³⁴;
- 439 (ii) may provide for the cancellation of an approval given in pursuance of the regulations and for the alteration of the terms of such an approval³⁵; and
- 440 (iii) must provide for any approval in pursuance of the regulations to be given in writing and to specify the date on which it takes effect and the conditions, if any, on which it is given³⁶.

Safety regulations may provide³⁷ for the granting by the Secretary of State or another person, on such terms, if any, as the Secretary of State or other person may specify, of exemptions from specified provisions of the regulations for classes of cases or individual cases and for the alteration or cancellation of exemptions granted in pursuance of the regulations³⁸.

Safety regulations may provide:

- 441 (A) that in such cases as are prescribed by the regulations a ship is liable to be detained and that the statutory provisions relating to enforcing the detention of a ship³⁹ are to have effect, with such modifications, if any, as are prescribed by the regulations, in relation to the ship⁴⁰;
- 442 (B) that a contravention⁴¹ of the regulations is to be an offence punishable on conviction on indictment by imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years and a fine and on summary conviction by a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum⁴²;

- 443 (c) that any such contravention is to be an offence punishable only on summary conviction by a maximum fine of an amount not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale⁴³ or such less amount as is prescribed by the regulations⁴⁴;
- 444 (D) that, in such cases as are prescribed by the regulations, such persons as are so prescribed are each to be guilty of an offence created by virtue of head (B) or (C) above⁴⁵;
- 445 (E) that, notwithstanding anything in head (B) or (C) above, a person convicted summarily of an offence under the regulations of a kind which is stated by the regulations to correspond to an offence which is triable either summarily or on indictment under an enactment specified in the regulations which authorises or authorised a fine on summary conviction of a maximum amount exceeding the statutory maximum is to be liable to a fine not exceeding that maximum amount⁴⁶.

Safety regulations which make provision in respect of the prohibition of smoking⁴⁷ on any ship (the 'smoking provisions') may include provision⁴⁸:

- 446 (aa) for the appointment by the Secretary of State of persons to enforce the smoking provisions (whether in respect of ships generally or for any particular case or purpose), and for the removal of any person so appointed⁴⁹;
- 447 (bb) for such persons⁵⁰ to have the powers of such surveyors for the purposes of their enforcement functions⁵¹;
- 448 (cc) for any such persons to have, for the purposes of their enforcement functions, powers corresponding to those which authorised officers have under the Health Act 2006⁵²;
- 449 (dd) in relation to an offence of smoking in a place where smoking is prohibited under the smoking provisions, for purposes corresponding to those of the Health Act 2006⁵³ which provide for the giving by authorised officers of penalty notices in respect of such an offence⁵⁴.

594. Training in safety matters for skippers and seamen in United Kingdom fishing vessels.

As from a day to be appointed¹, the Secretary of State may make regulations² for securing that the skipper of and every seaman³ employed or engaged in a United Kingdom fishing vessel⁴ is trained in safety matters⁵.

The regulations may provide that, if a person goes to sea on a fishing vessel in contravention⁶ of a requirement of the regulations⁷:

- 460 (1) he commits an offence and is liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 2, or, if he is the skipper or an owner of the vessel, level 5, on the standard scale⁸; and
- 461 (2) the skipper and each owner of the vessel is, except in respect of a contravention by himself, liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale⁹.

1 The Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 127 does not have effect until the Secretary of State by order appoints a day for s 127 to come into force: see s 314(3), Sch 14 para 5(1), (2); and PARA 16 note 1. At the date at which this volume states the law, no such order had been made. As to the Secretary of State see PARA 38.

2 Regulations under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 127 may make different provision for different cases, or descriptions of case, including different provisions for different descriptions of vessel or according to the circumstances of operation of a vessel: s 127(3). At the date at which this volume states the law, no such regulations had been made under s 127 and none have effect as if so made. However, by virtue of the Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b), the Fishing Vessels (Safety Training) Regulations 1989, SI 1989/126 (as to which see AGRICULTURE AND FISHERIES vol 1(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 977) have effect as if made under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 ss 85, 86 (see PARAS 591, 592). - 470 (d) provide for any provisions of Part XI of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995¹³ relating to inquiries and investigations into marine accidents to apply, with such modifications as may be specified¹⁴, in relation to accidents involving any submersible apparatus which is not a ship as they apply to ships¹⁵;
- 471 (e) provide that specified provisions of any enactment¹⁶ are, in such circumstances as may be prescribed¹⁷, not to have effect in relation to such class or description of, or to such particular, submersible or supporting apparatus as may be prescribed¹⁸;
- 472 (f) make different provision for different classes or descriptions of submersible or supporting apparatus and for different circumstances¹⁹;

598. Exemptions from regulations.

The operation of any regulations¹ may be excluded in whole or in part in relation to any class or description of submersible² or supporting apparatus³ by regulations, or in relation to any particular apparatus by the direction of the Secretary of State⁴ given in such manner as he thinks appropriate⁵.

Any such exemption or exclusion by regulations or by directions of the Secretary of State⁶ may be made subject to the imposition of conditions specified⁷ by the regulations or directions⁸. For the purposes of the Merchant Shipping (Passenger Ship Construction: Ships of Classes III to VI(A)) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2515, passenger ships are arranged in Classes as follows (see reg 2(6)(a)(i)):

- 867 (a) Class III (Ships engaged only on voyages in the course of which they are at no time more than 70 miles by sea from their point of departure and not more than 18 miles from the coast of the United Kingdom, and which are at sea only in favourable weather and during restricted periods);
- 868 (b) Class IV (Ships engaged only on voyages in Category A, B, C or D waters);
- 869 (c) Class V (Ships engaged only on voyages in Category A, B, or C waters);
- 870 (d) Class VI (Ships engaged only on voyages with not more than 250 passengers on board, to sea, or in Category A, B, C or D waters, in all cases in favourable weather and during restricted periods, in the course of which the ships are at no time more than 15 miles, exclusive of any Category A, B, C, or D waters, from their point of departure nor more than 3 miles from land);
- 871 (e) Class VI(A) (Ships carrying not more than 50 passengers for a distance of not more than 6 miles on voyages to or from isolated communities on the islands or coast of the United Kingdom and which do not proceed for a distance of more than 3 miles from land; subject to any conditions which the Secretary of State may impose).

Classes of ships under heads (a) to (e) do not include ships engaged on international voyages (see reg 2(6)(a)(ii)). For these purposes, 'Category A, B, C or D waters' means the waters specified as Category A, B, C or D waters in Merchant Shipping Notice 1776(M); and cognate expressions are to be construed accordingly; 'restricted period' means a period falling wholly within the following limits: (i) from 1 April to 31 October (both dates inclusive); and (ii) between one hour before sunrise and one hour after sunset in the case of ships fitted with navigation lights conforming to the collision regulations and between sunrise and sunset in the case of any other ships; and 'sea' does not include any waters of Category A, B, C or D: see reg 2(6)(b). Merchant Shipping Notice 1776(M) (Categorisation of Waters: Notice to Owners, Operators and Masters) (March 2003) is published by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency and it categorises United Kingdom waters which are not regarded as 'sea' for the purposes of Merchant Shipping legislation (excepting marine pollution). 599 Provision regarding design, construction, etc of ships and their machinery and equipment

NOTE 7--SI 1996/3010 further amended: SI 2009/1210.

Halsbury's Laws of England/SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW (VOLUME 93 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-590; VOLUME 94 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 591-1254)/7. SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/ (1) SAFETY AND HEALTH ON SHIPS/(iii) Construction and Survey/B. MERCHANT SHIPPING/600. Survey and certification.

B. MERCHANT SHIPPING

600. Survey and certification.

Safety regulations¹ may make provision with respect to the design, construction, maintenance, repair, alteration, inspection, surveying and marking of ships and their machinery and equipment². Accordingly, regulations have effect as if so made³ with regard to the following:

- 493 (1) the responsibility for carrying out surveys⁴;
- 494 (2) surveys of passenger ships⁵;
- 495 (3) survey requirements for the safety equipment of cargo ships⁶;
- 496 (4) survey requirements for the radio installations of cargo ships⁷;
- 497 (5) survey requirements for the structure, machinery and equipment of cargo ships⁸;
- 498 (6) the responsibilities of the owner and master⁹;
- 499 (7) the procedure to be adopted when the ship, including its structure, machinery and equipment, is deficient¹⁰;
- 500 (8) the issue, cancellation and posting-up of certificates to United Kingdom ships¹¹;
- 501 (9) the prohibition on proceeding to sea without the appropriate documentation¹² or on proceeding on a voyage or excursion without the appropriate certificate¹³;
- 502 (10) the limit on the number of passengers on passenger ships¹⁴;
- 503 (11) penalties¹⁵;
- 504 (12) power of detention¹⁶; and
- 505 (13) arbitration¹⁷.

1 As to the meaning of 'safety regulations' see PARA 591.

2 See the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 85(3)(a); and PARA 591. As to safety rules and standards in relation to passenger ships on domestic voyages see the Merchant Shipping (Passenger Ships on Domestic Voyages) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/2687; and PARA 602. As to mandatory surveys for ro-ro ferry and high speed passenger craft see the Merchant Shipping (Mandatory Surveys for Ro-Ro Ferry and High Speed Passenger Craft) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/152; and PARA 603.

3 Ie by virtue of the Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b), the Merchant Shipping (Survey and Certification) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1210, have effect as if made under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 ss 85, 86 (see PARAS 591, 592). The Merchant Shipping (Survey and Certification) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1210, apply to United Kingdom ships wherever they may be and to other ships whilst they are in United Kingdom waters, but not to fishing vessels, high speed craft to which the Merchant Shipping (High Speed Craft) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/302 (see PARA 614 et seq) apply or pleasure vessels: Merchant Shipping (Survey and Certification) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1210, reg 2(1) (amended by SI 1996/3188); Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b). The Merchant Shipping (High Speed Craft) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/302, disapply the Merchant Shipping (Survey and Certification) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1210, to any vessel which has been examined, and in respect of which appropriate certificates have been issued, in accordance with the Code of Practice for the Safety of Large Commercial Sailing and Motor Vessels: see PARA 610. Accordingly, the Merchant Shipping (Survey and Certification) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1210, do not apply to a United Kingdom ship which is a craft capable of a maximum speed in metres per second (m/s) equal to or exceeding $3.7\sqrt{0.1667}$, where ∇ equals the volume of displacement corresponding to the design waterline (m^3), and which has been surveyed, certified and maintained in accordance with and complies with the requirements of the Merchant Shipping (High Speed Craft) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/302: Merchant Shipping (Survey and Certification) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1210, reg 2(3) (added by SI 2004/302). The Secretary of State may grant exemptions from all or any of the provisions of the Merchant Shipping (Survey and Certification) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1210 (as may be specified in the exemption) on such terms (if any) as he may so specify and may, subject to giving reasonable notice, alter or cancel any such exemption: reg 2(2). As to the Secretary of State see PARA 38. For these purposes, 'pleasure vessel' means:

872 (1) any vessel which at the time it is being used is, in the case of a vessel wholly owned by an individual or individuals, used only for the sport or pleasure of the owner or the immediate family or friends of the owner or, in the case of a vessel owned by a body corporate, one on which the persons are employees or officers of the body corporate, or their immediate family or friends; and is on a voyage or excursion which is one for which the owner does not receive money for or in connection with operating the vessel or carrying any person, other than as a contribution to the direct expenses of the operation of the vessel incurred during the voyage or excursion; or

873 (2) any vessel wholly owned by or on behalf of a members' club formed for the purpose of sport or pleasure which, at the time it is being used, is used only for the sport or pleasure of members of the club or their immediate family; and for the use of which any charges levied are paid into club funds and applied for the general use of the club; and

874 (3) in the case of any vessel referred to in head (1) or head (2) no other payments are made by or on behalf of the users of the vessel, other than by the owner; and, for these purposes, 'immediate family' means, in relation to an individual, the spouse or civil partner of the individual, and a relative of the individual or the relative's spouse or civil partner; and 'relative' means brother, sister, ancestor or lineal descendant: reg 1(2) (definition amended by SI 2005/2114).

Halsbury's Laws of England/SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW (VOLUME 93 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-590; VOLUME 94 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 591-1254)/7. SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/ (1) SAFETY AND HEALTH ON SHIPS/(iii) Construction and Survey/B. MERCHANT SHIPPING/602. Provision made in relation to passenger ships on domestic voyages.

602. Provision made in relation to passenger ships on domestic voyages.

Safety regulations¹ may make provision with respect to the design, construction, maintenance, repair, alteration, inspection, surveying and marking of ships and their machinery and equipment². Accordingly, provision has been made³ in relation to passenger ships engaged on domestic voyages⁴ in respect of:

- 510 (1) safety requirements⁵;
- 511 (2) the use of alternative construction processes, equipment and machinery⁶;
- 512 (3) stability requirements for ro-ro passenger ships⁷;
- 513 (4) safety requirements for persons with reduced mobility⁸;
- 514 (5) the Secretary of State's power to exempt classes of ships or individual ships from specified provisions of the regulations⁹;
- 515 (6) penalties for any contravention of the regulations¹⁰, and the power to detain a ship that does not comply with the requirements of the regulations¹¹.

1 As to the meaning of 'safety regulations' see PARA 591.

2 See the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 85(3)(a); and PARA 591.

3 See the Merchant Shipping (Passenger Ships on Domestic Voyages) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/2687, made in the exercise of powers conferred by the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 ss 85, 86 (see PARAS 591, 592). As to the application of the Merchant Shipping (Passenger Ships on Domestic Voyages) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/2687, see reg 4 (amended by SI 2004/302).

The Merchant Shipping (Passenger Ships on Domestic Voyages) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/2687, implement EC Council Directive 98/18 of 17 March 1998 (OJ L144, 15.05.1998, p 1) on Safety Rules and Standards for Passenger Ships (amended by EC Commission Directive 2002/25 of 5 March 2002 (OJ L98, 15.04.2002, p 1); EC Directive 2002/84 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 5 November 2002 (OJ L324, 29.11.2002, p 53); EC Directive 2003/24 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 14 April 2003 (OJ L123, 17.05.2003, p 18); and EC Commission Directive 2003/75 of 29 July 2003 (OJ L190, 30.07.2003, p 6)). As to mandatory surveys for ro-ro ferry and high speed passenger craft see the Merchant Shipping (Mandatory Surveys for Ro-Ro Ferry and High Speed Passenger Craft) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/152; and PARA 603.

4 For the purposes of the Merchant Shipping (Passenger Ships on Domestic Voyages) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/2687, passenger ships engaged on domestic voyages are arranged in Classes as follows (see reg 3(1)):

- 875 (1) Class A (ships engaged solely on domestic voyages other than ships of Class B, Class C and Class D);
- 876 (2) Class B (ships engaged solely on domestic voyages in the course of which they are at no time more than 20 miles from the line of the coast where shipwrecked persons can land, corresponding to the medium tide height);
- 877 (3) Class C (ships engaged solely on domestic voyages in sea areas where the probability of significant wave heights exceeding 2.5 metres is less than 10% over a one year period for all year round operation, or over a specific restricted period of the year for operation exclusively in such period, in the course of which they are at no time more than 15 miles from a place of refuge, nor more than 5 miles from the line of the coast where shipwrecked persons can land, corresponding to the medium tide height);
- 878 (4) Class D (ships engaged solely on domestic voyages in sea areas where the probability of significant wave heights exceeding 1.5 metres is less than 10% over a one year period for all year round operation, or over a specific restricted period of the year for operation exclusively in such period, in the course of which they are at no time more than 6 miles from a place of refuge, nor more than 3 miles from the line of the coast, where shipwrecked persons can land, corresponding to the medium tide height).

For the purposes of this classification of vessels, the Secretary of State must establish, and update when necessary, a list of sea areas under United Kingdom jurisdiction which includes the limits of zones for all year round operation and, where appropriate, for restricted periodical operation, and publish that list in its updated version in a Merchant Shipping Notice and in a public database available on the Internet site of the Maritime and Coastguard Agency: reg 3(2) (substituted by SI 2004/2883). Accordingly, for the purposes of rules or regulations made under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995, 'category A, B, C or D waters' respectively means the waters specified as Category A, B, C or D waters in Merchant Shipping Notice 1776(M): see the Merchant Shipping (Categorisation of Waters) Regulations 1992, SI 1992/2356, reg 3; Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b). Merchant Shipping Notice 1776(M) (Categorisation of Waters: Notice to Owners, Operators and Masters) (March 2003) is published by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency and it categorises United Kingdom waters which are not regarded as 'sea' for the purposes of Merchant Shipping legislation (excepting marine pollution). As to the Maritime and Coastguard Agency see PARA 56.

In relation to passenger ships of Class A, B, C or D of 24 metres or over in length engaged on domestic voyages, the following Regulations cease to apply (see the Merchant Shipping (Passenger Ships on Domestic Voyages) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/2687, reg 5 (amended by SI 2002/1473)):

- 879 (a) the Merchant Shipping (Passenger Ship Construction: Ships of Classes I, II and II(A)) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2514 (see PARAS 599, 645);
- 880 (b) the Merchant Shipping (Passenger Ship Construction: Ships of Classes III to VI(A)) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2515 (see PARAS 599, 645);
- 881 (c) the Merchant Shipping (Life-Saving Appliances For Ships Other Than Ships Of Classes III To VI(A)) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/2721 (see PARA 647);
- 882 (d) the Merchant Shipping (Life-Saving Appliances For Passenger Ships Of Classes III To VI(A)) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/2723 (see PARA 647);
- 883 (e) the Merchant Shipping (Fire Protection: Small Ships) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/1011 (see PARA 640);

- 885 (g) the Merchant Shipping (Radio Installations) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2070 (see PARA 643);
- 886 (h) the Merchant Shipping (Safety of Navigation) Regulations 2002, SI 2002/1473 (see PARA 641).

C. FISHING VESSELS

604. Fishing vessel construction rules.

The Secretary of State¹ may make rules ('fishing vessel construction rules') prescribing requirements for the hull, equipment and machinery of United Kingdom fishing vessels² of any description (including any description framed by reference to the areas in which the vessels operate or the dates on which they were first registered³ in the United Kingdom or on which their construction was begun)⁴.

The Secretary of State may exempt any fishing vessel or description of fishing vessel from any requirement of the fishing vessel construction rules⁵. He may do so generally or for a specified time or with respect to a specified voyage or to voyages in a specified area, and may do so subject to any specified conditions⁶.

A surveyor of ships⁷ may inspect any fishing vessel for the purpose of seeing that it complies with the fishing vessel construction rules⁸.

If the fishing vessel construction rules are contravened⁹ with respect to any vessel (or if a vessel is exempted¹⁰ from any requirement subject to a condition and the condition is not complied with) the owner or master¹¹ of the vessel commits an offence¹². However, a breach of the rules cannot, of itself, form the basis of a civil claim by a person who has suffered damage as a result of such a breach¹³.

SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/ (1) SAFETY AND HEALTH ON SHIPS/(iii) Construction and Survey/C. FISHING VESSELS/606. Fishing vessel certificates confirming compliance with rules.

606. Fishing vessel certificates confirming compliance with rules.

If the Secretary of State¹ or any person authorised by him for the purpose is satisfied, on receipt of a declaration of survey in respect of a fishing vessel² surveyed under the fishing vessel survey rules³, that the vessel complies with such of the requirements of the fishing vessel construction and equipment provisions⁴ as are or will be applicable to the vessel, the Secretary of State or authorised person must, on the application of the owner, issue a certificate (a 'fishing vessel certificate') showing that the vessel complies with those requirements⁵.

Fishing vessel survey rules may require, in the case of such fishing vessel certificate as may be specified in the rules, that the Secretary of State or person authorised to issue it must not issue the certificate unless satisfied that the vessel in respect of which it is to be issued is provided with the lights, shapes and means of making fog signals required by safety regulations⁶ for the prevention of collisions⁷.

A fishing vessel certificate must be in such form as may be prescribed by the fishing vessel survey rules⁸; and those rules may make provision for the duration, extension or cancellation of any such certificate and for the endorsement on it of information relating to the inspection, in accordance with the rules, of the vessel to which it relates and of any extension of the period for which the certificate was issued⁹.

The Secretary of State may require a fishing vessel certificate which has expired or been cancelled, to be delivered up as he directs¹⁰; and, if the owner or skipper of the fishing vessel fails without reasonable excuse to comply with such a requirement, he commits an offence¹¹.

The owner or skipper of a fishing vessel to whom a fishing vessel certificate is issued must forthwith, on the receipt of the certificate by him (or his agent), cause a copy of it to be put up in some conspicuous place on board the vessel, so as to be legible to all persons on board, and to be kept so put up and legible while the certificate remains in force and the vessel is in use¹². If the owner or skipper of a fishing vessel fails without reasonable excuse to comply with that requirement, he commits an offence¹³.

If any person intentionally makes, or assists in making, or procures to be made, a false or fraudulent fishing vessel certificate, he commits an offence¹⁴.

A fishing vessel certificate is admissible in evidence¹⁵.

608. Requirement to give notice of alterations when a fishing vessel certificate is in force.

Where a fishing vessel certificate¹ is in force in respect of a fishing vessel² and:

- 523 (1) the certificate shows compliance with requirements of the fishing vessel construction rules³ and an alteration⁴ is made in the vessel's hull, equipment or machinery which affects the efficiency thereof or the seaworthiness of the vessel⁵; or
- 524 (2) the certificate shows compliance with requirements of the fishing vessel equipment provisions⁶ and an alteration is made affecting the efficiency or completeness of the appliances or equipment which the vessel is required to carry by the fishing vessel equipment provisions⁷, the owner or skipper must, as soon as possible after the alteration is made, give written notice containing full particulars of it to the Secretary of State⁸ or, if the certificate was issued by another person, to that person⁹.

If the notice so required is not given as so required, the owner or skipper commits an offence¹⁰.

D. VESSELS IN COMMERCIAL USE FOR SPORT OR PLEASURE

609. Vessels to which the provisions regulating commercial use for sport or pleasure apply.

The Merchant Shipping (Vessels in Commercial Use for Sport or Pleasure) Regulations 1998¹ apply to:

- 525 (1) any vessel used for sport or pleasure which is not a pleasure vessel²;
- 526 (2) United Kingdom vessels wherever they may be³; and
- 527 (3) other vessels operating from United Kingdom ports whilst in United Kingdom waters⁴.

The regulations do not apply to vessels carrying more than 12 passengers⁵.

For these purposes, 'pleasure vessel' means:

- 528 (a) any vessel which at the time it is being used is: (i) (in the case of a vessel wholly owned by an individual or individuals) used only for the sport or pleasure of the owner or the immediate family⁶ or friends of the owner, or (in the case of a vessel owned by a body corporate) used only for sport or pleasure and where the persons on board the vessel are employees or officers of the body corporate, or their immediate family or friends⁷; and (ii) on a voyage or excursion which is one for which the owner does not receive money for or in connection with operating the vessel or carrying any person, other than as a contribution to the direct expenses of the operation of the vessel incurred during the voyage or excursion⁸; or
- 529 (b) any vessel wholly owned by or on behalf of a members' club formed for the purpose of sport or pleasure which, at the time it is being used, is used only for the sport or pleasure of members of that club or their immediate family, and for the use of which any charges levied are paid into club funds and applied for the general use of the club⁹; and
- 530 (c) in the case of any vessel referred to in head (a) or head (b) above, no other payments are made by or on behalf of users of the vessel, other than by the owner¹⁰.

6 For the purposes of this definition, 'immediate family' means, in relation to an individual, the spouse or civil partner of the individual, and a relative of the individual or the individual's spouse or civil partner, where 'relative' means brother, sister, ancestor or lineal descendant: Merchant Shipping (Vessels in Commercial Use for Sport or Pleasure) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2771, reg 2(1) (definition amended by SI 2005/2114).

Large commercial vessels to comply with the applicable safety code of practice.

610. Large commercial vessels to comply with the applicable safety code of practice.

Large commercial vessels¹ must comply with the provisions of the Code of Practice for the Safety of Large Commercial Sailing and Motor Vessels². Certain statutory instruments³ do not apply to a vessel which has been examined, and in respect of which appropriate certificates have been issued, in accordance with the Code of Practice⁴. Where a vessel has been so examined and appropriate certificates issued, the vessel must not proceed or attempt to proceed to sea⁵ unless: (1) the certificates are currently in force⁶; and (2) the vessel complies with the applicable requirements of the Code of Practice (including any requirements as to operation, manning and maintenance)⁷.

1 As to the vessels generally to which the Merchant Shipping (Vessels in Commercial Use for Sport or Pleasure) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2771, apply see PARA 609. The Merchant Shipping (Vessels in Commercial Use for Sport or Pleasure) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2771, reg 4 applies only to large vessels: reg 4(1)(a). For these purposes, 'large vessel' means a vessel which is not a small vessel, and 'small vessel' means a vessel of less than 24 metres in load line length or (in the case of a vessel the keel of which was laid or which was at a similar stage of construction before 21 July 1968) less than 150 tons: reg 2(1). For the purposes of this definition, 'load line length' means the greater of the following distances (measured at and along the waterline): (1) the distance between the foreside of the stem and the axis of the rudder stock; or (2) a distance measured from the foreside of the stem, being 96% of the distance between that point and the aft side of the stern: see reg 2(1). The waterline referred to in this definition must be at 85% of the least moulded depth of the vessel and, in the case of a vessel having a rake of keel, the waterline must be parallel to the designed waterline: see reg 2(1). For these purposes, 'similar stage of construction' means a stage at which: (a) construction identifiable with a specific vessel begins; and (b) assembly of that vessel, comprising at least 1% of the estimated mass of all structural material has commenced; and 'tons' means gross tons, measured in accordance with the regulations for measuring tonnage which were in force on 20 July 1968: see reg 2(1). As to the tonnage regulations in force currently see PARA 248 et seq.

2 Merchant Shipping (Vessels in Commercial Use for Sport or Pleasure) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2771, reg 4(1)(b), (2). Accordingly, any provision of the Code of Practice expressed in the conditional (ie 'should') is a requirement: reg 4(2). References to Codes of Practice in the Merchant Shipping (Vessels in Commercial Use for Sport or Pleasure) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2771, are references to the Codes of those names published (or treated as published) by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency, and include any document amending the same which the Secretary of State considers relevant from time to time: reg 2(2). 'Maritime and Coastguard Agency' means the Maritime and Coastguard Agency ('MCA'), an executive agency of the Department for Transport, which is responsible throughout the United Kingdom for implementing HM government's maritime safety policy: see reg 2(1). As to the Secretary of State see PARA 38; and as to the Maritime and Coastguard Agency generally see PARA 56. As to the penalties that apply to the contravention of any of the requirements set out in the Merchant Shipping (Vessels in Commercial Use for Sport or Pleasure) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2771, see PARA 1166.

611. Small commercial vessels to comply with the applicable safety codes of practice.

Certain statutory instruments¹ do not apply to a small commercial vessel² which has been examined, and in respect of which a certificate has been issued, in accordance with the applicable Code of Practice³, or to a vessel which is operating under the phase-in arrangements of the Code of Practice⁴.

Where a vessel has been so examined and a small commercial vessel certificate issued, the vessel must not proceed or attempt to proceed to sea⁵ unless:

- 531 (1) the certificate is currently in force⁶;
- 532 (2) the vessel complies with the requirements of the relevant Code of Practice (including any requirements as to operation, manning and maintenance)⁷; and
- 533 (3) the certificate is displayed in some conspicuous place on board or, if this is not reasonably practicable, is available for inspection on board⁸.

Where a vessel is operating under the phase-in arrangements of a Code of Practice, it must not proceed or attempt to proceed to sea unless it meets the requirements for phase-in which are specified in the Code of Practice⁹.

1 le the Merchant Shipping (High Speed Craft) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/302 (see PARA 615 et seq): see reg 3(1).

2 For these purposes, 'high speed craft' means a craft capable of a maximum speed in metres per second (m/s) equal to or exceeding $3.7\sqrt{0.1667V}$, where V equals the volume of displacement corresponding to the design waterline (m^3), excluding craft the hull of which is supported clear above the water surface in non displacement mode by aerodynamic forces generated by ground effect; and 'craft' means ships and hovercraft: Merchant Shipping (High Speed Craft) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/302, reg 2(1). The Merchant Shipping (High Speed Craft) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/302, apply to a high speed craft which is within the description set out in the Merchant Shipping (Passenger Ships on Domestic Voyages) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/2687, reg 4(3) (as to which see PARA 602), subject to the provisions of those regulations: Merchant Shipping (High Speed Craft) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/302, reg 3(3).

'Merchant Shipping Notice' means a notice described as such and issued by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency (an executive agency of the Department for Transport), and any reference to a particular Merchant Shipping Notice includes reference to any such document amending or replacing that Notice which is considered by the Secretary of State to be relevant from time to time: see reg 2(1). Merchant Shipping Notice 1776(M) (Categorisation of Waters: Notice to Owners, Operators and Masters) (March 2003) is published by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency and it categorises United Kingdom waters which are not regarded as 'sea' for the purposes of Merchant Shipping legislation (excepting marine pollution). 908 (2) any craft which is wholly owned by or on behalf of a members' club formed for the purpose of sport or pleasure which, at the time it is being used, is used only for the sport or pleasure of members of that club or their immediate family; and for the use of which any charges levied are paid into club funds and applied for the general use of the club, and no payments other than those mentioned are made by or on behalf of users of the craft, other than by the owner: reg 2(1). For the purposes of this definition, 'immediate family' means in relation to an individual, the spouse or civil partner of the individual, and a brother, sister, ancestor or lineal descendant of that individual or that individual's spouse or civil partner: see reg 2(1) (amended by SI 2005/2114). In complying with the High Speed Craft Codes¹:

- 547 (1) a high speed craft² used for public transport and engaged on a voyage³, in whole or in part in sea areas classified in accordance with Merchant Shipping Notice 1747(M)⁴, which begins and ends in a port in the United Kingdom⁵; and the keel of which was laid or which was at a similar stage of construction on or after 1 October 2004, must, where practicable, be constructed⁹ and equipped, and display signs, based on the guidelines in Annex III to the EC Council Directive of 17 March 1998 on safety rules and standards for passenger ships¹⁰.

However, in complying with the High Speed Craft Codes, a craft which falls within head (1) or head (2) above, the keel of which was laid or which was at a similar stage of construction before 1 October 2004 must, if undergoing modification, be constructed and equipped as respects that modification, and display signs as respects that modification, based on the guidelines in Annex III to the EC Council Directive of 17 March 1998 on safety rules and standards for passenger ships, only so far as is reasonable and practicable in economic terms¹¹.

The Secretary of State¹² must draw up a national action plan on how the guidelines in Annex III to the EC Council Directive of 17 March 1998 on safety rules and standards for passenger ships are to be applied to a high speed craft, the keel of which was laid or which was at a similar stage of construction before 1 October 2004 and which is used for public transport, as respects any modification of that craft¹³.

UPDATE

618 Safety requirements for persons with reduced mobility

NOTE 7--Directive 98/18 replaced: European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2009/45 (OJ L163, 25.6.2009, p 1).

Halsbury's Laws of England/SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW (VOLUME 93 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-590; VOLUME 94 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 591-1254)/7. SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/ (1) SAFETY AND HEALTH ON SHIPS/(iii) Construction and Survey/E. HIGH SPEED CRAFT/619. Risk assessment with reference to wash.

619. Risk assessment with reference to wash.

A passage plan prepared in accordance with the High Speed Craft Code 1994¹ or the High Speed Craft Code 2000² (as applicable) must include a full risk assessment of the passage plan with respect to wash³. The risk assessment so required must: (1) be carried out in accordance with generally recognised procedures for risk assessment⁴; (2) identify any likely areas of potentially hazardous wash, taking into account possible operating conditions and the classification of wash as sub-critical, critical or super-critical⁵, and identify the operating restrictions necessary to reduce that potentially hazardous wash⁶; and (3) be documented in the operating manual required by the High Speed Craft Code 1994 or the High Speed Craft Code 2000 (as applicable)⁷.

1 As to the meaning of 'High Speed Craft Code 1994' see PARA 616 note 3. Having been made mandatory under the Merchant Shipping (High Speed Craft) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/302, reg 6 (see PARA 617), the language of the High Speed Craft Code 1994 is to be construed accordingly, and in particular 'should' must be construed as 'shall': see reg 2(2); and PARA 617 note 3.

2 As to the meaning of 'High Speed Craft Code 2000' see PARA 616 note 4. Having been made mandatory under the Merchant Shipping (High Speed Craft) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/302, reg 6 (see PARA 617), the language of the High Speed Craft Code 2000 is to be construed accordingly, and in particular 'should' must be construed as 'shall': see reg 2(2); and PARA 617 note 6.

3 Merchant Shipping (High Speed Craft) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/302, reg 7(1). For these purposes, 'wash' means the sweep of waves left behind by a moving craft, classified as sub-critical, critical or supercritical in terms of the depth Froude number:

$$F_{nh} = V_s / \text{radic},$$ where F_{nh} describes the ratio of the vessel's speed to the wave propagation velocity in shallow water, V_s is the ship speed in metres per second, g is the acceleration due to gravity and h is the water depth in metres: see reg 2(1). For the purposes of classification, 'sub-critical' means an F_{nh} value of less than 0.85, 'critical' means an F_{nh} value between 0.85 and 1.15, and 'supercritical' means an F_{nh} value greater than 1.15: see reg 2(1). As to offences under the Merchant Shipping (High Speed Craft) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/302, see PARA 1167.

SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/ (1) SAFETY AND HEALTH ON SHIPS/(iii) Construction and Survey/E. HIGH SPEED CRAFT/620. Passenger craft to operate in accordance with permit.

620. Passenger craft to operate in accordance with permit.

A Permit to Operate which is issued as respects a passenger craft¹ by the Secretary of State² in accordance with the High Speed Craft Code 1994³ or the High Speed Craft Code 2000⁴ must state the maximum number of passengers which that craft is allowed to carry on board⁵. A Permit to Operate issued in this way⁶ must set out, and be subject to, the operating restrictions identified in accordance with the risk assessment with reference to wash⁷.

The owner⁸ and master of a passenger craft must ensure that the craft does not carry more than the maximum number of passengers as stated in the craft's Permit to Operate⁹.

621. Behaviour of persons on passenger craft.

A person on board a high speed passenger craft¹ who is drunk and disorderly, and if he has paid a fare has had that fare returned or tendered to him, must, if so requested by the master or crew, leave the ship at any place in the United Kingdom² at which he can conveniently do so³.

A person who is on board a high speed passenger craft must not, after being warned by the master or crew, molest or continue to molest any passenger⁴.

A person who is on board a high speed passenger craft must not intentionally do or cause to be done anything in such a manner as to: (1) obstruct or damage any part of the machinery or equipment of that craft⁵; or (2) obstruct, impede or molest the master or crew, or any of them, in the navigation or management of the craft, or otherwise in the execution of their duty on or about the craft⁶.

622. Offences and power to detain.

Any contravention of the Merchant Shipping (High Speed Craft) Regulations 2004¹ in respect of a high speed craft² is an offence by both the owner³ and the master of that craft⁴. In any case where a high speed craft does not so comply⁵, the craft is liable to be detained⁶.

1 In any contravention of the Merchant Shipping (High Speed Craft) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/302 (see PARA 614 et seq), other than reg 9 (as to which see PARA 621): see reg 10(1); and PARA 1167.

The Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 284(1)-(6), (8) (enforcing detention of ships) (see PARA 1253) has effect in relation to the craft, subject to the modification that, for the words 'this Act' wherever they appear, there are to be substituted 'the Merchant Shipping (High Speed Craft) Regulations 2004', and for the word 'ship' there were substituted 'high speed craft': see reg 11.

(iv) Health and Safety

A. IN GENERAL

623. Health and safety: general duties.

Regulations¹ have been made in order to give effect as respects shipping activities in the United Kingdom² to various EC Council Directives relating to the safety and health of workers at work³. Accordingly, it is the duty of the employer⁴ of workers aboard a United Kingdom ship⁵ to ensure the health and safety of workers and other persons so far as is reasonably practicable, having regard to the following principles⁶:

- 549 (1) the avoidance of risks, which among other things include the combating of risks at source and the replacement of dangerous practices, substances or equipment by non-dangerous or less dangerous practices, substances or equipment⁷;
- 550 (2) the evaluation of unavoidable risks and the taking of action to reduce them⁸;
- 551 (3) the adoption of work patterns and procedures which take account of the capacity of the individual, especially in respect of the design of the workplace and the choice of work equipment, with a view in particular to alleviating monotonous work and to reducing any consequent adverse effect on workers' health and safety⁹;
- 552 (4) the adaptation of procedures to take account of new technology and other changes in working practices, equipment, the working environment and any other factors which may affect health and safety¹⁰;
- 553 (5) the adoption of a coherent approach to management of the vessel or undertaking, taking account of health and safety at every level of the organisation¹¹;
- 554 (6) giving collective protective measures priority over individual protective measures¹²;
- 555 (7) the provision of appropriate and relevant information and instruction for workers¹³.

The matters to which the duty extends include in particular¹⁴:

- 556 (a) provision and maintenance of plant, machinery and equipment and systems of work that are, so far as is reasonably practicable, safe and without risk to health¹⁵;
- 557 (b) arrangements for ensuring, so far as is reasonably practicable, safety and absence of risk to health in connection with the risk to health in connection with the use, handling, storage and transport of articles and substances¹⁶;
- 558 (c) such arrangements as are appropriate, having regard to the nature of, and the substances used in, the activities and size of the operation, for the effective planning, organisation, control, monitoring and review of preventative and protective measures¹⁷;

- 559 (d) provision of such information, instruction, training and supervision as is necessary to ensure the health and safety of workers and of other persons aboard ship who may be affected by their acts or omissions¹⁸;
- 560 (e) maintenance of all places of work within the ship in a condition which is, so far as is reasonably practicable, safe and without risk to health¹⁹;
- 561 (f) arrangements to ensure, so far as is reasonably practicable, that no person has access to any area of the ship to which it is necessary to restrict access on grounds of health and safety unless the individual concerned has received adequate and appropriate health and safety instruction²⁰;
- 562 (g) provision and maintenance of an environment for persons aboard ship that is, so far as is reasonably practicable, safe and without risk to health²¹;
- 563 (h) collaboration with any other persons upon whom a duty is imposed²² or who have control of a matter to which a regulation relates to protect, so far as is reasonably practicable, the health and safety of all authorised persons aboard the ship or engaged in loading or unloading activities in relation to that ship²³.

A written statement must be prepared and, as often as may be appropriate, revised, of the employer's general policy with respect to health and safety and the organisation and arrangements for the time being in force for carrying out that policy, and this and any revisions must be brought to the notice of the workers²⁴.

A suitable and sufficient assessment must be made of the risks of the health and safety of workers arising in the course of their activities or duties, for the purpose of identifying groups of workers at particular risk in the performance of their duties and the measures to be taken to comply with the employer's duties²⁵; and any significant findings of the assessment and any revision of it must be brought to the notice of workers²⁶.

Further provision is made in relation to:

- 564 (i) workers who include women with potential for child-bearing where the work is of a kind which could involve risk²⁷, by reason of her condition, to the health and safety of a new or expectant mother²⁸, or to that of her baby, from any process or working conditions, or physical, biological or chemical agents²⁹;
- 565 (ii) the provision to workers of such health surveillance as is appropriate having regard to the risks to their health and safety which are identified by the risk assessment³⁰;
- 566 (iii) the need, in entrusting tasks to workers, to take account of their capabilities as regards health and safety and to provide adequate and appropriate health and safety training and instruction where required³¹;
- 567 (iv) special responsibilities for health and safety to be assigned (including the appointment of safety officers) and for consultation with workers to be effected on all matters relating to their health and safety³²; and
- 568 (v) the general duties of workers in relation to health and safety³³.

No charge in respect of anything done or provided in pursuance of any of the above requirements may be levied or permitted to be levied on any worker³⁴.

No person may intentionally or recklessly interfere with or misuse anything provided in the interests of health and safety aboard a United Kingdom ship³⁵.

Contravention of the above requirements is an offence³⁶; and the ship may be detained until the safety of all workers and other persons employed is secured if, after inspection, an inspector is satisfied that there has been a failure to comply, in relation to that ship, with the above requirements; but the inspector must not, in the exercise of such powers, detain or delay the ship unreasonably³⁷. An inspector has similar powers in relation to a ship which is not a United Kingdom ship when it is in a United Kingdom port³⁸.

These general duties in relation to health and safety are supplemented by requirements which relate to the provision of safety and/or health signs at work³⁹.

It is the duty of the employer of workers aboard a United Kingdom ship, so far as is reasonably practicable, also to take appropriate measures or provide means (including mechanical equipment) to avoid the need for manual handling of loads which involve a risk of workers being injured⁴⁰.

1 As to safety regulations generally see PARA 591. See also note 3.

2 As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 17 note 3.

3 The regulations so made are the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Health and Safety at Work) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2962, and the EC Council Directives to which they give effect, as mentioned in the text, are: EC Council Directive 89/391 of 12 June 1989 (OJ L183, 29.06.1989, p 1) on the introduction of measures to encourage improvements in the safety and health of workers at work (amended by EC Regulation 1882/2003 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 29 September 2003 (OJ L284, 31.10.2003, p 1); and EC Directive 2007/30 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 20 June 2007 (OJ L165, 27.06.2007, p 21)); EC Council Directive 91/383 of 25 June 1991 (OJ L206, 29.07.1991, p 19) supplementing the measures to encourage improvements in the safety and health at work of workers with a fixed-duration employment relationship or a temporary employment relationship (amended by EC Directive 2007/30 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 20 June 2007 (OJ L165, 27.06.2007, p 21)); and EC Council Directive 92/85 (OJ L348, 28.11.1992, p 1) on the introduction of measures to encourage improvements in the safety and health at work of pregnant workers and workers who have recently given birth or are breastfeeding. The Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Health and Safety at Work) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2962, are made under the powers contained in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 ss 85, 86 (see PARAS 591, 592) except in respect of their application to government ships (see the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Health and Safety at Work) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2962, reg 2(2); and note 5) and in respect of the provision of benefits to new or expectant mothers contained in reg 8 (see head (i) in the text) and reg 9 (see note 29), where the power is provided by the European Communities Act 1972 s 2(2).

4 It is the duty of every employer, and any other person upon whom a duty is imposed by the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Health and Safety at Work) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2962, to comply with the provisions of those regulations; and where such a person does not have control of the matter to which the regulation relates because he does not have responsibility for the operation of the ship, then any duty imposed by that regulation also extends to any person who has control of that matter: see reg 4 (amended by SI 1998/2411). As to workers on board a United Kingdom ship not employed by the owner of the ship (or any other organisation or person such as the manager, or bareboat charterer, who has assumed the responsibility for operation of the ship from the owner) see the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Health and Safety at Work) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2962, regs 2(2), 13. A shipmaster is not excluded from the employer's general duty of care to his employee: MacIver v J & A Gardner Ltd 2001 SLT 585, OH.

5 For these purposes, 'United Kingdom ship' means a ship which is a United Kingdom ship within the meaning of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 85(2) (see PARA 591 note 4), is a government ship within the meaning of s 308(4) (see PARA 20 note 3), or is a hovercraft registered under the Hovercraft Act 1968 (see PARA 390 et seq): Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Health and Safety at Work) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2962, reg 2(2). The Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Health and Safety at Work) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2962, apply to all activities of workers on United Kingdom ships except when the activity of a worker is on a public service vessel or a vessel engaged in search and rescue, and when characteristics of that activity inevitably conflict with a provision of the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Health and Safety at Work) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2962; and in such a case there is a duty on the employer so far as is reasonably practicable to ensure the health and safety of the worker when performing that activity: see reg 3(1). However, reg 28 (see the text and note 38), reg 29 (see note 37) and reg 30 (see note 37) apply to ships other than United Kingdom ships which are in United Kingdom waters: see reg 3(2). For these purposes, 'health and safety' includes the occupational health and safety of persons while on board the ship and while boarding or leaving the ship: reg 2(2).

- 14 Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Health and Safety at Work) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2962, reg 5(2) (amended by SI 1998/2411). This provision is expressed to be without prejudice to the generality of the duty under the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Health and Safety at Work) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2962, reg 5(1) (see the text and notes 4-13): see reg 5(2) (as so amended).

- 24 Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Health and Safety at Work) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2962, reg 6(1). However, the written statement mentioned in reg 6(1) does not apply where five or fewer workers in aggregate are employed by the same employer, or associated employers, in a United Kingdom ship: see reg 6(2).
- 25 Ie under the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Health and Safety at Work) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2962: see reg 7(1).
- 26 Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Health and Safety at Work) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2962, reg 7(1). As to the risk assessment see further reg 7(2)-(6). As to safety signs which must be provided where a risk assessment made under reg 7(1) indicates that risks cannot be avoided or adequately controlled in other ways see note 39.

Although working in a war zone involved risks which could not all be guarded against by the exercise of reasonable care and skill, the owners of vessels which are operating in a war zone owe a qualified duty of care to members of the crew with regard to their safety; whatever the type of vessel, that duty requires the owners to provide written instructions as to specific types of risk to which the vessel is likely to be exposed and to give appropriate instruction and information as to how such risk might be reduced or eliminated: Tarrant v Ramage, The Salvia [1998] 1 Lloyd's Rep 185, (1997) Times, 31 July.

27 For these purposes, references to 'risk' in relation to risk from any infectious or contagious disease are references to a level of risk at work which is in addition to the level to which a new or expectant mother may be expected to be exposed outside the workplace: Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Health and Safety at Work) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2962, reg 8(4).

28 For these purposes, 'new or expectant mother' means a worker who is either pregnant, or has given birth within the previous six months, or is breast-feeding: Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Health and Safety at Work) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2962, reg 2(2).

29 See the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Health and Safety at Work) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2962, reg 8. As to circumstances where a new or expectant mother works at night see reg 9; and as to the notification that must be given to the employer or to the company before such action is required see reg 10.

30 See the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Health and Safety at Work) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2962, reg 11. The text refers to the risk assessment made under reg 7(1) (see the text and notes 25-26): see reg 11.

36 See the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Health and Safety at Work) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2962, reg 24. Provision is made also for corporate offences (see reg 25 (amended by SI 1998/2411)); and for the burden of showing that compliance with a duty in the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Health and Safety at Work) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2962, was not reasonably practicable to be on the defendant (see reg 26). See also PARA 1172.

37 See the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Health and Safety at Work) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2962, reg 27. Those provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 which deal with the enforcement of detention (ie s 284 (see PARA 1253)), with references of detention notices to arbitration (ie s 96 (see PARA 1205)) and with compensation in relation to an invalid detention (ie s 97 (see PARA 1206)), are applied with modifications for these purposes: see the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Health and Safety at Work) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2962, regs 29, 30.

38 See the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Health and Safety at Work) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2962, reg 28. See note 37.

39 See the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Safety Signs and Signals) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3444, which give effect to EC Council Directive 92/58 of 24 June 1992 (OJ L245, 26.08.1992, p 23) on the minimum requirements for the provision of safety and/or health signs at work (amended by EC Directive 2007/30 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 20 June 2007 (OJ L165, 27.06.2007, p 21)). The Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Safety Signs and Signals) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3444, are made under the powers contained in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 ss 85, 86 (see PARAS 591, 592) except in respect of their application to government ships (see the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Safety Signs and Signals) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3444, reg 2(1)), where the power is provided by the European Communities Act 1972 s 2(2).

The circumstances in which the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Safety Signs and Signals) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3444, apply are set out in terms which are similar to those governing the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Health and Safety at Work) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2962 (see note 5): see the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Safety Signs and Signals) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3444, reg 3. However, exclusions apply to signs used in relation to the supply of dangerous substances or equipment, for the transport of dangerous goods and for the regulation of transport: see reg 3. The persons on whom duties are imposed are set out in reg 4 (again in terms similar to the persons on whom general duties relating to health are imposed: see note 4). Safety signs must be provided where a risk assessment made under the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Health and Safety at Work) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2962, reg 7(1) (see the text and notes 25-26) indicates that risks cannot be avoided or adequately controlled in other ways: see the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Safety Signs and Signals) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3444, reg 5, Schedule. The employer must ensure that comprehensible and relevant information on the measures to be taken in connection with safety signs is provided to each worker; and that each worker receives suitable and sufficient instruction and training in the meaning of safety signs and the measures to be taken in connection with safety signs: see reg 6. As to enforcement see regs 7-13; and PARA 1172.

40 See the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Manual Handling Operations) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2857, which give effect as regards shipping activities in the United Kingdom to EC Council Directive 90/269 of 29 May 1990 (OJ L156, 21.06.1990, p 9) on the minimum health and safety requirements for the manual handling of loads where there is a risk particularly of back injury to workers (amended by EC Directive 2007/30 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 20 June 2007 (OJ L165, 27.06.2007, p 21)). The Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Manual Handling Operations) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2857, are made under the powers contained in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 ss 85, 86 (see PARAS 591, 592) except in respect of their application to government ships (see the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Manual Handling Operations) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2857, reg 2(2)), where the power is provided by the European Communities Act 1972 s 2(2).

The circumstances in which the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Manual Handling Operations) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2857, apply are set out in terms which are similar to those governing the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Health and Safety at Work) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2962 (see note 5): see the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Manual Handling Operations) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2857, reg 3. However, exclusions apply where the Manual Handling Operations Regulations 1992, SI 1992/2793 (see HEALTH AND SAFETY AT WORK vol 53 (2009) PARA 583) apply instead: see the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Manual Handling Operations) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2857, reg 3. The persons on whom duties are imposed are set out in reg 4 (again in terms similar to the persons on whom general duties relating to health are imposed: see note 4). The duty on employers is set out in the text (see reg 5); and every worker while at work must make full and proper use of any system of work provided for his use by his employer in accordance with reg 5 (see reg 6). As to enforcement see regs 7-13 (reg 13 amended by SI 1999/2205); and PARA 1172.

SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/ (1) SAFETY AND HEALTH ON SHIPS/(iv) Health and Safety/B. HEALTH/625. Hours of work and working time for seafarers and workers on the inland waterways.

B. HEALTH

625. Hours of work and working time for seafarers and workers on the inland waterways.

The general provisions which govern the organisation of working time for employees¹ do not apply to the organisation of working time for seafarers², for sea-fishermen³, or for workers on the inland waterways⁴.

Accordingly, in relation to any sea-going ship⁵, it is the duty of the company, the employer of a seafarer and the master of the ship to ensure that a seafarer is provided with at least the minimum hours of rest⁶; and further provision is made in relation to:

- 574 (1) duties imposed on the master of a ship (or a person authorised by the master) to ensure that a table of scheduled hours of rest is posted-up in a prominent and easily accessible place in the ship⁷;
- 575 (2) the requirement imposed on the master of a ship (or a person authorised by the master) to maintain a record of a seafarer's daily hours of rest⁸;
- 576 (3) a prohibition on seafarers under the age of 18 from working at night⁹;
- 577 (4) the requirement for a company to provide the Maritime and Coastguard Agency with such information as the Agency may specify on watchkeepers and other seafarers working at night¹⁰;
- 578 (5) a seafarer's entitlement to be paid annual leave¹¹;
- 579 (6) a seafarer's entitlement to hours of rest or annual leave under separate provision (including a provision of his contract)¹²;
- 580 (7) enforcement¹³.

In relation to any United Kingdom ship, wherever it may be, which operates (or ordinarily operates) under a certificate which does not allow the ship to go beyond the limits of certain categories of United Kingdom waters which are not regarded as 'sea' for most purposes of the merchant shipping legislation¹⁴ (or which is not required to be certified)¹⁵, and in relation to any ship other than a United Kingdom ship, which operates in the United Kingdom and does not go beyond the limits of those same categories of waters¹⁶, provision is made¹⁷ in relation to:

- 581 (a) a worker's maximum weekly working time (including overtime)¹⁸;
- 582 (b) health assessments for night workers, and for such workers to be transferred to day work if a registered medical practitioner so advises¹⁹;
- 583 (c) a worker's entitlement to adequate rest breaks where the pattern according to which an employer organises work is such as to put the health and safety of a worker employed by him at risk, in particular because the work is monotonous²⁰;
- 584 (d) records to be kept (and retained) by an employer adequate to show whether the limit specified in head (a) above and the requirements as to health assessments in head (b) above are being complied with in the case of each worker employed by him in relation to whom they apply²¹;
- 585 (e) a worker's entitlement to regular rest periods which are sufficiently long and continuous to ensure that, as a result of fatigue or other irregular working patterns,

- he does not cause injury to himself, to fellow workers or to others and that he does not damage his health, either in the short term or in the longer term²²;
- 586 (f) a worker's entitlement to annual leave and to payment for such leave²³;
- 587 (g) a worker's entitlement to a rest period or annual leave under separate provision (including a provision of his contract)²⁴;
- 588 (h) various exceptions to the above requirements for special cases of work and of worker²⁵;
- 589 (i) the requirement for an employer to provide the Maritime and Coastguard Agency with such information as the Secretary of State (acting through the Agency) may specify in writing²⁶;
- 590 (j) offences for which an employer who fails to comply with the requirements is liable²⁷;
- 591 (k) a worker's right to present a complaint to an employment tribunal that his employer has refused to permit him to exercise any right he has in relation to working time or has failed to pay him the whole or any part of any amount due to him under head (f) above²⁸;
- 592 (l) restrictions imposed on the contracting out of the requirements relating to working time²⁹.

A person who is serving as master of a specified class of passenger craft operating on inland waterways or on some short coastal voyages³⁰ and who is not a person to whom other working time regulations apply³¹ must comply with the self-employed master's working hours code³².

4 See the Merchant Shipping (Working Time: Inland Waterways) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/3049 (see the text and notes 14-29). See also note 5.

5 The Merchant Shipping (Hours of Work) Regulations, SI 2002/2125, apply to sea-going United Kingdom ships wherever they may be, being ships other than fishing vessels, pleasure vessels, and offshore installations whilst on their working stations: reg 3(1) (amended by SI 2004/1469). For these purposes, 'United Kingdom ship' means a ship which is a United Kingdom ship within the meaning of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 85(2) (see PARA 591 note 4) or is a hovercraft registered under the Hovercraft Act 1968 (see PARA 390 et seq); and 'offshore installation' means any installation which is intended for underwater exploitation of mineral resources or exploration with a view to such exploitation: Merchant Shipping (Hours of Work) Regulations, SI 2002/2125, reg 2(1). 'Sea-going' means a ship certificated by the competent authority (which, in relation to the United Kingdom, is the Maritime and Coastguard Agency, an executive agency of the Department of Transport) for navigation at sea: reg 2(1), (2) (definition amended by SI 2004/1469). As to the Maritime and Coastguard Agency see PARA 56. As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 17 note 3. For these purposes, 'pleasure vessel' means:

913 (1) any vessel which is wholly owned by an individual or individuals and used only for the sport or pleasure of the owner or the immediate family or friends of the owner, or is owned by a body corporate and used only for the sport or pleasure of employees or officers of the body corporate, or their immediate family or friends; and is on a voyage or excursion which is one for which the owner is not paid for or in connection with operating the vessel or carrying any person, other than as a contribution to the direct expenses of the operation of the vessel incurred during the voyage or excursion; or

914 (2) any vessel wholly owned by or on behalf of a members' club formed for the purpose of sport or pleasure which, at the time it is being used, is used only for the sport or pleasure of members of the club or their immediate family; and for the use of which any charges levied are paid into club funds and applied for the general use of the club; and

915 (3) in the case of any vessel referred to in head (1) or head (2), no payments other than those mentioned are made by or on behalf of the users of the vessel, other than by the owner;

and, for these purposes, 'immediate family' means, in relation to an individual, the spouse or civil partner of the individual, and a brother, sister, ancestor or lineal descendant of that individual or that individual's spouse or civil partner: Merchant Shipping (Hours of Work) Regulations, SI 2002/2125, reg 2(1) (definition amended by SI 2005/2114).

The Merchant Shipping (Hours of Work) Regulations, SI 2002/2125, reg 15 (see note 13) and reg 16 (see note 13) apply also to sea-going ships other than United Kingdom ships, when they are in a United Kingdom port or in United Kingdom waters: see reg 3(1). However, the Merchant Shipping (Hours of Work) Regulations, SI 2002/2125, do not apply to any seafarer who is subject to any requirement contained in the Working Time Regulations 1998, SI 1998/1833 (as to which see EMPLOYMENT vol 39 (2009) PARA 244 et seq) or the Merchant Shipping (Working Time: Inland Waterways) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/3049, or the Fishing Vessels (Working Time: Sea-fishermen) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1713 (see PARA 626): Merchant Shipping (Hours of Work) Regulations, SI 2002/2125, reg 3(2) (amended by SI 2003/3049; SI 2004/1713).

The Merchant Shipping (Hours of Work) Regulations, SI 2002/2125, are made under the powers contained in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 ss 85, 86 (see PARAS 591, 592) except in respect of some amendments, where the power is provided by the European Communities Act 1972 s 2(2).

6 Merchant Shipping (Hours of Work) Regulations, SI 2002/2125, reg 4. The minimum hours of rest are specified in reg 5. However, the hours so specified may be altered if the Maritime and Coastguard Agency authorises a collective agreement or workforce agreement permitting exceptions to those limits: see reg 6, Sch 1. Also, the master of a ship may require a seafarer to work any hours of work necessary for the immediate safety of the ship, persons on board ship or cargo or for the purpose of giving assistance to another ship or to a person in distress at sea: see reg 8.

7 See the Merchant Shipping (Hours of Work) Regulations, SI 2002/2125, reg 7.

8 See the Merchant Shipping (Hours of Work) Regulations, SI 2002/2125, reg 9.

9 See the Merchant Shipping (Hours of Work) Regulations, SI 2002/2125, reg 10. However, a seafarer of the age of 16 or 17 may work at night if the work forms part of an established programme of training the effectiveness of which would be impaired by the prohibition set out in head (3) in the text: see reg 10.

10 See the Merchant Shipping (Hours of Work) Regulations, SI 2002/2125, reg 11.

11 See the Merchant Shipping (Hours of Work) Regulations, SI 2002/2125, reg 12. The leave to which a seafarer is entitled under head (5) in the text may be taken in instalments and may not be replaced by a payment in lieu, except where the worker's employment is terminated: see reg 12.

12 See the Merchant Shipping (Hours of Work) Regulations, SI 2002/2125, reg 13.

13 Contravention of the Merchant Shipping (Hours of Work) Regulations, SI 2002/2125, is an offence: see reg 20. An inspector has powers to inspect any United Kingdom ship and if, after inspection, he is satisfied that there has been a failure to comply with the requirements of reg 4 (see the text and notes 5-6), reg 7 (see head (1) in the text) or reg 9 (see head (2) in the text), in relation to that ship, he may detain the ship so long as he does not, in the exercise of such powers, detain or delay the ship unreasonably: see reg 14. Similar powers of inspection are available in relation to a ship which is not a United Kingdom ship but which has called voluntarily at a United Kingdom port: see reg 15 (amended by SI 2004/1469). If any such inspection under the Merchant Shipping (Hours of Work) Regulations, SI 2002/2125, reg 15 reveals that any of the requirements of reg 4, reg 7 or reg 9 are not being complied with in respect of a ship the relevant inspector must, in the case of deficiencies which are clearly hazardous to the safety or health of seafarers, take the measures necessary to ensure that such deficiencies are rectified, and may detain the ship until deficiencies have been rectified or the seafarers in question have been sufficiently rested: see the Merchant Shipping (Hours of Work) Regulations, SI 2002/2125, reg 16. The Maritime and Coastguard Agency must ensure the publication, at least every month, of specified information concerning ships to which regs 15 and 16 apply which during the previous month have been detained in a port in the United Kingdom: see reg 19. Provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 dealing with the enforcement of detention (ie s 284(1)-(5), (8) (see PARA 1253)), with references of detention notices to arbitration (ie s 96 (see PARA 1205)) and with compensation in relation to an invalid detention (ie s 97 (see PARA 1206)), are applied with modifications: see the Merchant Shipping (Hours of Work) Regulations, SI 2002/2125, regs 17, 18. As to offences see also PARA 1173.

14 In the waters of category A, B, C or D as categorised in Merchant Shipping Notice 1776(M): see the Merchant Shipping (Working Time: Inland Waterways) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/3049, reg 3(1). Merchant Shipping Notice 1776(M) (Categorisation of Waters: Notice to Owners, Operators and Masters) (March 2003) is published by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency.

The Merchant Shipping (Working Time: Inland Waterways) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/3049, are made under the powers contained in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 ss 85, 86 (see PARAS 591-592) except in respect of the Merchant Shipping (Working Time: Inland Waterways) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/3049, reg 18 (see head (k) in the text) and some of the amendments, where the power is provided by the European Communities Act 1972 s 2(2).

22 See the Merchant Shipping (Working Time: Inland Waterways) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/3049, reg 10. The entitlement in head (e) in the text does not apply where the worker's activities are affected by an occurrence due to unusual and unforeseeable circumstances (beyond the control of the worker's employer) or by exceptional events, the consequences of which could not have been avoided despite the exercise of all due care by the employer, or by an accident or the imminent risk of an accident: see regs 10, 14(d).

23 See the Merchant Shipping (Working Time: Inland Waterways) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/3049, reg 11. 625 Shipping- and maritime-related measures of the European Community

NOTE 2--The Agreement on the organisation of working time of seafarers concluded by the European Community Shipowners' Association (ECSA) and the Federation of Transport Workers' Unions in the European Union (FST) set out in Directive 1999/63 amended in accordance with the adoption by the ILO of the Maritime Labour Convention 2006: EC Council Directive 2009/13 (OJ L124, 20.5.2009, p 30): art 2.

Halsbury's Laws of England/SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW (VOLUME 93 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-590; VOLUME 94 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 591-1254)/7. SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/ (1) SAFETY AND HEALTH ON SHIPS/(iv) Health and Safety/B. HEALTH/626. Hours of work for sea-fishermen.

626. Hours of work for sea-fishermen.

In relation to United Kingdom fishing vessels¹, wherever they may be², provision is made³ in relation to:

- 593 (1) a worker's maximum weekly working time (including overtime)⁴;
- 594 (2) a worker's entitlement to adequate and regular rest periods which are sufficiently long and continuous to ensure that, as a result of fatigue or other irregular working patterns, a worker does not cause injury to himself, to fellow workers or to others and that he does not damage his health, either in the short term or in the longer term⁵;
- 595 (3) health assessments for night workers, and for such workers to be transferred to day work if a registered medical practitioner so advises⁶;
- 596 (4) a worker's entitlement to reasonable rest breaks where the pattern according to which an employer organises work is such as to put the health and safety of a worker employed by him at risk, in particular because the work is monotonous or the work-rate is predetermined⁷;
- 597 (5) records to be kept (and retained) by an employer adequate to show whether the limit specified in head (1) above, the requirements as to rest breaks specified in head (2) above and the requirements as to health assessments in head (3) above are being complied with in the case of each worker employed by him in relation to whom they apply⁸;
- 598 (6) a worker's entitlement to annual leave and to payment for such leave⁹;
- 599 (7) a worker's entitlement to a rest period or annual leave under separate provision (including a provision of his contract)¹⁰;
- 600 (8) exceptions to the above requirements for objective or technical reasons or for reasons concerning the organisation of work¹¹, or where the master of a fishing vessel requires a worker to work any hours of work necessary for the immediate safety of the fishing vessel, persons on board the fishing vessel or cargo or for the purpose of giving assistance to another ship or to a person in distress at sea¹²;
- 601 (9) the requirement for an employer to provide (via the Maritime and Coastguard Agency) such information on night workers as the Secretary of State may specify in writing¹³;
- 602 (10) offences for which an employer who fails to comply with the requirements is liable¹⁴;
- 603 (11) a worker's right to present a complaint to an employment tribunal that his employer has refused to permit him to exercise any right he has in relation to working time or has failed to pay him the whole or any part of any amount due to him under head (6) above¹⁵;
- 604 (12) restrictions imposed on the contracting out of the requirements relating to working time¹⁶.

As from a day to be appointed, the following provisions have effect in relation to hours of work for sea-fishermen¹⁷.

The Secretary of State may make regulations¹⁸ prescribing maximum periods of duty and minimum periods of rest for seamen¹⁹ employed in United Kingdom fishing vessels²⁰; and such regulations may make different provision for different descriptions of fishing vessels or seamen employed in them or for fishing vessels and seamen of the same description in different circumstances²¹. If any provision of regulations so made is contravened²² in the case of any seaman employed in a fishing vessel, the persons employing him and the master²³ are each liable on summary conviction to a fine not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale²⁴.

1 For these purposes, 'United Kingdom fishing vessel' means a sea-going fishing vessel which is registered in the United Kingdom: Fishing Vessels (Working Time: Sea-fishermen) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1713, reg 2(1). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 17 note 3.

2 Fishing Vessels (Working Time: Sea-fishermen) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1713, reg 3(1). The provisions of reg 7 (see head (2) in the text), reg 16 (see note 14) and reg 17 (see note 14) apply to fishing vessels registered in member states other than the United Kingdom when they are within United Kingdom waters: reg 3(2).

3 See the Fishing Vessels (Working Time: Sea-fishermen) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1713, which implement EC Directive 2003/88 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 4 November 2003 (OJ L299, 18.11.2003, p 9) concerning certain aspects of the organisation of working time (as to which see EMPLOYMENT vol 39 (2009) PARA 243). The Fishing Vessels (Working Time: Sea-fishermen) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1713, are made under the powers contained in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 ss 85, 86 (see PARAS 591, 592) except in respect of the Fishing Vessels (Working Time: Sea-fishermen) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1713, reg 19 (see head (11) in the text) and some of the amendments, where the power is provided by the European Communities Act 1972 s 2(2).

14 Contravention of the Fishing Vessels (Working Time: Sea-fishermen) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1713, is an offence: see reg 18. Where a relevant inspector is of the opinion that the requirements of reg 7 (see head (2) in the text) have not been complied with in respect of any worker on a fishing vessel, and a hazard to the health or safety of any worker is thereby created, the fishing vessel may be detained until the worker has had sufficient rest to resume his duties without creating a hazard to the health or safety of any worker; but this power of detention may not be exercised unreasonably: see reg 16. Provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 dealing with the enforcement of detention (ie s 284(1)-(6), (8) (see PARA 1253)), with references of detention notices to arbitration (ie s 96 (see PARA 1205)) and with compensation in relation to an invalid detention (ie s 97 (see PARA 1206)), are applied with modifications: see the Fishing Vessels (Working Time: Sea-fishermen) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1713, regs 16, 17. 627. Duty to supply adequate provisions and water.

It is the duty of the employer and master of every sea-going United Kingdom ship, other than a ship under 24 metres in length, a pleasure vessel, a submersible craft or an offshore installation whilst on or within 500 metres of its working station, to ensure that there are provided on their ship provisions and water¹, which:

- 605 (1) are suitable in respect of quantity, nutritive value, quality and variety having regard to the size of the crew and the character and nature of the voyage²;
- 606 (2) do not contain anything which is likely to cause sickness or injury to health or which renders any provision or water unpalatable³; and
- 607 (3) are otherwise fit for consumption⁴.

It is the duty of the master to ensure that he, or a person authorised by him, together with a member of the crew employed in catering on the ship, inspects not less than once a week provisions and water for the purpose of checking whether the provisions and water still comply with heads (1) to (3) above; and the results of such inspections must be recorded in the official log book⁵ of the ship⁶.

Contravention of the above requirements is an offence⁷; and the ship may be detained until the health and safety of all employees and other persons aboard the ship are secured if, after inspection, an inspector is satisfied that there has been a failure to comply, in relation to that ship, with the above requirements; but the inspector must not, in the exercise of such powers, detain or delay the ship unreasonably⁸. An inspector has similar powers in relation to such a ship which is not a United Kingdom ship when it is in a United Kingdom port⁹. Provision is made in relation to a ship so detained as to liability for costs and compensation for the detention of, and enforcing the detention of, the ship¹⁰.

The Secretary of State may grant exemptions from all or any of the provisions of the Merchant Shipping (Provisions and Water) Regulations 1989, SI 1989/102, as may be specified in the exemption, for classes of cases or individual cases on such terms, if any, as he may so specify and may, subject to giving reasonable notice, alter or cancel any such exemption: reg 3(3). 628. Duty to carry a ship's doctor.

It is the duty of the owner¹ of a United Kingdom ship, having more than 100 persons on board and engaged on an international voyage of more than three days or on a voyage during which it is more than one and a half days' sailing time from a port with adequate medical equipment, to ensure that the ship carries a qualified doctor².

Any contravention of this duty is an offence³.

1 For these purposes, 'owner', in relation to a ship, means the registered owner of the ship unless that ship has been chartered by demise or is managed, either wholly or in part, by a person other than the registered owner under the terms of a management agreement; in that case 'owner' includes the demise charterer or person managing the ship, as the case may be: Merchant Shipping (Ships' Doctors) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1803, reg 2(1).

2 Merchant Shipping (Ships' Doctors) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1803, reg 3. For these purposes, 'qualified doctor' means a fully registered person within the meaning of the Medical Act 1983 s 55 (see MEDICAL PROFESSIONS vol 30(1) (Reissue) PARA 3): Merchant Shipping (Ships' Doctors) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1803, reg 2(1). As from a day to be appointed, the definition of 'qualified doctor' given in reg 2(1) is amended with the addition of the phrase 'who holds a licence to practise': see reg 2(1) (prospectively amended by SI 2002/3135). However, at the day at which this volume states the law, no such day had been appointed.

629. Requirement for seafarers to hold valid medical fitness certificate.

No person may employ a seafarer¹ in a sea-going United Kingdom ship wherever it may be² unless that seafarer is the holder of a valid medical fitness certificate³; and no person may employ a seafarer in such a ship in a capacity or in a geographical area precluded by any restriction in that seafarer's medical fitness certificate⁴. Further provision is made which allows for:

- 608 (1) certain other medical certificates to be treated as equivalent⁵;
- 609 (2) the issue of medical fitness certificates, on payment of the prescribed fee, by medical practitioners approved by the Secretary of State⁶;
- 610 (3) the period of validity of medical fitness certificates⁷, for the suspension or cancellation of certificates in specified circumstances⁸, and for the review of a refusal of a medical fitness certificate, or the suspension or cancellation of a certificate, by a medical referee appointed by the Secretary of State⁹;
- 611 (4) the transfer to day work of seafarers on watchkeeping duties who are suffering health problems due to performing work at night¹⁰;

Halsbury's Laws of England/SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW (VOLUME 93 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-590; VOLUME 94 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 591-1254)/7. SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/ (1) SAFETY AND HEALTH ON SHIPS/(iv) Health and Safety/B. HEALTH/630. Requirement to carry on board prescribed medical stores.

630. Requirement to carry on board prescribed medical stores.

Every United Kingdom ship and government ship (other than a ship employed in inland navigation, a pleasure vessel used for non-commercial purposes and not manned by a professional crew, or a tug¹ operating in harbour areas)² must carry on board prescribed medical stores³.

All medical stores required to be so kept on board a vessel:

- 614 (1) must conform to the standards and requirements of the British National Formulary, the British Pharmacopoeia, the European Pharmacopoeia or the United States Pharmacopoeia⁴;
- 615 (2) must be properly packaged and labelled⁵, stored⁶ and replenished⁷.

Every such ship must carry guides as to the use of medical stores required to be so carried on board it appropriate to their categories, including in particular specified instructions⁸ for the use of antidotes⁹.

The owner¹⁰ of such a ship must ensure that the medical stores are inspected by a competent person or authority at least once a year to ensure that:

- 616 (a) the ship is carrying the medical stores which it is so required to carry¹¹;
- 617 (b) such medical stores are correctly stored¹²;
- 618 (c) any perishable medicines have been duly replaced¹³.

Contravention of the above requirements is an offence¹⁴; and the ship may be detained until the above requirements are met if, after inspection, an inspector is satisfied that there has been a failure so to comply, in relation to that ship¹⁵.

1 For these purposes, 'tug' means a vessel constructed solely for the purpose of, and normally used for, providing external motive power for floating objects or vessels: Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Medical Stores) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1802, reg 1(3). The Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Medical Stores) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1802, do not apply to a small commercial vessel which has been examined, and in respect of which a certificate has been issued, in accordance with the applicable Code of Practice, or to a vessel which is operating under the phase-in arrangements of the Code of Practice: see PARA 611.

2 See the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Medical Stores) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1802, reg 3. For these purposes, 'harbour area' means any harbour in the United Kingdom in respect of which a harbour authority, within the meaning of the Harbours Act 1964 (see PORTS AND HARBOURS vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 619), has statutory powers or duties of improvement, maintenance or management: Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Medical Stores) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1802, reg 1(3).

3 See the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Medical Stores) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1802, reg 4. For these purposes, 'medical stores' includes medicines, medical equipment and antidotes: reg 1(3). The medical stores mentioned in the text are those specified in the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Medical Stores) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1802, reg 4(1), Table (Table amended by SI 1996/2821): see the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Medical Stores) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1802, reg 4.

4 Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Medical Stores) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1802, reg 6. The medical stores must also conform to the requirements and specifications of Merchant Shipping Notice 1768(M+F), which has superseded notices 1607(M) and 1608(M): see the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Medical Stores) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1802, reg 6. For these purposes, 'Merchant Shipping Notice' means a Notice described as such, issued by the Secretary of State or the Maritime and Coastguard Agency, and includes a reference to any document amending or replacing that Notice which is considered by the Secretary of State to be relevant from time to time and is specified in a Merchant Shipping Notice: Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Medical Stores) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1802, reg 1(3). As to the Secretary of State see PARA 38; and as to the Maritime and Coastguard Agency see PARA 56. Any reference to the British Pharmacopoeia, the European Pharmacopoeia or the British National Formulary is to be construed, in its application to a particular case, as a reference to the edition thereof current at, or not more than three months before, the time in question: reg 1(4).

5 In accordance with the requirements of the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Medical Stores) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1802, reg 7 (packaging and labelling of containers).

6 In accordance with the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Medical Stores) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1802, reg 8 (storage of medicines).

7 In accordance with the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Medical Stores) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1802, reg 9 (replenishment of dated medicines).

8 In instructions as specified in Merchant Shipping Notice 1768(M+F) (as to which see note 4): see the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Medical Stores) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1802, reg 10.

9 Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Medical Stores) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1802, reg 10.

10 For these purposes, 'owner', in relation to a ship, means the registered owner of the ship unless the ship has been chartered by demise or is managed, either wholly or in part, by a person other than the registered owner under the terms of a management agreement; in that case 'owner' includes the demise charterer or the person managing the ship, as the case may be: Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Medical Stores) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1802, reg 1(3).

11 Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Medical Stores) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1802, reg 11(a). The text refers to the medical stores required to be carried by reg 4 (see the text and notes 1-3): see reg 11(a).

12 Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Medical Stores) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1802, reg 11(b).

13 Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Medical Stores) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1802, reg 11(c). The text refers to perishable medicines replaced in accordance with the requirements of reg 9 (see note 7): see reg 11(c).

14 See the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Medical Stores) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1802, regs 12, 13. See also PARA 1177.

15 See the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Medical Stores) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1802, reg 14. Those provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 which deal with the enforcement of detention (ie s 284 (see PARA 1253)) are applied with modifications for these purposes: see the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Medical Stores) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/1802, reg 15; Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b).

Halsbury's Laws of England/SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW (VOLUME 93 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-590; VOLUME 94 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 591-1254)/7. SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/ (1) SAFETY AND HEALTH ON SHIPS/(iv) Health and Safety/C. GENERAL SAFETY REQUIREMENTS/631. Requirement to carry code of safe working practices.

C. GENERAL SAFETY REQUIREMENTS

631. Requirement to carry code of safe working practices.

In every United Kingdom ship¹, except fishing vessels and pleasure vessels², on which five or less workers³ are employed, the company⁴ must ensure that there is carried at least one copy of the Code of Safe Working Practices for Merchant Seamen⁵, to be kept in the custody of the master, which must be easily accessible and readily available to all workers⁶.

In every such ship on which more than five and no more than 20 workers are employed, the company must ensure that there is carried a suitable number of copies of the Code⁷, of which:

- 619 (1) one copy must be kept in the custody of the master⁸;
- 620 (2) one copy must be kept in the custody of the safety officer⁹; and
- 621 (3) one copy must be provided for safety representative (where elected)¹⁰; and in addition
- 622 (4) one or more copies must be kept in a place readily accessible to other workers¹¹, provided that no person is to be required to hold more than one copy of the Code¹².

In every such ship on which more than 20 workers are employed, the company must ensure that there is carried a suitable number of copies of the Code, of which:

- 623 (a) one copy must be kept in the custody of the master¹³;
- 624 (b) one copy must be kept in the custody of the chief officer¹⁴;
- 625 (c) one copy must be kept in the custody of the chief engineer¹⁵;
- 626 (d) one copy must be kept in the custody of either the purser or the catering officer¹⁶;
- 627 (e) one copy must be kept in the custody of the safety officer¹⁷;
- 628 (f) one copy must be kept in the custody of each safety representative (where elected)¹⁸; and in addition
- 629 (g) a number of copies adequate for the number of other workers employed, taking into account the nature of their duties, must be readily available and kept in a place or places readily accessible to those workers¹⁹, provided that no person is to be required to hold more than one copy of the Code²⁰.

Where, as the case may be, no safety officer or safety representative is appointed for the ship, any requirement for a safety officer or safety representative to keep a copy of the Code does not apply, and in either case the number of copies which the company is required to ensure are carried may also be reduced, so long as the total number carried is not less than a suitable number²¹.

No person is to knowingly remove a copy of the Code²² from the ship without the consent of the company or the master²³.

Contravention of the provisions which require the carrying of the Code of Safe Working Practices is an offence²⁴.

1 For these purposes, 'United Kingdom ship' means a ship which is a United Kingdom ship within the meaning of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 85(2) (see PARA 591 note 4) or is a hovercraft registered under the Hovercraft Act 1968 (see PARA 390 et seq): Merchant Shipping (Code of Safe Working Practices for Merchant Seamen) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/1838, reg 2(1).

2 In every ship to which the Merchant Shipping (Code of Safe Working Practices for Merchant Seamen) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/1838, apply: see reg 3.

3 For these purposes, 'worker' means any person employed by an employer under a contract of employment including trainees or apprentices other than trainees who are training on a sail training vessel: Merchant Shipping (Code of Safe Working Practices for Merchant Seamen) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/1838, reg 2(1).

4 For these purposes, 'company' means the owner of a ship or any person or organisation or person such as the manager, or bareboat charterer, who has assumed the responsibility for operation of the ship from the owner: Merchant Shipping (Code of Safe Working Practices for Merchant Seamen) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/1838, reg 2(1).

5 In the Code of Safe Working Practices for Merchant Seamen (Consolidated Edition) (2007), published by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency and The Stationery Office, and any subsequent amendments and revisions to that publication, which the Secretary of State considers relevant from time to time and which must be notified in a Marine Information Notice (being a Notice described as such and issued by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency): Merchant Shipping (Code of Safe Working Practices for Merchant Seamen) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/1838, reg 2(1). SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/ (1) SAFETY AND HEALTH ON SHIPS/(iv) Health and Safety/C. GENERAL SAFETY REQUIREMENTS/632. Compliance with the International Safety Management ('ISM') Code for large vessels.

632. Compliance with the International Safety Management ('ISM') Code for large vessels.

Every company¹ must comply with the requirements of the International Management Code for the Safe Operation of Ships and for Pollution Prevention (the 'ISM Code')² as it applies to that company and to any ship owned by it or for which it has responsibility³.

No company may operate a ship unless that company holds a valid Document of Compliance⁴ and unless there is in force in respect of that ship a valid Safety Management Certificate⁵; and no United Kingdom ship may be operated unless the company holds a Document of Compliance issued or accepted by the Secretary of State⁶, and unless there is in force in relation to the ship a Safety Management Certificate issued by him⁷.

Every company has a duty to ensure that a valid Safety Management Certificate and a copy of the Document of Compliance is carried on board each ship⁸; and the master of every ship must operate his ship in accordance with the safety management system on the basis of which the Safety Management Certificate was issued⁹.

Further provision is made in relation to:

- 630 (1) the requirement for a company to designate a person to be responsible for monitoring the safe and efficient operation of each ship with particular regard to the safety and pollution prevention aspects¹⁰;
- 631 (2) the issue of Documents of Compliance and Safety Management Certificates¹¹;
- 632 (3) annual audits of the Document of Compliance¹² and intermediate audits of the Safety Management Certificate¹³;
- 633 (4) the renewal of certificates¹⁴;
- 634 (5) powers of audit, inspection, suspension of service and detention of the ship¹⁵;
- 635 (6) the Secretary of State's power to grant exemptions from the provisions for classes of cases or for individual cases¹⁶;
- 636 (7) the suspension or cancellation of Documents of Compliance and Safety Management Certificates¹⁷;
- 637 (8) offences and penalties¹⁸.

All owners of a ro-ro ferry¹⁹ (or any other organisation or person such as the manager, or the bareboat charterer, who has assumed responsibility for operating the ro-ro ferry from the owner)²⁰ must comply with all the relevant provisions of the ISM Code²¹, as if the provisions thereof were mandatory, as a requirement for their vessels to provide regular services to or from a port of a member state of the Community²²; and a failure so to comply is an offence²³. For these purposes, provision is made in relation to powers of inspection, suspension of service and detention of the ship²⁴, and to allow for the suspension or cancellation of documents of compliance or safety management certificates issued by the Secretary of State²⁵.

1 For these purposes, 'company' means the owner of a ship to which the Merchant Shipping (International Safety Management (ISM) Code) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/1561, apply (or any other organisation or person such as the manager, or the bareboat charterer, who has assumed the responsibility for the operation of the ship from the owner): reg 2(1). The Merchant Shipping (International Safety Management (ISM) Code) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/1561, apply to:

- 916 (1) United Kingdom ships, wherever they may be, and other ships while they are within United Kingdom waters (see reg 3(1));
- 917 (2) passenger ships of Classes I, II and II(A) (see reg 3(2)(a)(i));
- 918 (3) oil tankers, chemical tankers, gas carriers, bulk carriers, and cargo high speed craft, of 500 tons or more, which engage in international voyages (see reg 3(2)(a)(ii));
- 919 (4) other cargo ships and mobile offshore drilling units, of 500 tons or more, which engage in international voyages (see reg 3(2)(b)); and
- 920 (5) a passenger ship which is a high speed craft to which the Merchant Shipping (High Speed Craft) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/302 (see PARA 614 et seq) apply (see the Merchant Shipping (International Safety Management (ISM) Code) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/1561, reg 3(2)(c) (amended by SI 2004/302)).

As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 17 note 3. For these purposes, 'United Kingdom ship' means a ship which is a United Kingdom ship within the meaning of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 85(2) (see PARA 591 note 4) or is a hovercraft registered under the Hovercraft Act 1968 (see PARA 390 et seq): Merchant Shipping (International Safety Management (ISM) Code) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/1561, reg 2(1). 'Passenger ships of Classes I, II and II(A)' means passenger ships so classified within the meaning of the Merchant Shipping (Passenger Ship Construction: Ships of Classes I, II and II(A)) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2514 (see PARA 599 note 4): Merchant Shipping (International Safety Management (ISM) Code) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/1561, reg 2(1); Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b).

As to passenger ships (other than ships engaged on international voyages) for which separate provision is made see PARA 633.

The Merchant Shipping (International Safety Management (ISM) Code) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/1561, apply to every company operating a ship to which those regulations apply (see reg 3(3)), except those companies and ships to which EC Council Regulation 3051/95 of 8 December 1995 on the safety management of roll-on/roll-off passenger ferries (ro-ro ferries) (OJ L320, 30.12.1995, p 14) applies (as to which see the text and notes 19-25) (see the Merchant Shipping (International Safety Management (ISM) Code) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/1561, reg 3(4)).

For these purposes, a Document of Compliance is not valid if it has not been indorsed, in the circumstances required by the ISM Code, showing satisfactory annual audits (see head (3) in the text): see reg 5(4). For these purposes, 'Document of Compliance' means the Document of Compliance referred to in SOLAS Ch IX (Management for the Safe Operation of Ships) reg 4: see the Merchant Shipping (International Safety Management (ISM) Code) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/1561, reg 2(1). 5 Merchant Shipping (International Safety Management (ISM) Code) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/1561, reg 5(2). For these purposes, a Safety Management Certificate is not valid if it has not been indorsed, in the circumstances required by the ISM Code, showing a satisfactory intermediate audit (see head (3) in the text): see reg 5(4). For these purposes, 'Safety Management Certificate' means the Safety Management Certificate referred to in SOLAS Ch IX (Management for the Safe Operation of Ships) reg 4: see the Merchant Shipping (International Safety Management (ISM) Code) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/1561, reg 2(1).

For these purposes, 'regular service' means a series of ro-ro ferry crossings operated so as to serve traffic between the same two or more points, either according to a published timetable or with crossings so regular or frequent that they constitute a recognizable systematic series: see EC Council Regulation 3051/95 of 8 December 1995 (OJ L320, 30.12.1995, p 14) art 2(b); definition applied by virtue of the Merchant Shipping (ISM Code) (Ro-Ro Passenger Ferries) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/3022, reg 2(2).

20 Ie any company as defined by EC Council Regulation 3051/95 of 8 December 1995 (OJ L320, 30.12.1995, p 14) art 2(c) (definition applied by virtue of the Merchant Shipping (ISM Code) (Ro-Ro Passenger Ferries) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/3022, reg 2(2)).

21 Ie, for these purposes, the ISM Code paras 1.2 to 13.1 and 13.6: see EC Council Regulation 3051/95 of 8 December 1995 (OJ L320, 30.12.1995, p 14) art 4(1); Merchant Shipping (ISM Code) (Ro-Ro Passenger Ferries) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/3022, reg 3.

Halsbury's Laws of England/SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW (VOLUME 93 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-590; VOLUME 94 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 591-1254)/7. SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/ (1) SAFETY AND HEALTH ON SHIPS/(iv) Health and Safety/C. GENERAL SAFETY REQUIREMENTS/633. Compliance with the safety management code for small vessels.

633. Compliance with the safety management code for small vessels.

A company¹ must comply with the requirements of the Safety Management Code for Domestic Passenger Ships² as it applies to that company and to any ship³ owned by it or for which it has operational responsibility⁴; and a company must ensure that a valid Domestic Ship Safety Management Certificate⁵ held in relation to the ship is carried on board each ship owned by it or for which it has operational responsibility⁶.

The master of a ship must operate that ship in accordance with the safety management system on the basis of which the Domestic Ship Safety Management Certificate was issued in relation to the ship⁷.

The Secretary of State may grant exemptions from all or any of these provisions⁸ (as may be specified in the exemption) for individual cases or classes of case on such terms (if any) as he may specify, if he is satisfied that compliance with such provision is either impracticable or unreasonable in that case or cases, and if he is satisfied that the exemption is subject to such conditions and limitations as will provide a level of safety equivalent to that provided by the provision or provisions from which exemption is being granted⁹.

Further provision is made requiring a company to designate a person to be responsible for monitoring the safe and efficient operation of each ship¹⁰, and in relation to powers of inspection conferred on authorised persons¹¹, the suspension of a Domestic Ship Safety Management Certificate where an authorised person considers that a ship is unable to operate without creating a risk of serious danger to safety of life, and the detention of a ship which does not comply with the code or with requirements related to such a certificate¹².

Any contravention of these provisions is an offence¹³.

1 For these purposes, 'company', in relation to a ship, means the owner (or any other organisation or person such as the operator, manager, or bareboat charterer, who has assumed the responsibility for the operation of the ship from the owner): Merchant Shipping (Domestic Passenger Ships) (Safety Management Code) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3209, reg 2.

2 For these purposes, 'Safety Management Code for Domestic Passenger Ships' means the Safety Management Code for Small Vessels set out in Merchant Shipping Notice 1754(M) (Safety Management Code for Domestic Passenger Ships of Classes III-VI (A)), where 'Merchant Shipping Notice' means a Notice described as such and issued by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency, and includes a reference to any such document amending or replacing that Notice which is considered by the Secretary of State to be relevant from time to time: Merchant Shipping (Domestic Passenger Ships) (Safety Management Code) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3209, reg 2. As to the Secretary of State see PARA 38; and as to the Maritime and Coastguard Agency see PARA 56.

3 The Merchant Shipping (Domestic Passenger Ships) (Safety Management Code) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3209, apply to passenger ships (other than ships engaged on international voyages) which are categorised as follows:

921 (1) Class III (ships engaged only on voyages in the course of which they are at no time more than 70 miles by sea from their point of departure nor more than 18 miles from the coast of the United Kingdom, and which are at sea only in favourable weather and during restricted periods) (see reg 3(1), Table);

922 (2) Class IV (ships engaged only on voyages in Category A, B, C or D waters) (see reg 3(1), Table);

- 923 (3) Class V (ships engaged only on voyages in Category A, B or C waters) (see reg 3(1), Table);
- 924 (4) Class VI (ships engaged only on voyages, carrying not more than 250 passengers, to sea or in Category A, B, C or D waters, in all cases in favourable weather and during restricted periods, in the course of which the ships are at no time more than 15 miles, exclusive of any Category A, B, C or D waters, from their point of departure nor more than three miles from land) (see reg 3(1), Table);
- 925 (5) Class VI(A) (ships carrying not more than 50 passengers for a distance of not more than six miles on voyages to or from isolated communities on the islands or coast of the United Kingdom and which do not proceed for a distance of more than three miles from land) (see reg 3(1), Table).

As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 17 note 3. For these purposes, 'passenger ship' means a ship carrying more than 12 passengers and propelled by electricity or other mechanical power; 'passenger' means any person carried in a ship except a person employed or engaged in any capacity on board the ship on the business of the ship, a person on board the ship either in pursuance of the obligation laid upon the master to carry shipwrecked, distressed or other persons, or by reasons of any circumstances that neither the master nor the company could have prevented, and a child under one year of age; and 'restricted period' means a period falling wholly within the limits from 1 April to 31 October (both dates inclusive), and between one hour before sunrise and one hour after sunset in the case of ships fitted with navigation lights conforming to the Merchant Shipping (Distress Signals and Prevention of Collisions) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/75 (as to which see PARA 715 et seq) and between sunrise and sunset in the case of any other ships: Merchant Shipping (Domestic Passenger Ships) (Safety Management Code) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3209, reg 2. 'Category A, B, C or D waters' means the waters specified as such in Merchant Shipping Notice 1776(M), and cognate expressions are to be construed accordingly: Merchant Shipping (Domestic Passenger Ships) (Safety Management Code) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3209, reg 2. Merchant Shipping Notice 1776(M) (Categorisation of Waters: Notice to Owners, Operators and Masters) (March 2003) is published by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency and it categorises United Kingdom waters which are not regarded as 'sea' for the purposes of merchant shipping legislation (excepting marine pollution). As to the classification of categories of passenger ship generally see PARA 599 note 4.

The Merchant Shipping (Domestic Passenger Ships) (Safety Management Code) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3209, do not apply to those companies and ships to which EC Council Regulation 3051/95 of 8 December 1995 on the safety management of roll-on/roll-off passenger ferries (ro-ro ferries) (OJ L320, 30.12.1995, p 14) (as to which see PARA 632) applies: Merchant Shipping (Domestic Passenger Ships) (Safety Management Code) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3209, reg 3(2). Nor do those regulations apply to a high speed craft as defined in the Merchant Shipping (High Speed Craft) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/302 (see PARA 614 et seq): Merchant Shipping (Domestic Passenger Ships) (Safety Management Code) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3209, reg 3(3) (added by SI 2004/302).

4 Merchant Shipping (Domestic Passenger Ships) (Safety Management Code) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3209, reg 5.

5 For these purposes, 'Domestic Ship Safety Management Certificate' means a certificate issued by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency in accordance with the Merchant Shipping (Domestic Passenger Ships) (Safety Management Code) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3209; and 'valid Domestic Ship Safety Management Certificate' means such a certificate which has not expired, or ceased to be valid in accordance with reg 6(3) (see note 6) (or which having so ceased to be valid has subsequently been endorsed as valid in accordance with reg 6(4) (see note 6)), and which is not suspended in accordance with reg 9 (as to which see the text and notes 11, 12): reg 2.

6 Merchant Shipping (Domestic Passenger Ships) (Safety Management Code) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3209, reg 6(5). As to the issue of Domestic Ship Safety Management Certificates see reg 6(1), (2); as to when such a certificate may cease to be valid see reg 6(3); and as to the endorsement of a certificate which has ceased to be valid see reg 6(4).

7 Merchant Shipping (Domestic Passenger Ships) (Safety Management Code) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3209, reg 7.

8 In all or any of the provisions of the Merchant Shipping (Domestic Passenger Ships) (Safety Management Code) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3209: see reg 4(1).

9 Merchant Shipping (Domestic Passenger Ships) (Safety Management Code) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3209, reg 4(1). The Secretary of State may, on giving reasonable notice, alter or cancel any exemption granted under reg 4(1): reg 4(2).

10 See the Merchant Shipping (Domestic Passenger Ships) (Safety Management Code) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3209, reg 8.

11 For these purposes, 'authorised person' means a surveyor of ships or person authorised by the Secretary of State to carry out audits and inspections for the purpose of the Merchant Shipping (Domestic Passenger Ships) (Safety Management Code) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3209: reg 2.

12 See the Merchant Shipping (Domestic Passenger Ships) (Safety Management Code) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3209, reg 9.

13 See the Merchant Shipping (Domestic Passenger Ships) (Safety Management Code) Regulations 2001, SI 2001/3209, reg 10; and PARA 1180.

Halsbury's Laws of England/SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW (VOLUME 93 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-590; VOLUME 94 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 591-1254)/7. SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/ (1) SAFETY AND HEALTH ON SHIPS/(iv) Health and Safety/C. GENERAL SAFETY REQUIREMENTS/634. Requirement for a safe manning document.

634. Requirement for a safe manning document.

It is the duty of the company¹ to ensure that in relation to every ship² of 500 gross tons or more³:

- 638 (1) a safe manning document⁴ is in force in respect of the ship and the manning of the ship⁵;
- 639 (2) the safe manning document is kept on board the ship at all times⁶; and
- 640 (3) the manning of the ship is maintained at all times to at least the levels specified in the safe manning document⁷.

The master of any such ship⁸ must ensure that the ship does not proceed to sea unless there is on board a valid safe manning document issued in respect of the ship and the manning of the ship complies with that document⁹.

It is the duty of a company applying for a safe manning document in respect of any United Kingdom ship to submit to the Maritime and Coastguard Agency proposals as to the numbers and grade of personnel it considers should be carried so that the ship would be safely manned if it proceeded to sea on any intended voyages¹⁰; and it is the duty of the company after the issue of a safe manning document to inform the Maritime and Coastguard Agency as soon as any of the circumstances which are pertinent to that safe manning document change, for the purpose of enabling the Maritime and Coastguard Agency to review the document's continuing validity or approve fresh proposals from the company¹¹.

Any company which, or any master who, contravenes the requirements imposed on him in relation to the safe manning document commits an offence¹²; and, in any case where it is found in relation to a ship that there is any such contravention, the ship may be detained¹³.

1 As to the meaning of 'company' for these purposes see PARA 497 note 2.

2 The Merchant Shipping (Safe Manning, Hours of Work and Watchkeeping) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/1320, apply to sea-going ships which are United Kingdom ships (wherever they are) and other ships when in United Kingdom waters, except fishing vessels, pleasure craft as defined in the Merchant Shipping (Vessels in Commercial Use for Sport or Pleasure) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2771, reg 2 (see PARA 609) and which are less than 80 gross tons or under 24 metres in length, and vessels to which the Merchant Shipping (Safe Manning, Hours of Work and Watchkeeping) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/1320, do not apply by virtue of the Merchant Shipping (Vessels in Commercial Use for Sport or Pleasure) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2771, reg 5(3) (see PARA 611): Merchant Shipping (Safe Manning, Hours of Work and Watchkeeping) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/1320, reg 3 (amended by SI 1997/1911); Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b). For these purposes, 'sea-going' means going beyond the limits of waters of category A, B, C and D as categorised in Merchant Shipping Notice 1776(M), where 'Merchant Shipping Notice' means a Notice described as such and issued by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency, and any reference to a particular Merchant Shipping Notice includes any amendment to that Notice which the Secretary of State considers relevant from time to time and specifies in a Merchant Shipping Notice: see the Merchant Shipping (Safe Manning, Hours of Work and Watchkeeping) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/1320, reg 2(1), (2). Merchant Shipping Notice 1776(M) (Categorisation of Waters: Notice to Owners, Operators and Masters) (March 2003) is published by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency and it categorises United Kingdom waters which are not regarded as 'sea' for the purposes of merchant shipping legislation (excepting marine pollution). As to the Secretary of State see PARA 38; and as to the Maritime and Coastguard Agency see PARA 56.

3 Merchant Shipping (Safe Manning, Hours of Work and Watchkeeping) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/1320, reg 5(1). The Secretary of State may grant, on such terms, if any, as he may specify, exemptions from all or any provisions of the Merchant Shipping (Safe Manning, Hours of Work and Watchkeeping) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/1320, for classes of cases or individual cases, and may alter or cancel any exemptions so granted: reg 18 (amended by SI 2000/484).

4 For these purposes, 'safe manning document' means a document, described as such, issued, in the case of a United Kingdom ship by the Secretary of State, and in the case of any other ship by or on behalf of the government of the state whose flag the ship is entitled to fly: Merchant Shipping (Safe Manning, Hours of Work and Watchkeeping) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/1320, reg 2(1).

7 Merchant Shipping (Safe Manning, Hours of Work and Watchkeeping) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/1320, reg 5(1)(c).

8 In any ship to which the Merchant Shipping (Safe Manning, Hours of Work and Watchkeeping) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/1320, reg 5 applies (see note 2): see reg 5(2).

9 Merchant Shipping (Safe Manning, Hours of Work and Watchkeeping) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/1320, reg 5(2). A person authorised by the Secretary of State may inspect any ship which is not a United Kingdom ship (see reg 15(1)); and if an authorised person finds, on inspection, a failure to comply with the safe manning document, he must notify in writing the master of the ship and, in the case of a ship registered outside the United Kingdom, the nearest maritime, consular or diplomatic representative of the flag state (Merchant Shipping (Safe Manning, Hours of Work and Watchkeeping) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/1320, reg 15(2), (3)(b)).

10 Merchant Shipping (Safe Manning, Hours of Work and Watchkeeping) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/1320, reg 5(3)(a). In preparing such proposals the company must take into account any guidance issued by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency: reg 5(3)(b).

11 Merchant Shipping (Safe Manning, Hours of Work and Watchkeeping) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/1320, reg 5(3)(c).

635. Watchkeeping arrangements.

The master and chief engineer of any sea-going ship which is a United Kingdom ship (wherever it is)¹, and any other ship when in United Kingdom waters (with certain exceptions)², must ensure that the watchkeeping arrangements for the ship are adequate for maintaining safe navigational and engineering watches³. The master of any ship which is safely moored or safely at anchor under normal circumstances in port also must arrange for an appropriate and effective watch to be maintained⁴; and if his ship is carrying hazardous cargo⁵ and is in port, even when safely moored or safely at anchor, he must, in addition to any such watchkeeping arrangements⁶:

- 641 (1) in the case of a ship carrying hazardous cargo in bulk, ensure that a safe deck watch and safe engineering watch are maintained by the ready availability on board of a duly qualified officer or officers, and where appropriate ratings⁷; and
- 642 (2) in the case of a ship carrying hazardous cargo other than in bulk, ensure that in organising safe watchkeeping arrangements he takes account of the nature, quantity, packing and stowage of the hazardous cargo and of any special conditions on board, afloat and ashore⁸.

Any master, or any chief engineer, who contravenes the requirement imposed on him to make proper watchkeeping arrangements commits an offence⁹; and, in any case where it is found in relation to a ship that there is any such contravention, the ship may be detained¹⁰.

The text refers to arrangements being made having regard to the Seafarers' Training, Certification and Watchkeeping Code (the 'STCW Code') (Section A) adopted by the 1995 Conference of Parties to the International Convention on Standards of Training, Certification and Watchkeeping for Seafarers 1978 (London, 1 December 1978 to 30 November 1979; TS 50 (1984); Cmnd 9266) (the 'STCW Convention') (as to which see PARA 8): see the Merchant Shipping (Safe Manning, Hours of Work and Watchkeeping) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/1320, regs 2(1), 11. Any reference to the STCW Code or the STCW Convention includes any amendment to that Convention which the Secretary of State considers relevant from time to time and specifies in a Merchant Shipping Notice, where 'Merchant Shipping Notice' means a Notice described as such and issued by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency: see the Merchant Shipping (Safe Manning, Hours of Work and Watchkeeping) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/1320, reg 2(1), (2). As to the Secretary of State see PARA 38; and as to the Maritime and Coastguard Agency see PARA 56.

The Secretary of State may grant, on such terms, if any, as he may specify, exemptions from all or any provisions of the Merchant Shipping (Safe Manning, Hours of Work and Watchkeeping) Regulations 1997, SI

1997/1320, for classes of cases or individual cases, and may alter or cancel any exemptions so granted: reg 18 (amended by SI 2000/484).

A person authorised by the Secretary of State may inspect any ship which is not a United Kingdom ship in order to assess the ability of the master or seamen in the ship to maintain the watchkeeping standards required by the Merchant Shipping (Safe Manning, Hours of Work and Watchkeeping) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/1320, where there are specified grounds for believing that such standards are not being maintained (see reg 15(1)(b) (amended by SI 2000/484)); and if an authorised person finds, on inspection:

926 (1) a failure of navigational or engineering watch arrangements to conform to the requirements specified for the ship by the competent authority of the country in which the ship is registered (see the Merchant Shipping (Safe Manning, Hours of Work and Watchkeeping) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/1320, reg 15(3)(c));

927 (2) an absence on a watch of a person qualified to operate equipment essential to safe navigation, safety radio communications or the prevention of marine pollution (see reg 15(3)(d)); or

928 (3) an inability of the master to provide adequately rested persons for the first watch at the commencement of a voyage and for subsequent relieving watches (see reg 15(3)(e)),

he must notify in writing the master of the ship and in the case of a ship registered outside the United Kingdom, the nearest maritime, consular or diplomatic representative of the flag State (Merchant Shipping (Safe Manning, Hours of Work and Watchkeeping) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/1320, reg 15(2)).

4 See the Merchant Shipping (Safe Manning, Hours of Work and Watchkeeping) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/1320, reg 12. For these purposes, 'specified by the Secretary of State' means specified in Merchant Shipping Notice 1767(M); and any reference to a particular Merchant Shipping Notice includes any amendment to that Notice which the Secretary of State considers relevant from time to time and specifies in a Merchant Shipping Notice: see the Merchant Shipping (Safe Manning, Hours of Work and Watchkeeping) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/1320, reg 2(1), (2). See note 3.

5 For these purposes, 'hazardous cargo' means cargo which is or may be explosive, flammable, toxic, health-threatening or environment-polluting: Merchant Shipping (Safe Manning, Hours of Work and Watchkeeping) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/1320, reg 2(1).

6 See the Merchant Shipping (Safe Manning, Hours of Work and Watchkeeping) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/1320, reg 13(1). Heads (1) and (2) in the text refer to watchkeeping arrangements in addition to any required under reg 12 (see the text and note 4) (see reg 13(1)); and any such watchkeeping arrangements must take full account of the principles and requirements specified by the Secretary of State (reg 13(2)). 636. Requirement to limit exposure of workers to risks arising from noise.

Regulations impose duties on employers to protect the health and safety of workers who may be exposed to risk from noise as a result of their work¹. In particular, provision is made for:

- 643 (1) action values and limit values for daily and weekly exposure to noise²;
- 644 (2) risk assessment³;
- 645 (3) elimination or, where elimination is not reasonably practicable, reduction of exposure to noise, actions to be taken at action values and limit values, and a prohibition on exceeding limit values⁴;
- 646 (4) provision of individual hearing protection⁵;
- 647 (5) information, instruction and training⁶;
- 648 (6) health surveillance⁷;
- 649 (7) consultation with workers⁸;
- 650 (8) the grant of exemptions by the Secretary of State⁹; and
- 651 (9) offences, detention, inspection and penalties¹⁰.

1 See the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Control of Noise at Work) Regulations 2007, SI 2007/3075. The regulations apply in relation to United Kingdom ships: reg 4(1). However, where a ship is being used in the course of public service activities or activities for the purpose of civil protection services, and characteristics peculiar to those activities inevitably conflict with a provision of the regulations, that provision does not apply in relation to that ship to the extent of that conflict: reg 4(2). In such a case, there is in relation to that ship a duty on the employer to ensure, so far as is reasonably practicable, the health and safety of workers who are or who are likely to be exposed to risks from noise as a result of their work: see reg 4(3).

The provisions of the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Health and Safety at Work) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2962 (see PARA 623) and the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Provision and Use of Work Equipment) Regulations 2006, SI 2006/2183 (see PARA 646) continue to apply to activities to which the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Control of Noise at Work) Regulations 2007, SI 2007/3075, apply, except where the latter regulations contain more stringent or specific provisions (when such provisions must apply instead): see reg 4(4). However, the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Control of Noise at Work) Regulations 2007, SI 2007/3075, do not apply to activities to which the Control of Noise at Work Regulations 2005, SI 2005/1643 (see HEALTH AND SAFETY AT WORK vol 53 (2009) PARAS 612-618) apply: see the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Control of Noise at Work) Regulations 2007, SI 2007/3075, reg 4(6).

637. Requirement to limit exposure of workers to risks arising from mechanical vibration.

Regulations impose duties on employers to protect the health and safety of workers who may be exposed to risk from mechanical vibration as a result of their work¹. In particular, provision is made for:

- 652 (1) action values and limit values for daily exposure to hand-arm and whole body vibration²;

638. Requirement to limit exposure of workers to risks related to exposure to carcinogens and mutagens.

Regulations impose duties on employers to protect workers from to risks related to exposure to carcinogens and mutagens¹.

¹ See the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Health and Safety at Work) (Carcinogens and Mutagens) Regulations 2007, SI 2007/3100.

Halsbury's Laws of England/SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW (VOLUME 93 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-590; VOLUME 94 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 591-1254)/7. SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/ (1) SAFETY AND HEALTH ON SHIPS/(iv) Health and Safety/C. GENERAL SAFETY REQUIREMENTS/639. Requirement to provide personal protective equipment and to use it properly.

639. Requirement to provide personal protective equipment and to use it properly.

Personal protective equipment¹ must be used when risks cannot be avoided or reduced to an acceptable level by means of systems of work that are safe and without risk to health or by means of collective protection or by other means which are in use equally or more effective².

The employer must ensure³:

- 660 (1) that the personal protective equipment required to be used⁴ is provided, and such personal protective equipment must be suitable⁵;
- 661 (2) that an assessment is made to identify those circumstances where risk to the health and safety of individual workers at work cannot be avoided or reduced by other means, and to identify the characteristics required of personal protective equipment in order to provide protection to workers from that risk⁶;
- 662 (3) that personal protective equipment is provided⁷ to a worker for his individual use⁸, that appropriate instructions for the proper use and maintenance of any such personal protective equipment is readily available to any worker required to use that equipment, and is comprehensible to him⁹, and that that personal protective equipment is properly stored and maintained, and is regularly inspected and, where appropriate, checked that it is in satisfactory working order¹⁰;
- 663 (4) that workers are provided with adequate and appropriate information, training and instruction¹¹.

The employer must take all reasonably practicable steps to ensure that any personal protective equipment so provided to workers¹² is used as instructed¹³; and every worker must use any personal protective equipment so provided to him and must follow any training in the use of the personal protective equipment which has been received by him and the instructions respecting that use, which also have been provided¹⁴.

Any contravention of the requirements relating to the provision of personal protective equipment is an offence¹⁵; and, in any case where it is found in relation to a ship that there is a failure to comply with those requirements, the ship may be detained¹⁶.

1 For these purposes, 'personal protective equipment' means all clothing and equipment designed to be worn or held by the worker for protection against one or more hazards likely to endanger his health or safety at work, and any addition or accessory designed for this purpose, with the exception of ordinary working clothes and uniforms which are not specifically designed to protect the health and safety of the worker, equipment provided for the purposes of fire-fighting or lifesaving, personal protective equipment worn or used by the military, the police and other public order agencies, personal protective equipment required for road transport, sports equipment, self-defence or deterrent equipment, or portable devices for detecting and signalling risk and nuisances: Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Personal Protective Equipment) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/2205, reg 2(2). 'Health and safety' includes the occupational health and safety of persons whilst on board the ship and whilst boarding or leaving the ship: reg 2(2).

2 Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Personal Protective Equipment) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/2205, reg 5.

The Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Personal Protective Equipment) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/2205, apply to all activities of workers on United Kingdom ships except when the activity of a worker is on a public service vessel or a vessel engaged in search and rescue, and when the characteristics of that activity inevitably conflict with a provision of the regulations; and in such a case there is a duty on the employer so far as is reasonably practicable to ensure the health and safety of the worker when performing that activity: reg 3(1). The Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Personal Protective Equipment) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/2205, do not apply to or in relation to the activities of a worker which are covered by the Personal Protective Equipment at Work Regulations 1992, SI 1992/2966 (as to which see HEALTH AND SAFETY AT WORK vol 52 (2009) PARA 523 et seq): Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Personal Protective Equipment) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/2205, reg 3(3). The provisions of reg 3(1), (3) apply to ships other than United Kingdom ships which are in United Kingdom waters: see reg 3(2). For these purposes, 'United Kingdom ship' means a ship which is a United Kingdom ship within the meaning of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 85(2) (see PARA 591 note 4), is a government ship within the meaning of s 308(4) (see PARA 20 note 3), or is a hovercraft registered under the Hovercraft Act 1968 (see PARA 390 et seq): Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Personal Protective Equipment) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/2205, reg 2(2). 'Public service vessel' means any vessel operated by and on behalf of a public body while it is carrying out the authorised functions of that body: reg 2(2).

3 Where a person on whom a duty is imposed by any provision of the Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Personal Protective Equipment) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/2205, does not have control of the matter to which the regulation relates because he does not have responsibility for the operation of the ship, then any duty imposed by that regulation also extends to any person who has control of that matter: reg 4.

5 Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Personal Protective Equipment) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/2205, reg 6(1). As to the meaning of 'suitable' for these purposes see reg 6(2). Personal protective equipment must be provided free of charge to the worker except that where use of the equipment is not exclusive to the work place, workers may be required to contribute towards the cost of personal protective equipment: reg 6(3).

6 Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Personal Protective Equipment) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/2205, reg 7(1). In accordance with the findings of such assessment as is mentioned in head (2) in the text, personal protective equipment which complies with the characteristics identified therein and which meets the standards specified as suitable under reg 6(2) (see note 5) must be provided: see reg 7(1). The assessment mentioned in head (2) in the text must be made before personal protective equipment is provided under the regulations (see reg 7(1)); and must be reviewed to take account of any changes to the factors on which it was based (reg 7(2)).

8 Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Personal Protective Equipment) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/2205, reg 8(1). Equipment may be provided for the use of more than one person if it is adjustable to fit all sizes, easily accessible and kept in clearly marked places, and maintained in a hygienic condition and repaired, decontaminated and replaced as necessary, so that it will not create any health or hygiene problems: reg 8(2).

11 Merchant Shipping and Fishing Vessels (Personal Protective Equipment) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/2205, reg 9(1). The information, training and instruction provided in accordance with head (4) in the text may include the organisation of demonstrations in the wearing of personal protective equipment, in respect of the risks against which the personal protective equipment is designed to provide protection, the circumstances in which it is to be used, and the correct use, maintenance and storage of the equipment: see reg 9(1). The information, training and instruction so provided is not adequate and appropriate unless it is comprehensible to the persons to whom it is provided: reg 9(2).

Safety regulations¹ may make provision with respect to the steps to be taken to prevent, detect and deal with outbreaks of fire on a ship².

Separate provision has been made by such regulations in relation to small ships³ and large ships⁴, and to certain other ships constructed on or after 1 July 2002⁵.

The Merchant Shipping (Fire Protection: Small Ships) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/1011, reg 1(7) (as so amended) is subject to the Merchant Shipping (Passenger Ships on Domestic Voyages) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/2687, reg 5 (see PARA 602 note 4) (which revokes the Merchant Shipping (Fire Protection: Small Ships) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/1011, in relation to passenger ships of Classes III, VI and VI(A) which are 24 metres or over in length and are existing ships, engaged on domestic voyages, for the purposes of those regulations): see the Merchant Shipping (Fire Protection: Small Ships) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/1011, reg 1(7) (as so amended).

Nor do the Merchant Shipping (Fire Protection: Small Ships) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/1011, apply to a commercial vessel which has been examined, and in respect of which a certificate has been issued, in accordance with the applicable Code of Practice, or to a vessel which is operating under the phase-in arrangements of the Code of Practice, as provided for under the Merchant Shipping (Vessels in Commercial Use for Sport or Pleasure) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2771: see PARAS 610, 611. The Merchant Shipping (Fire Protection: Large Ships) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/1012 (as so amended) apply to United Kingdom ships of Classes I, II, Class II(A) of 21.34 metres in length or over, and Classes VII, VII(A), VII(T), VIII, VIII(A), VIII(T), VIII(A)(T), IX, IX(A), IX(A)(T), XI and XII of 500 tons or over, wherever they may be, to other such ships while they are within United Kingdom waters, when engaged on international voyages, to other such ships when not engaged on international voyages, while they are within United Kingdom national waters and, where any requirement of the regulations relates to ships constructed on or after a certain date, then, to the extent the Secretary of State deems reasonable and practicable, the requirement will also apply in respect of any major repairs, alterations and modifications commenced on or after the date to ships constructed before that date: see reg 1(7) (amended by SI 2000/2687; SI 2003/1950; SI 2003/1951; SI 2004/302).

The Merchant Shipping (Fire Protection: Large Ships) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/1012, reg 1(7) (as so amended) is subject to the Merchant Shipping (Passenger Ships on Domestic Voyages) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/2687, reg 5 (see PARA 602 note 4) (which revokes the Merchant Shipping (Fire Protection: Large Ships) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/1012, in relation to passenger ships of Class II(A) which are 24 metres or over in length and are existing ships, engaged on domestic voyages, for the purposes of those regulations): see the Merchant Shipping (Fire Protection: Large Ships) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/1012, reg 1(7) (as so amended).

Nor do the Merchant Shipping (Fire Protection: Large Ships) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/1012, apply to a large commercial vessel which has been examined, and in respect of which appropriate certificates have been issued, in accordance with the Code of Practice, as provided for under the Merchant Shipping (Vessels in Commercial Use for Sport or Pleasure) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2771: see PARA 610.

5 See the Merchant Shipping (Fire Protection) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2950 (amended by SI 2005/2114). The Merchant Shipping (Fire Protection) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2950, apply to United Kingdom ships constructed on or after 1 July 2002, wherever they may be, and, while they are within United Kingdom waters, to non-United Kingdom ships constructed on or after 1 July 2002: reg 3(1). The regulations do not apply to vessels to which the Merchant Shipping (Fire Protection: Small Ships) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/1011 (see note 3) apply, vessels to which the Merchant Shipping (Passenger Ships on Domestic Voyages) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/2687 (see PARA 602) apply, vessels which have been examined, and in respect of which appropriate certificates have been issued, in accordance with the Code of Practice for Safety of Large Commercial Sailing and Motor Vessels referred to in the Merchant Shipping (Vessels in Commercial Use for Sport or Pleasure) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2771, reg 4 (see PARA 610), fishing vessels, high speed craft to which the Merchant Shipping (High Speed Craft) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/302 (see PARA 614 et seq) apply, non-United Kingdom ships which are warships, troopships, or other ships used only on government non-commercial service by the government of a state which has consented to be bound by the SOLAS Convention and ships not propelled by mechanical means, or sailing ships which proceed to sea and pleasure vessels (other than passenger ships) of 13.7 metres in length or over: see the Merchant Shipping (Fire Protection) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2950, reg 3(2). 'SOLAS Convention' means the International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea 1974 (London, 1 November 1974 to 1 July 1975; TS 46 (1980); Cmnd 7874), with Protocol (London, 1 June 1978 to 1 March 1979; TS 40 (1981); Cmnd 8277) (see PARA 8): see the Merchant Shipping (Fire Protection) Regulations 2003, SI 2003/2950, reg 2(1).

641. General safety of navigation requirements.

Regulations have been made¹ giving effect to the provisions of Chapter V of the International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea 1974 (the 'SOLAS Convention')², which identifies certain navigation safety services which should be provided by contracting governments and sets forth provisions of an operational nature applicable in general to ships and other vessels on all voyages.

Accordingly, the application of various provisions contained in Chapter V of the SOLAS Convention is made compulsory (in relation to ships of qualifying descriptions)³. Provision is made for offences and penalties to apply where various requirements are contravened⁴, and for the detention of a ship in any such case of non-compliance⁵.

1 See the Merchant Shipping (Safety of Navigation) Regulations 2002, SI 2002/1473 (amended by SI 2002/2626; SI 2004/302; SI 2004/2110; SI 2005/2114). The Merchant Shipping (Safety of Navigation) Regulations 2002, SI 2002/1473, apply to all United Kingdom ships wherever they may be and to all other ships while they are within United Kingdom waters: reg 4(1). However, the regulations do not apply to warships or naval auxiliaries, to ships, other than United Kingdom ships, which are owned or operated by an EEA state and used only on government non-commercial service, or to ships navigating solely the Great Lakes of North America and their connecting and tributary waters as far east as the lower exit of the St Lambert Lock at Montreal in the Province of Quebec, Canada: reg 4(2) (amended by SI 2004/2110). Nor do the Merchant Shipping (Safety of Navigation) Regulations 2002, SI 2002/1473, apply to ships, other than United Kingdom ships, which are owned or operated by a contracting government and used only on government non-commercial service: reg 4(2A) (added by SI 2004/2110). Various individual regulations are disapplied in relation to various specific categories of ship: see the Merchant Shipping (Safety of Navigation) Regulations 2002, SI 2002/1473, reg 4(2B)-(10) (reg 4(2B), (5A), (6A) added, reg 4(5) amended, by SI 2004/2110; the Merchant Shipping (Safety of Navigation) Regulations 2002, SI 2002/1473, reg 4(4) amended by SI 2004/302).

The Merchant Shipping (Safety of Navigation) Regulations 2002, SI 2002/1473, do not apply in relation to passenger ships of Class A, B, C or D of 24 metres or over in length engaged on domestic voyages: see the Merchant Shipping (Passenger Ships on Domestic Voyages) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/2687, reg 5; and PARA 602 note 4.

2 See the International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea 1974 (London, 1 November 1974 to 1 July 1975; TS 46 (1980); Cmnd 7874), with Protocol (London, 1 June 1978 to 1 March 1979; TS 40 (1981); Cmnd 8277) (see PARA 8).

3 See the Merchant Shipping (Safety of Navigation) Regulations 2002, SI 2002/1473, reg 5. Supplementary provision is made by reg 6, Sch 3. The Secretary of State may grant exemptions from various provisions of the SOLAS Convention Ch V (see the Merchant Shipping (Safety of Navigation) Regulations 2002, SI 2002/1473, regs 7, 8); and he may grant approvals, as respects a United Kingdom ship, where a regulation in the SOLAS Convention Ch V refers to any thing requiring the approval of the Administration, to be done to the satisfaction of the Administration, or to be acceptable to the Administration (see the Merchant Shipping (Safety of Navigation) Regulations 2002, SI 2002/1473, reg 9).

SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/ (1) SAFETY AND HEALTH ON SHIPS/(iv) Health and Safety/E. NAVIGATION/642. Procedure allowing radio stations to receive signals indicating dangers to navigation.

642. Procedure allowing radio stations to receive signals indicating dangers to navigation.

Safety regulations¹ may make provision with respect to the steps to be taken, in a case where danger of any kind occurs or is suspected on a ship, for removing or reducing the danger and for warning persons who are not on the ship of the danger or suspected danger².

Accordingly, every person in charge of a controlled station for wireless telegraphy³ must, on receiving the signal prescribed under safety regulations relating to dangers to navigation⁴, which indicates that a message is about to be sent under those regulations, refrain from sending messages for a time sufficient to allow other stations to receive the message, and, if so required by the Secretary of State, must transmit the message in such manner as may be required by the Secretary of State⁵. Compliance with this requirement⁶ is deemed to be a condition of every wireless telegraphy licence⁷.

1 As to the meaning of 'safety regulations' see PARA 591.

2 See the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 85(3)(j); and PARA 591.

3 For these purposes, 'controlled station for wireless telegraphy' means such a station controlled by the Secretary of State or by the Office of Communications; 'controlled' includes controlled by means of a licence granted by the Office of Communications; and 'station for wireless telegraphy' has the same meaning as 'wireless telegraphy station' in the Wireless Telegraphy Act 2006 (as to which see TELECOMMUNICATIONS AND BROADCASTING): Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 91(7) (amended by the Communications Act 2003 s 406(1), Sch 17 para 132; and the Wireless Telegraphy Act 2006 s 123, Sch 7 para 15). As to the Secretary of State see PARA 38. As to the Office of Communications ('OFCOM') see TELECOMMUNICATIONS AND BROADCASTING vol 97 (2010) PARA 2 et seq; and as to licences granted by OFCOM see TELECOMMUNICATIONS AND BROADCASTING vol 45(1) (2005 Reissue) PARA 447 et seq.

6 I.e compliance with the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 91(5) (see the text and notes 3-5): see s 91(6).

7 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 91(6). For these purposes, 'wireless telegraphy licence' has the same meaning as in the Wireless Telegraphy Act 2006 (see TELECOMMUNICATIONS AND BROADCASTING): Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 91(7) (definition added by the Wireless Telegraphy Act 2006 Sch 7 para 15).

Halsbury's Laws of England/SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW (VOLUME 93 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-590; VOLUME 94 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 591-1254)/7. SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/ (1) SAFETY AND HEALTH ON SHIPS/(iv) Health and Safety/E. NAVIGATION/643. Radio installations.

643. Radio installations.

The requirements relating to radio installations¹ to be complied with by ships² cover:

- 664 (1) GMDSS ships³; and
- 665 (2) non-GMDSS ships⁴, including: (a) VHF radiotelephony⁵; (b) radiotelephony⁶; (c) radiotelegraphy⁷; and (d) radio equipment for lifeboats and survival craft⁸.

There are also powers of enforcement⁹.

Separate provision is made in relation to fishing vessels¹⁰.

1 The Merchant Shipping (Radio Installations) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2070. For these purposes, 'radio installation' means any radio installation provided on board a ship in compliance with the Merchant Shipping (Radio Installations) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2070, including its associated antennas, interconnecting circuits and, where appropriate, sources of electrical energy: reg 2. The regulations apply to sea-going United Kingdom ships wherever they may be (except while they are within the Great Lakes of North America and their connecting and tributary waters as far east as the lower exit of the St Lambert Lock at Montreal in the Province of Quebec, Canada) and to other seagoing ships while they are within United Kingdom waters: reg 3(1) (amended by SI 2000/2687). The Merchant Shipping (Radio Installations) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2070, do not apply to troopships not registered in the United Kingdom, ships not propelled by mechanical means, pleasure vessels, fishing vessels, cargo ships of less than 300 tons, craft to which the Merchant Shipping (High Speed Craft) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/302 (see PARA 614 et seq) apply and ships which are passenger ships of Class A, B, C or D as defined in the Merchant Shipping (Passenger Ships on Domestic Voyages) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/2687 (see PARA 602 note 4), which are new ships, engaged on domestic voyages, for the purposes of those regulations: Merchant Shipping (Radio Installations) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2070, reg 3(2) (amended by SI 2000/2687; SI 2004/302). Accordingly, the Merchant Shipping (Radio Installations) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2070, have been revoked in relation to passenger ships of Class A, B, C or D of 24 metres or over in length engaged on domestic voyages (see the Merchant Shipping (Passenger Ships on Domestic Voyages) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/2687, reg 5; and PARA 602 note 4); and they do not apply to a commercial vessel which has been examined, and in respect of which a certificate has been issued, in accordance with the applicable Code of Practice, or to a vessel which is operating under the phase-in arrangements of the Code of Practice, as provided for under the Merchant Shipping (Vessels in Commercial Use for Sport or Pleasure) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2771 (see PARAS 610, 611).

2 As to the Secretary of State's power to permit the provision of equivalent equipment and exemptions see reg 5; and as to the performance standards to be met by equipment that is required to be provided under the regulations see reg 6 (amended by SI 1999/1957). Nothing in the Merchant Shipping (Radio Installations) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2070, prohibits any ship, survival craft or person in distress from using any means at their disposal to attract attention, make known their position or obtain help: reg 4.

3 See the Merchant Shipping (Radio Installations) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2070, Pt II (regs 7-20) which makes provision in relation to: functional requirements (reg 8); installation, location and control of radio equipment (reg 9); installation of a distress panel (reg 10); radio equipment to be provided for all sea areas (reg 11, Sch 1 (satellite EPIRBs)); additional radio equipment to be provided for area A1 ships (reg 12); additional radio equipment to be provided for area A2 ships (reg 13); additional radio equipment to be provided for area A3 ships (reg 14); additional radio equipment to be provided for area A4 ships (reg 15), radio watches (reg 16); sources of energy (reg 17); serviceability and maintenance requirements (reg 18, Sch 2 (equipment tests and reserve power checks)); radio personnel (reg 19); radio records (reg 20, Sch 3 (radio log)); and interpretation (reg 7). For these purposes, 'sea area A1' and 'sea area A2' mean an area specified as such in the Admiralty List of Radio Signals, being the document so entitled published by the Hydrographer of the Navy and any subsequent List containing the like information which the Hydrographer of the Navy considers relevant from time to time which replaces the Admiralty List of Radio Signals or replaces any subsequent List containing the like information (and a reference to any such List includes a reference to any Admiralty Notice to Mariners amending the same which the Hydrographer of the Navy considers relevant from time to time); 'sea area A3' means an area (excluding sea areas A1 and A2) within the coverage of an INMARSAT geostationary satellite in which continuous alerting is available; and 'sea area A4' means any area of the sea which is not sea area A1, A2 or A3; see reg 2. 'INMARSAT' means the Organisation established by the Convention on the International Maritime Satellite Organisation (with Operating Agreement) (London, 3 September 1976; TS 94 (1979); Cmnd 7722); see the Merchant Shipping (Radio Installations) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2070, reg 2. As to the INMARSAT Convention see PARA 8; and TELECOMMUNICATIONS vol 97 (2010) PARA 63. 'GMDSS ship' means a ship to which the Merchant Shipping (Radio Installations) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2070, Pt II applies; and 'GMDSS' means the Global Maritime Distress and Safety System; reg 2. GMDSS is the International Maritime Organisation's world-wide network of automated emergency communications for vessels at sea. As to the International Maritime Organisation see PARA 13.

4 See the Merchant Shipping (Radio Installations) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2070, Pt III (regs 21-27) which makes provision in relation to: provision of radio installations (reg 22); interference with reception and with other installations (reg 23); testing of equipment (reg 24, Sch 4 (equipment tests and battery and reserve power checks)); charging of batteries (reg 25); spare parts, tools and testing equipment (reg 26); serviceability and maintenance of radio installation (reg 27); and interpretation (reg 21 (amended by SI 2001/1638)).

5 See the Merchant Shipping (Radio Installations) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2070, Pt III (regs 28-32) which makes provision in relation to: VHF radiotelephone stations (reg 28); provision of antennas (reg 29); supply of electrical energy (reg 30); radiotelephone operators using the VHF radiotelephone installation (reg 31); and VHF radio watch (reg 32).

6 See the Merchant Shipping (Radio Installations) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2070, Pt III (regs 33-39) which makes provision in relation to: radiotelephone stations (reg 33); provision of antennas (reg 34); the range of radiotelephone transmitters (reg 35); supply of electrical energy (reg 36); radiotelephone operators (reg 37, Sch 5 (additional knowledge and training requirements for radiotelephone operators and radio operators)); radio watch (reg 38); and the radio log in respect of radiotelephone ships (reg 39, Sch 6 (radio log in respect of radiotelephone ships) (reg 39 amended by SI 2001/1638)).

7 See the Merchant Shipping (Radio Installations) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2070, Pt III (regs 40-47) which makes provision in relation to: radiotelegraph stations (reg 40); radiotelegraph operating rooms (reg 41); provision of antennas (reg 42); range of radiotelegraph transmitters (reg 43); supply of electrical energy (reg 44); radio officers (reg 45, Sch 5 (additional knowledge and training requirements for radiotelephone operators and radio operators) (reg 45 amended by SI 2001/1638)); radio watch (Merchant Shipping (Radio Installations) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2070, reg 46); and radio log in respect of radiotelegraph ships (reg 47, Sch 7 (radio log in respect of radiotelegraph ships) (reg 47 amended by SI 2001/1638)).

8 See the Merchant Shipping (Radio Installations) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2070, Pt III (reg 48).

9 See the Merchant Shipping (Radio Installations) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2070, Pt IV (regs 49-51) which makes provision in relation to: the power to detain (reg 49); penalties (reg 50); and defences (reg 51).

644. Weighing of goods vehicles etc before loading on to classes of ro/ro passenger ship.

Unless their weight has been previously determined, certain goods vehicles and trailers must not be loaded on to specified classes of ro/ro passenger ship, if the ship is a United Kingdom ship¹. This requirement applies also to ro/ro passenger ships which are operating as ships of those classes but which are not United Kingdom ships, while they are in a port in the United Kingdom².

1 See the Merchant Shipping (Weighing of Goods Vehicles and other Cargo) Regulations 1988, SI 1988/1275 (amended by SI 1989/270). The Merchant Shipping (Weighing of Goods Vehicles and other Cargo) Regulations 1988, SI 1988/1275, apply to any ro/ro passenger ship which is operating as a ship of Class II or II(A) within the meaning of the Merchant Shipping (Passenger Ship Construction: Ships of Classes I, II and II(A)) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2514 (see PARA 599 note 4) and is a United Kingdom ship: Merchant Shipping (Weighing of Goods Vehicles and other Cargo) Regulations 1988, SI 1988/1275, reg 1(4); Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b). For these purposes, 'ro/ro passenger ship' means a passenger ship provided with cargo or vehicle spaces in which cargo or vehicles can be loaded and unloaded in a horizontal direction: Merchant Shipping (Weighing of Goods Vehicles and other Cargo) Regulations 1988, SI 1988/1275, reg 1(2).

2 See the Merchant Shipping (Weighing of Goods Vehicles and other Cargo) (Application to non-UK Ships) Regulations 1989, SI 1989/568, reg 2. As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 17 note 3.

646. Safety requirements relating to ship's machinery and equipment.

Safety regulations¹ may make provision with respect to the machinery and equipment of a ship and the use of such machinery and equipment².

The regulations so made impose health and safety requirements with respect to: (1) the provision and use of work equipment on merchant ships and fishing vessels³; (2) lifting operations and the provision and use of lifting equipment on merchant ships and fishing vessels⁴; and (3) ensuring the safety of navigation (pursuant to which certain requirements are set down in relation to the equipment used in navigation)⁵.

Separate provision is made to implement the EC Council Directive on Marine Equipment⁶.

H. PREVENTION OF COLLISIONS

649. Distress signals used to prevent collisions.

Halsbury's Laws of England/SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW (VOLUME 93 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-590; VOLUME 94 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 591-1254)/7. SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/ (1) SAFETY AND HEALTH ON SHIPS/(iv) Health and Safety/I. COUNTING AND REGISTERING PASSENGERS/(A) Procedure for Counting and Registering Passengers/650. System for counting passengers on board.

I. COUNTING AND REGISTERING PASSENGERS

(A) PROCEDURE FOR COUNTING AND REGISTERING PASSENGERS

650. System for counting passengers on board.

The owner of any passenger ship¹ must ensure that, in respect of any United Kingdom passenger ship when it leaves any landing point² and in respect of any other passenger ship when it leaves any landing point in the United Kingdom, there is a system capable of counting all persons³ on board which⁴:

- 673 (1) in the case of a passenger ship of Class II or II(A)⁵, in respect of passengers, uses a system of individual passenger boarding cards⁶;
- 674 (2) conforms to the prescribed requirements⁷ and the appropriate Merchant Shipping Notice⁸; and
- 675 (3) is approved by the Secretary of State⁹.

The system of counting so established¹⁰ must be such that:

- 676 (a) all persons boarding such a ship at a landing point at the beginning of a voyage¹¹ are counted individually on, or just prior to, boarding¹² and, as the case may be: (i) all persons disembarking at subsequent landing points, during the course of a voyage, are counted individually as they disembark¹³; (ii) all persons boarding at subsequent landing points, during the course of a voyage, are counted individually on, or just prior to, boarding¹⁴; and (iii) the number of persons remaining on board at each landing point is determined¹⁵; or
- 677 (b) the number of persons is determined and recorded according to an alternative method approved by the Secretary of State, which must be of equivalent effectiveness to the system set out in head (a) above¹⁶;

If the counting system so established in respect of a passenger ship¹⁷ includes a system of individual passenger boarding cards no passenger is to be permitted to board the ship unless he has been issued with an individual boarding card¹⁸.

Immediately before a passenger ship leaves any landing point the total number of persons on board at that time as determined by means of the counting system must be communicated to the master of the ship and the passenger registrar¹⁹.

If, in respect of any person on board a ship, any person has declared a need for special care or assistance in emergency situations, the owner must ensure that such information is properly recorded and communicated to the master of the ship²⁰.

No passenger ship is to leave any landing point if:

- 678 (A) the total number of persons on board has not been communicated to the master of the ship and the passenger registrar²¹ or the owner has not properly

- recorded and communicated to the master of the ship any person's declared need for special care or assistance in emergency situations²²; or
- 679 (B) the total number of persons on board the ship exceeds the number of persons the ship is permitted to carry²³.

The arrangements made in pursuance of the requirements for counting all persons on board²⁴ must be described in written instructions which are to be kept on board the ship at all times in the custody of the master²⁵.

Additional requirements apply to voyages of more than 20 miles²⁶; and, in respect of any passenger ship which is not a Community ship²⁷ on any voyage from any landing point outside the territory of the European Community to the United Kingdom the owner must make specified information²⁸ readily available to the appropriate search and rescue services²⁹ for the purposes of search and rescue in the event of an emergency or in the aftermath of an accident involving the ship³⁰.

1 For these purposes, 'passenger ship' means any ship carrying more than 12 passengers; and 'ship' includes hovercraft: Merchant Shipping (Counting and Registration of Persons on Board Passenger Ships) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/1869, reg 3(1). Where a ship is managed or operated by a person other than the owner (whether on behalf of the owner or some other person, or on his own behalf), a reference to the owner is to be construed as including a reference to that other person: reg 3(2).

The Merchant Shipping (Counting and Registration of Persons on Board Passenger Ships) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/1869, apply to any United Kingdom passenger ship wherever it may be and any other passenger ship while it is within United Kingdom waters: reg 4(1). However, the regulations do not apply to any ship of war, any troop ship, or any pleasure yacht (unless it is or will be crewed and carry more than 12 passengers for commercial purposes): reg 4(2). For these purposes, 'United Kingdom passenger ship' means a passenger ship which is a United Kingdom ship: reg 3(1). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 17 note 3.

The regulations implement EC Council Directive 98/41 of 18 June 1998 (OJ L188, 02.07.1998, p 35) on the registration of persons sailing on board passenger ships operating to or from ports of the Member States of the Community (amended by EC Directive 2002/84 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 5 November 2002 (OJ L324, 29.11.2002, p 53)) and the International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea 1974 (London, 1 November 1974 to 1 July 1975; TS 46 (1980); Cmnd 7874), with Protocol (London, 1 June 1978 to 1 March 1979; TS 40 (1981); Cmnd 8277) (as to which see PARA 8) Ch III.

2 For these purposes, 'landing point' means any berth, excursion point, floating pier or stage, link span, pier, port, stop or anchorage point from or to where passengers are embarked or disembarked: Merchant Shipping (Counting and Registration of Persons on Board Passenger Ships) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/1869, reg 3(1).

3 For these purposes, 'person' means any person on board a ship irrespective of their age: Merchant Shipping (Counting and Registration of Persons on Board Passenger Ships) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/1869, reg 3(1).

8 Merchant Shipping (Counting and Registration of Persons on Board Passenger Ships) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/1869, reg 5(1)(b). For these purposes, 'Merchant Shipping Notice' means a Notice described as such, issued by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency; and a reference to any particular Merchant Shipping Notice includes a reference to any document amending or replacing that Notice: reg 3(1). Accordingly, the text refers to Merchant Shipping Notice 1794(M+F): see the Merchant Shipping (Counting and Registration of Persons on Board Passenger Ships) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/1869, reg 5(1)(b). 17 Is established by the Merchant Shipping (Counting and Registration of Persons on Board Passenger Ships) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/1869, reg 5(1) (see the text and notes 1-9): see reg 5(3).

18 Merchant Shipping (Counting and Registration of Persons on Board Passenger Ships) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/1869, reg 5(3).

19 Merchant Shipping (Counting and Registration of Persons on Board Passenger Ships) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/1869, reg 5(4). For these purposes, 'passenger registrar' means the person appointed by the owner of a ship pursuant to reg 8(1)(b) (see PARA 651): reg 3(1). As to exemptions in respect of reg 5(4) particularly see PARA 652.

23 Merchant Shipping (Counting and Registration of Persons on Board Passenger Ships) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/1869, reg 5(6)(b).

24 Is the requirements in the Merchant Shipping (Counting and Registration of Persons on Board Passenger Ships) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/1869, reg 5(1) (see the text and notes 1-9): see reg 5(7).

25 Merchant Shipping (Counting and Registration of Persons on Board Passenger Ships) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/1869, reg 5(7).

26 In respect of any United Kingdom passenger ship leaving any landing point either inside the territory of the European Community on a voyage of more than 20 miles from that landing point, or outside the territory of the European Community on an international voyage, and in respect of any other passenger ship leaving any landing point in the United Kingdom on a voyage of more than 20 miles from that landing point (Merchant Shipping (Counting and Registration of Persons on Board Passenger Ships) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/1869, reg 6(1)), the owner must ensure that:

929 (1) the information specified in heads (a) to (e) below is collected, in relation to each person on board, before the ship departs from the landing point (reg 6(2)(a)); and

930 (2) that information is communicated to the passenger registrar within 30 minutes of the ship's departure from the landing point, and, in respect of any such information as is specified in head (e) below, communicated to the master of the ship before the ship leaves the landing point (reg 6(2)(b)).

For these purposes, 'mile' means a nautical mile of 1852 metres: reg 3(1). The information referred to in heads (1) and (2) above is, in relation to each person on board the ship:

- 931 (a) family name (reg 6(3)(a));
- 932 (b) forenames or initials (reg 6(3)(b));

If the information in relation to a person indicates the category of age to which the person belongs (see head (d) above) but does not indicate that person's age or year of birth, the information must be accompanied by an indication of the age range used to define each category, and the age range used must be the age range used by the system for the registration of the information established in accordance with reg 8(1) (see PARA 651); reg 6(4). For these purposes, 'international voyage' means a voyage from a country to which the International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea 1974 (London, 1 November 1974 to 1 July 1975; TS 46 (1980); Cmnd 7874), with Protocol (London, 1 June 1978 to 1 March 1979; TS 40 (1981); Cmnd 8277) (as to which see PARA 8) applies to a port outside that country, or conversely: Merchant Shipping (Counting and Registration of Persons on Board Passenger Ships) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/1869, reg 3(1). As to exemptions in relation to reg 6(2) particularly see PARA 652.

As to offences see PARA 1182.

27 For these purposes, 'Community ship' means a ship which is registered in, or which is entitled to fly the flag of, a member state: Merchant Shipping (Counting and Registration of Persons on Board Passenger Ships) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/1869, reg 3(1). In any Act, 'member state' means a state which is a member of the European Communities: see the European Communities Act 1972 s 1(2), Sch 1 Pt II; and the Interpretation Act 1978 s 5, Sch 1.

651. System for registering passengers on board.

The owner of a passenger ship¹ must²:

- 680 (1) establish a system for the registration of the information collected in relation to persons³ on board passenger ships⁴ which is in accordance with the requirements of the appropriate Merchant Shipping Notice⁵ and is approved by the Secretary of State⁶;
- 681 (2) appoint a shore-based passenger registrar⁷ who is to be responsible for holding the information so collected⁸ and for its transmission to appropriate search and rescue services⁹ in the event of an emergency or in the aftermath of an accident involving the ship¹⁰; and
- 682 (3) ensure that the information so collected¹¹ is at all times readily available for transmission to the appropriate search and rescue services for use in an emergency or in the aftermath of an accident involving the ship¹².

Any personal data which are collected solely for the purposes of counting and registering persons on board passenger ships¹³ by an owner must be kept only for as long as is necessary for those purposes¹⁴.

The Secretary of State may appoint persons to carry out checks on the proper functioning of registration systems so approved¹⁵; and, in performing such checks, the persons so appointed are entitled to board any ship to which the registration system relates and enter any premises of the passenger registrar¹⁶, and they are to have access to any records and documents, including electronic and computer records, which comprise the owner's registration system¹⁷.

Exemption from the requirements to count and register passengers on board.

652. Exemption from the requirements to count and register passengers on board.

The Secretary of State¹ may exempt any passenger ship² from the requirements of the provisions which require the counting and registration of persons³ on board⁴, subject to such conditions (if any) as he may specify, and may, subject to giving reasonable notice, alter or cancel any exemption so granted⁵.

Without prejudice to this provision, the Secretary of State may exempt any passenger ship⁶:

- 683 (1) leaving any landing point⁷ within the United Kingdom⁸ from the requirement⁹ to communicate to the master of the ship and the passenger registrar¹⁰ the total number of persons on board at that time, in so far as that requirement applies as respects the passenger registrar if the ship is engaged, exclusively in a protected sea area¹¹, on a regular service¹² of less than one hour between calls at landing points¹³; or
- 684 (2) from the requirements¹⁴ placed on the owner of the ship¹⁵ to collect and communicate additional information on persons in respect of any voyage¹⁶ of more than 20 miles from the landing point¹⁷: (a) if, in respect of any United Kingdom passenger ship¹⁸ leaving any landing point outside the territory of the European Community on an international voyage¹⁹, the scheduled voyages of the ship make it impracticable for such records to be prepared²⁰; and (b) if, in respect of any passenger ship leaving any landing point within the United Kingdom, the ship sails exclusively in a protected sea area between two landing points or from and to the same landing point without calling at any intermediate landing point²¹, or the ship is engaged on a regular community service²².

(B) RETURNS REQUIRED AS TO PASSENGERS ON BOARD, BIRTHS ETC

653. Returns to be furnished by masters of ships as to passengers.

The master¹ of every ship², whether or not a United Kingdom ship³, which carries any passenger to a place in the United Kingdom from any place out of the United Kingdom, or from any place in the United Kingdom to any place out of the United Kingdom, must furnish to such person and in such manner as the Secretary of State directs⁴ a return giving the total number of any passengers so carried, distinguishing, if so directed by the Secretary of State, the total number of any class of passengers so carried, and giving, if the Secretary of State so directs, such particulars with respect to passengers as may be for the time being required by the Secretary of State⁵.

Any passenger must furnish the master of the ship with any information required by him for the purpose of the return⁶.

If the master of a ship fails to make a return as required⁷ (or if he makes a false return)⁸, or if any passenger refuses to give any information required by the master of the ship for the purpose of the return so required (or, for that purpose, gives to the master information which he knows to be false, or recklessly gives to him information which is false)⁹, the master or, as the case may be, passenger commits an offence¹⁰.

SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/ (1) SAFETY AND HEALTH ON SHIPS/(iv) Health and Safety/I. COUNTING AND REGISTERING PASSENGERS/(B) Returns Required as to Passengers on Board, Births etc/654. Returns of births and deaths in ships etc; power to make regulations.

654. Returns of births and deaths in ships etc; power to make regulations.

The Secretary of State¹ may make regulations² in relation to births and deaths in the circumstances specified therein³. Such regulations may require:

- 685 (1) the master⁴ of any United Kingdom ship⁵ to make a return to a superintendent⁶ or proper officer⁷ of the birth or death of any person occurring in the ship⁸ and the death of any person employed in the ship, wherever occurring outside the United Kingdom, and to notify any such death to such person, if any, as the deceased may have named to him as his next of kin⁹;
- 686 (2) the master of any ship not registered in the United Kingdom which calls at a port¹⁰ in the United Kingdom in the course of or at the end of a voyage to make a return to a superintendent of any birth or death of a British citizen¹¹, a British overseas territories citizen¹² or a British Overseas citizen¹³ which has occurred in the ship during the voyage¹⁴.

The returns referred to in heads (1) and (2) above are for transmission to the Registrar General of Shipping and Seamen¹⁵. Such regulations may require the Registrar General of Shipping and Seamen to record such information as may be specified in the regulations about such a death as is referred to in head (1) above in a case where it appears to him that the master of the ship cannot perform his duty because he has himself died or is incapacitated or missing¹⁶, and where any of the following circumstances exist¹⁷, namely that:

- 687 (a) the death in question has been the subject of an inquest held by a coroner or a statutory inquiry held into the cause of death of a crew member or others on board¹⁸, and the findings of the inquest or inquiry include a finding that the death occurred¹⁹;
- 688 (b) the deceased's body has been the subject of a post-mortem examination, and in consequence the coroner is satisfied that an inquest is unnecessary²⁰.

Such regulations may require the Registrar General of Shipping and Seamen to send a certified copy of any return or record made thereunder to the Registrar General for England and Wales²¹, the Registrar General of Births, Deaths and Marriages for Scotland or the Registrar General for Northern Ireland, as the case may require²². The Registrar General to whom any such certified copies are sent must record the information contained therein in the marine register, and may record in the marine register such additional information as appears to him desirable for the purpose of ensuring the completeness and correctness of the register²³.

Such regulations may make a contravention²⁴ of any provision thereof an offence punishable on summary conviction with a fine not exceeding level 2 on the standard scale²⁵ or not exceeding a lesser amount²⁶; and they may contain provisions authorising the registration of the following births and deaths occurring outside the United Kingdom in circumstances where no other such return is required to be made²⁷:

- 689 (i) any birth or death of a British Citizen, a British overseas territories citizen or a British Overseas citizen which occurs in a ship not registered in the United Kingdom²⁸;
- 690 (ii) any death of any such citizen who has been employed in a ship not registered in the United Kingdom which occurs elsewhere than in the ship²⁹; and
- 691 (iii) any death of a person who has been employed in a United Kingdom ship which occurs elsewhere than in the ship³⁰.

SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/ (1) SAFETY AND HEALTH ON SHIPS/(iv) Health and Safety/I. COUNTING AND REGISTERING PASSENGERS/(B) Returns Required as to Passengers on Board, Births etc/655. Requirement to register births and deaths on board ship.

655. Requirement to register births and deaths on board ship.

Where a child is born in a ship registered in the United Kingdom¹, the master of the ship must make a return of the birth²; and where: (1) any person dies in a ship registered in the United Kingdom³; or (2) any person employed in any such ship dies outside the United Kingdom⁴, the master of the ship must make a return of the death⁵ and, as soon as practicable but no more than three days after the death, must notify the death to such person, if any, as the deceased may have named as his next of kin⁶.

Where a citizen of the United Kingdom and Colonies⁷ is born or dies in a ship not registered in the United Kingdom, and the ship thereafter calls at a port in the United Kingdom in the course of or at the end of the voyage during which the death occurs, the master of the ship must make a return of the birth or death⁸.

Any return of a birth or of a death occurring in a ship registered in the United Kingdom⁹ must be made by the master of the ship as soon as practicable, but within six months, after the birth or death to which it relates¹⁰; and:

- 692 (a) in the case of a birth or death which occurs in the ship, must be made to a superintendent¹¹ or proper officer¹² for the place where the ship is at the time of the birth or death, or at which it next calls thereafter¹³; and
- 693 (b) in the case of a death which occurs elsewhere than in a ship, must be made to a superintendent or proper officer for the place where the ship is when the master first becomes aware of the death or at which it next calls thereafter¹⁴.

Any return of a birth or of a death of a citizen of the United Kingdom and Colonies occurring in a ship not registered in the United Kingdom but which thereafter calls at a port in the United Kingdom in the course of or at the end of the voyage¹⁵ must be made by the master of the ship to a superintendent for that port in the United Kingdom before the ship leaves that port¹⁶.

When a return of a birth or death duly made¹⁷ has been transmitted to him, or when a record of a death (where the master is unable to act)¹⁸ has been made by him, the Registrar General of Shipping and Seamen must send a copy of that return or record, certified by him or by a person authorised by him for that purpose to be a true copy, to the appropriate Registrar General¹⁹. The following births and deaths occurring outside the United Kingdom in circumstances where no return or record is otherwise required may also be recorded in the marine register by the appropriate Registrar General as he thinks fit, if he is satisfied that such a birth or death has occurred²⁰, namely:

- 694 (i) any birth or death of a citizen of the United Kingdom and Colonies which occurs in a ship not registered in the United Kingdom²¹;
- 695 (ii) any death of a citizen of the United Kingdom and Colonies who has been employed in such a ship which occurs elsewhere than in the ship²²; and
- 696 (iii) any death of a person who has been employed in a ship registered in the United Kingdom which occurs elsewhere than in the ship²³.

The master of a ship who fails to comply with any of the provisions which require returns to be made as to births and deaths occurring in his ship²⁴ is guilty of an offence²⁵.

1 As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 17 note 3. The provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 108 (see PARA 654) and of the Merchant Shipping (Returns of Births and Deaths) Regulations 1979, SI 1979/1577, except reg 4 (see the text and notes 7-8), and reg 10(1)(a) (see head (i) in the text) and reg 10(1)(b) (see head (ii) in the text) extend to ships which are sea-going ships (not registered in the United Kingdom or elsewhere) which are owned by a person resident in, or by a body corporate having a principal place of business in, the United Kingdom, and masters and seamen employed in them: Merchant Shipping (Returns of Births and Deaths) Regulations 1979, SI 1979/1577, reg 12(1) (amended by SI 1991/1366); Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b). However, in such a case, the particulars required to be contained in records or returns by the Merchant Shipping (Returns of Births and Deaths) Regulations 1979, SI 1979/1577, Sch 1 (see notes 10, 16) and Sch 2 (see notes 6, 16), as extended by reg 12(1), are subject to certain modifications: see reg 12(2).

2 Merchant Shipping (Returns of Births and Deaths) Regulations 1979, SI 1979/1577, reg 2. The return required as mentioned in the text must be made in accordance with regs 5, 6 (see the text and notes 9-16): see reg 2.

3 Merchant Shipping (Returns of Births and Deaths) Regulations 1979, SI 1979/1577, reg 3(a).

4 Merchant Shipping (Returns of Births and Deaths) Regulations 1979, SI 1979/1577, reg 3(b).

5 The return required by the Merchant Shipping (Returns of Births and Deaths) Regulations 1979, SI 1979/1577, reg 3 must be made in accordance with regs 5, 6 (see the text and notes 9-16): see reg 3.

6 Merchant Shipping (Returns of Births and Deaths) Regulations 1979, SI 1979/1577, reg 3. Where it appears to the Registrar General of Shipping and Seamen that the master of the ship cannot perform the duty imposed on him by virtue of reg 3 in respect of the death because he has himself died or is incapacitated or missing (reg 7); and either

936 (1) the death in question has been the subject of an inquest held by the coroner or a statutory inquiry held under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 271 (see PARA 873), and the findings of the inquest or inquiry include a finding that the death occurred (Merchant Shipping (Returns of Births and Deaths) Regulations 1979, SI 1979/1577, reg 7(1)); or 937 (2) a post-mortem examination has been made of the deceased's body and in consequence the coroner is satisfied that an inquest is unnecessary (reg 7(2)), then the Registrar General of Shipping and Seamen must record such of the information specified in reg 7, Sch 2 (see note 10) as he may be able to obtain in the circumstances of death: reg 7; Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b). However, in circumstances where:

938 (a) an inquest is held on a dead body or touching a death or a post-mortem examination is made of a dead body as a result of which the coroner is satisfied that an inquest is unnecessary (Merchant Shipping (Returns of Births and Deaths) Regulations 1979, SI 1979/1577, reg 8(1)); and

939 (b) it appears to the coroner that the death in question is such as is mentioned in reg 3(a) (see head (1) in the text) or in reg 3(b) (see head (2) in the text), as extended by reg 12(1) (see note 1) (reg 8(2)), it is the duty of the coroner to send to the Registrar General of Shipping and Seamen particulars in respect of the deceased of the kind specified in reg 8, Sch 3: reg 8. Accordingly, the particulars that are required to be sent by coroners in respect of deaths under reg 8 relate to: the ship in which death occurred or in which the deceased was employed; the deceased; and the Coroner's certificate: see Sch 3. 8 Merchant Shipping (Returns of Births and Deaths) Regulations 1979, SI 1979/1577, reg 4. The return required as mentioned in the text must be made in accordance with regs 5, 6 (see the text and notes 9-16): see reg 4.

9 ie a return required to be made under the Merchant Shipping (Returns of Births and Deaths) Regulations 1979, SI 1979/1577, reg 2 (see the text and notes 1-2) or reg 3 (see the text and notes 3-6): see reg 5(1).

10 Merchant Shipping (Returns of Births and Deaths) Regulations 1979, SI 1979/1577, reg 5(1). Without prejudice to reg 5(1), and to the provisions of reg 13 (offences) (see PARA 1185), a return of a birth or of a death required to be made under reg 2 (see the text and notes 1-2) or reg 3 (see the text and notes 3-6) which is not made within the prescribed period or is made to a superintendent or proper officer other than that specified in reg 5(1) (see heads (a), (b) in the text) is not invalid by reason only that it is not made within that period or to that specified person: reg 5(3). A return of a birth or of a death required to be made under the Merchant Shipping (Returns of Births and Deaths) Regulations 1979, SI 1979/1577, must be in writing, must be signed by the master of the ship as informant, and must contain (in the case of a birth) the particulars specified in Sch 1, or (in the case of a death) the particulars specified in Sch 2, or in either case so many of those particulars as the master may reasonably be able to obtain, having regard to the circumstances of the birth or of the death: reg 6. Accordingly, the particulars that are required to be contained in returns of births (or authorised to be recorded in the marine register) relate to: the ship in which birth occurred; the child; the father; the mother; and the informant: see Sch 1. The particulars that are required to be contained in returns or records of deaths (or authorised to be recorded in the marine register) relate to: the ship in which death occurred or in which the deceased was employed; the deceased; and the informant: see Sch 2.

(v) Carriage of Dangerous Goods by Ship

656. Dangerous goods in general.

Where any dangerous goods¹ have been sent or carried, or attempted to be sent or carried, on board any ship², whether or not a United Kingdom ship³:

- 697 (1) without being marked as required by safety regulations⁴;
- 698 (2) without such notice having been given as is required by safety regulations⁵;
- 699 (3) under a false description⁶; or
- 700 (4) with a false description of their sender or carrier⁷, any court having Admiralty jurisdiction⁸ may declare the goods, and any package or receptacle in which they are contained, to be forfeited⁹.

On a declaration of forfeiture being made, the goods are forfeited and they must be disposed of as the court directs¹⁰.

The powers so conferred on the court¹¹ are exercisable notwithstanding that the owner of the goods¹²:

- 701 (a) has not committed any offence under safety regulations relating to dangerous goods¹³;
- 702 (b) is not before the court¹⁴; and
- 703 (c) has no notice of the proceedings¹⁵; and notwithstanding that there is no evidence to show to whom the goods belong¹⁶.

Nevertheless the court may, in its discretion, require such notice as it may direct to be given to the owner or shipper of the goods before they are forfeited¹⁷.

1 For these purposes, 'dangerous goods' means goods designated as dangerous goods by safety regulations: Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 87(5). As to the meaning of 'safety regulations' see PARA 591; and see the Merchant Shipping (Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2367, made under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 85 and other powers (cited in PARA 657).

SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/ (1) SAFETY AND HEALTH ON SHIPS/(v) Carriage of Dangerous Goods by Ship/657. Handling, stowage, carriage of dangerous goods and marine pollutants by merchant shipping.

657. Handling, stowage, carriage of dangerous goods and marine pollutants by merchant shipping.

It is the duty of every operator¹, every employer of persons aboard a ship and every master of a ship to ensure that, so far as is reasonably practicable, when dangerous goods are being handled², stowed or carried on the ship nothing in the manner in which those goods are handled, stowed or carried as the case may be is such as might create a significant risk to the health and safety of any person³.

It is the duty of every employee⁴ aboard ship⁵:

- 704 (1) to take reasonable care for the health and safety of himself and of other persons who may be affected by his acts or omissions in connection with the handling, stowage and carriage of dangerous goods in the ship⁶; and
- 705 (2) as regards any duty or requirement imposed on the operator, or the employee's employer by the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 or any regulation or rule made thereunder with regard to the health and safety of persons aboard a ship⁷, to cooperate with the operator or employer so far as is necessary to enable that duty or requirement to be performed or complied with in connection with the handling, stowage and carriage of dangerous goods in the ship⁸.

In connection with the handling, stowage and carriage of dangerous goods in a United Kingdom ship, no person may intentionally or recklessly interfere with or misuse anything provided on, or disobey instructions displayed on, the ship in the interests of health or safety in pursuance of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 or any regulation or rule made thereunder⁹.

Further provision is made in relation to the carriage of packaged dangerous goods or packaged marine pollutants¹⁰, the carriage of dangerous goods or marine pollutants in bulk¹¹, and spaces for the carriage of packaged goods and dangerous goods in solid form in bulk¹².

The Secretary of State¹³ may grant exemptions from all or any of the provisions relating to such handling, stowage and carriage of dangerous goods and marine pollutants¹⁴ (as may be specified in the exemption) for classes of cases or individual cases on such terms (if any) as he may so specify and may, subject to giving reasonable notice, alter or cancel any such exemption¹⁵.

1 For these purposes, 'operator' in relation to a ship includes any owner, charterer, manager and agent of the ship: Merchant Shipping (Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2367, reg 2(1).

The Merchant Shipping (Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2367, apply to ships carrying dangerous goods in bulk or packaged form or marine pollutants in packaged form (reg 5(1)); and they apply to United Kingdom ships wherever they may be and to other ships while they are within the United Kingdom waters (reg 5(2)). For these purposes, 'dangerous goods' means goods classified in the IMDG Code or in any other publication of the International Maritime Organisation ('IMO') referred to in the Merchant Shipping (Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2367, as dangerous for carriage by sea, and any other substance or article that the shipper has reasonable cause to believe might meet the criteria for such classification; and the expression includes residues in empty receptacles, empty tanks or cargo holds which have been used previously for the carriage of dangerous goods unless such receptacles, empty tanks or cargo holds have been cleaned and dried, purged, gas freed or ventilated as appropriate or, in the case of radioactive materials, have been both cleaned and adequately closed, and goods labelled, marked or declared as dangerous goods; but the expression does not include goods forming part of the equipment or stores of the ship in which they are carried; 'in bulk' means directly and without intermediate form of containment in a hold, tank or cargo space, which is a structural part of or permanently attached to a ship: reg 2(1). 'IMDG Code' means the 2002 edition of the IMO International Maritime Dangerous Goods Code: Merchant Shipping (Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2367, reg 2(1) (definition substituted by SI 2004/2110). For these purposes, 'marine pollutant' means a substance classified as such in the IMDG Code, or as a noxious liquid substance in the IBC Code, oil as defined in Annex I to the MARPOL Convention, excluding bunkers and ship's stores and any other substance, material or article that the shipper has reasonable cause to believe might meet the criteria for such classification: Merchant Shipping (Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2367, reg 2(1) (definition amended by SI 2004/2110). 'IBC Code' means the 1998 Edition of the IMO International Code for the Construction and Equipment of Ships Carrying Dangerous Chemicals in Bulk: Merchant Shipping (Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2367, reg 2(1) (definition amended by SI 2004/2110). 'MARPOL Convention' means the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from Ships (London, 8 October to 2 November 1973; Misc 26 (1974); Cmnd 5748), with Protocol (London, 1 June 1978 to 31 May 1979; Misc 27 (1978); Cmnd 7347) (see PARA 8): Merchant Shipping (Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2367, reg 2(1) (definition added by SI 2004/2110). For these purposes, 'United Kingdom ship' means a ship or hovercraft which is registered under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Pt II (ss 8-23) (see PARA 245 et seq), is registered under the Hovercraft Act 1968 (as to which see PARA 390 et seq), is a government ship within the meaning of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 308(4) (see PARA 20 note 3) used for commercial purposes, or is not registered under the law of any other country but is wholly owned by persons each of whom is a British citizen, a British overseas territories citizen or a British Overseas citizen, or is a body corporate which is established under the law of a part of the United Kingdom and has its principal place of business in the United Kingdom: Merchant Shipping (Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2367, reg 2(1) (definition amended by virtue of the British Overseas Territories Act 2002 s 2(3)). As to the meaning of 'British citizen' see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 23 et seq; as to the meaning of 'British overseas territories citizen' see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 8, 44-57; and as to the meaning of 'British Overseas citizen' see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 58 et seq. As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 17 note 3. As to the International Maritime Organisation see PARA 13.

2 For these purposes, 'handling' includes the operations of loading, unloading and transferring dangerous goods or marine pollutants and cleaning, purging, gasfreeing, ullaging, sounding, sampling and similar operations required for the carriage of such goods in a ship; and cognate expressions are to be construed accordingly: Merchant Shipping (Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2367, reg 2(1).

3 See the Merchant Shipping (Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2367, reg 6. If an employer, operator or master fails to comply with the requirements of reg 6 he commits an offence: see PARA 1186. As to the carriage of packaged irradiated nuclear fuel by sea see PARA 658; and as to the reporting requirements for ships carrying dangerous or polluting goods see PARA 659.

4 For these purposes, 'employee' means a person (including the master but excluding dock workers or shore-based repair or other workers temporarily employed on board the ship) employed either in the deck, engine, radio, medical or catering department of a ship, or in the provision of goods, services or entertainment on board: Merchant Shipping (Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2367, reg 2(1).

5 See the Merchant Shipping (Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2367, reg 7. If any employee aboard a ship carrying dangerous goods fails to comply with the requirements of reg 7 he commits an offence: see PARA 1186.

6 See the Merchant Shipping (Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2367, reg 7; and see note 5.

7 Is a ship to which the Merchant Shipping (Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2367, apply (as to which see note 1): see reg 7.

8 See the Merchant Shipping (Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2367, reg 7; and see note 5.

9 See the Merchant Shipping (Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2367, reg 8. If any person aboard a ship carrying dangerous goods fails to comply with the requirements of reg 8 he commits an offence: see PARA 1186.

10 See the Merchant Shipping (Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2367, Pt II (regs 10-19), which makes provision in relation to: the dangerous goods declaration or marine pollutants declaration (reg 10 (amended by SI 2004/2110)); the preparation of goods for transport (the Merchant Shipping (Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2367, reg 11); Container or Vehicle Packing Certificates (reg 12); the required documentation which may be provided directly to the master or operator in the form of a paper document or by electronic data processing or electronic data interchange methods (reg 13); list, manifest or stowage plans (reg 14); the marking, labelling or placarding of packaged goods (reg 15); the stowage of packaged goods on board ship (reg 16); cargo securing documentation (regs 17, 18); and the duty of operator and master to ensure that all employees are familiar with the essential actions to be taken in an emergency involving such packaged goods as are carried on the ship (reg 19). As to related offences see PARA 1186.

11 See the Merchant Shipping (Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2367, Pt III (regs 20-21), which makes provision in relation to: dangerous goods or marine pollutants handled or carried in bulk (reg 20); and the required documentation relating to such goods or pollutants (reg 21 (amended by SI 2004/2110)). SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/ (1) SAFETY AND HEALTH ON SHIPS/(v) Carriage of Dangerous Goods by Ship/658. Carriage of packaged irradiated nuclear fuel by sea.

658. Carriage of packaged irradiated nuclear fuel by sea.

Every ship carrying INF cargo¹ must be constructed, equipped, inspected and surveyed in accordance with the requirements of the INF Code²; and the operator³ and master must ensure that a ship carrying INF cargo complies with the requirements of the INF Code⁴.

The Secretary of State⁵ must, on the application of the operator of a ship registered in the United Kingdom, if he is satisfied that the ship complies with the requirements of the INF Code, issue to the operator a Certificate of Fitness certifying compliance with the INF Code⁶; and an operator or master must not accept INF cargo for carriage in a ship which has not been issued with a Certificate of Fitness either by the Secretary of State⁷, or by the administration of the state whose flag the ship is entitled to fly⁸.

Any contravention by the operator or master of their duty to ensure that a ship carrying INF cargo complies with the requirements of the INF Code⁹ or of their duty to refuse such cargo for carriage in a ship which has not been issued with such a Certificate of Fitness¹⁰ is an offence for which each of them is liable¹¹; and, in any case where a ship does not comply with those requirements, the ship may be detained¹².

1 For these purposes, 'INF cargo' means packaged irradiated nuclear fuel, plutonium and high-level radioactive wastes carried as cargo; 'high-level radioactive wastes' means liquid wastes resulting from the operation of the first stage extraction system or the concentrated wastes from subsequent extraction stages, in a facility for reprocessing irradiated nuclear fuel, or solids into which such liquid wastes have been converted; 'irradiated nuclear fuel' means material containing uranium, thorium or plutonium isotopes which has been used to maintain a self-sustaining nuclear chain reaction; and 'plutonium' means the resultant mixture of isotopes of that material extracted from the reprocessing of irradiated nuclear fuel: see the Merchant Shipping (Carriage of Packaged Irradiated Nuclear Fuel etc) (INF Code) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/3216, reg 2(1).

The Merchant Shipping (Carriage of Packaged Irradiated Nuclear Fuel etc) (INF Code) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/3216, apply to ships carrying INF cargo (reg 3(1)), in particular United Kingdom ships wherever they may be, and other ships which are in United Kingdom waters (reg 3(2)). In relation to hovercraft, the regulations have effect subject to the modification that for any reference to a ship or ships, there is respectively to be substituted a reference to a hovercraft or to hovercraft: reg 3(3). For these purposes, 'United Kingdom ship' means a ship or hovercraft which is registered under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Pt II (ss 8-23) (see PARA 245 et seq), is registered under the Hovercraft Act 1968 (as to which see PARA 390 et seq), is a government ship within the meaning of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 308(4) (see PARA 20 note 3) used for commercial purposes, or is not registered under the law of any other country but is wholly owned by persons each of whom is a British citizen, a British overseas territories citizen or a British Overseas citizen, or is a body corporate which is established under the law of a part of the United Kingdom and has its principal place of business in the United Kingdom: Merchant Shipping (Carriage of Packaged Irradiated Nuclear Fuel etc) (INF Code) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/3216, reg 2(1) (definition amended by virtue of the British Overseas Territories Act 2002 s 2(3)). As to the meaning of 'British citizen' see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 23 et seq; as to the meaning of 'British overseas territories citizen' see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 8, 44-57; and as to the meaning of 'British Overseas citizen' see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARA 58 et seq. As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 17 note 3.

For these purposes, 'INF Code' means the International Code for the Safe Carriage of Packaged Irradiated Nuclear Fuel, Plutonium and High-Level Radioactive Wastes on Board Ships adopted on 27 May 1999 by the Maritime Safety Committee of the International Maritime Organisation ('IMO') by resolution

MSC 88(71) and set out in the Annex thereto: Merchant Shipping (Carriage of Packaged Irradiated Nuclear Fuel etc) (INF Code) Regulations 2000, SI 2000/3216, reg 2(1). As to the International Maritime Organisation see PARA 13.

Before a United Kingdom ship¹, which is bound for a port which is not located in an EEA state² and is carrying dangerous goods³ or harmful substances in packaged form⁴, leaves a port which is not located in an EEA state, the operator of that ship must comply with specified requirements of the appropriate Merchant Shipping Notice⁵ which conforms to the Consolidated European Reporting System ('CERS')⁶. Further provision is made in relation to the reporting of incidents⁷ and for offences and penalties to apply in cases of contravention⁸.

1 le a United Kingdom ship irrespective of size: see the Merchant Shipping (Reporting Requirements for Ships Carrying Dangerous or Polluting Goods) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/2498, reg 5(1) (reg 5 substituted by SI 2004/2110). 'IGC Code' means the 1993 edition of the Code for the Construction and Equipment of Ships Carrying Liquefied Gases in Bulk published by the IMO: Merchant Shipping (Reporting Requirements for Ships Carrying Dangerous or Polluting Goods) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/2498, reg 2(2) (definition amended by SI 2004/2110). 'IMDG Code' means the 2002 edition of the International Maritime Dangerous Goods Code published by the IMO: Merchant Shipping (Reporting Requirements for Ships Carrying Dangerous or Polluting Goods) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/2498, reg 2(2) (definition amended by SI 2004/2110). 'INF Code' means the 2001 edition of the International Code for the Safe Carriage of Packaged Irradiated Nuclear Fuels, Plutonium and High-Level Radioactive Waste on Board Ships: Merchant Shipping (Reporting Requirements for Ships Carrying Dangerous or Polluting Goods) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/2498, reg 2(2) (definition substituted by SI 2004/2110). For the purposes of the Merchant Shipping (Reporting Requirements for Ships Carrying Dangerous or Polluting Goods) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/2498, reg 5, in relation to a ship, bunkers, stores and equipment for use on board that ship are not to be regarded as dangerous goods or harmful substances in packaged form: see reg 3(9) (reg 3 as substituted: see note 1). As to the International Maritime Organisation see PARA 13. As to the handling, stowage, carriage of dangerous goods and marine pollutants by merchant shipping generally see PARA 657; and as to the carriage of packaged irradiated nuclear fuel by sea see PARA 658.

4 For these purposes, 'harmful substances in packaged form' has the meaning given by MARPOL Annex III: Merchant Shipping (Reporting Requirements for Ships Carrying Dangerous or Polluting Goods) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/2498, reg 2(2) (definition added by SI 1999/2121). 'MARPOL' means the International Convention for the Prevention of Pollution from Ships (London, 8 October to 2 November 1973; Misc 26 (1974); Cmnd 5748), with Protocol (London, 1 June 1978 to 31 May 1979; Misc 27 (1978); Cmnd 7347) (see PARA 8); Merchant Shipping (Reporting Requirements for Ships Carrying Dangerous or Polluting Goods) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/2498, reg 2(2) (definition amended by SI 2005/1092).

5 For these purposes, 'Merchant Shipping Notice' means a Notice described as such, issued by the Secretary of State, and includes a reference to any document amending or replacing that Notice which is considered by the Secretary of State to be relevant from time to time and is specified in a Merchant Shipping Notice: Merchant Shipping (Reporting Requirements for Ships Carrying Dangerous or Polluting Goods) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/2498, reg 2(2) (definition amended by SI 1999/2121). As to the Secretary of State see PARA 38.

6 Merchant Shipping (Reporting Requirements for Ships Carrying Dangerous or Polluting Goods) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/2498, reg 5(2) (as substituted: see note 1). The text refers to the requirements of Merchant Shipping Notice 1817(M+F): see the Merchant Shipping (Reporting Requirements for Ships Carrying Dangerous or Polluting Goods) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/2498, reg 5(2) (as so substituted). Merchant Shipping Notice 1817(M+F) details the technical requirements applicable to ships and United Kingdom port authorities to comply with the Merchant Shipping (Vessel Traffic Monitoring and Reporting Requirements) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/2110 (amended by SI 2005/1092), which amended the Merchant Shipping (Reporting Requirements for Ships Carrying Dangerous or Polluting Goods) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/2498, and implemented EC Directive 2002/59 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 27 June 2002 (OJ L208, 05.08.2002, p 10) establishing a Community vessel traffic monitoring and information system and repealing EC Council Directive 93/75. Accordingly, Merchant Shipping Notice 1817(M+F) concerns itself with the Consolidated European Reporting System ('CERS'), in particular as it relates to ship arrival and departure notifications (including additional requirements for ships carrying dangerous or polluting goods) and the reporting requirements in the event of an accident or incident: see Merchant Shipping Notice 1817(M+F).

Any person duly authorised by the Secretary of State may inspect any ship to which the Merchant Shipping (Reporting Requirements for Ships Carrying Dangerous or Polluting Goods) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/2498, apply and, if he is satisfied that there is a failure to comply in relation to that ship with relation to the requirements of reg 5, he may detain the ship until such requirements are met: see reg 17; and PARA 1186.

The Secretary of State may require by notice in writing any person carrying on business or trade in the maritime transport sector to furnish, in the specified form and manner and within the specified time, periodical or other returns about cargo, passenger and vessel movement, certain particulars in relation to the transport of containers or ro-ro units, and information in relation to the vessel: see the Statistical Returns (Carriage of Goods and Passengers by Sea) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2330; and PARA 44.

7 See the Merchant Shipping (Reporting Requirements for Ships Carrying Dangerous or Polluting Goods) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/2498, reg 9 (amended by SI 1999/2121; SI 2004/2110; SI 2005/1092); and see the Merchant Shipping (Reporting Requirements for Ships Carrying Dangerous or Polluting Goods) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/2498, reg 10 (supplementary reports); and reg 11 (amended by SI 2004/2110) (reporting procedures). For these purposes, 'incident' means damage, failure or breakdown which affects the safety of the ship, failure or breakdown of machinery or equipment which results in impairment of the safety of navigation, including any circumstances when a vessel is 'not under command', or any circumstances at sea which have caused actual damage or any other condition which affects the safety of any vessel or persons or which has or may cause damage or discharge into the marine environment: Merchant Shipping (Reporting Requirements for Ships Carrying Dangerous or Polluting Goods) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/2498, reg 2(2) (definition amended by SI 2005/1092). The Maritime and Coastguard Agency ('MCA') must, as necessary, broadcast within the relevant areas information about any incident notified under the Merchant Shipping (Reporting Requirements for Ships Carrying Dangerous or Polluting Goods) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/2498, reg 9, and information with regard to any vessel which poses a threat to other shipping: reg 19 (amended by SI 2004/2110). As to the Maritime and Coastguard Agency see PARA 56.

8 See the Merchant Shipping (Reporting Requirements for Ships Carrying Dangerous or Polluting Goods) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/2498, regs 15, 16 (offences); regs 17, 18 (inspection and detention of ships); and PARA 1186.

(vi) Carriage of Cargoes requiring Special Precautions

A. IN GENERAL

660. Cargo information.

The shipper¹ must provide such information ('cargo information')² to the owner or master sufficiently in advance of loading as is necessary to enable them to ensure that³:

- 706 (1) the different commodities to be carried are compatible with each other or suitably separated⁴;
- 707 (2) the cargo is suitable for the ship⁵;
- 708 (3) the ship is suitable for the cargo⁶; and
- 709 (4) the cargo can be safely stowed and secured on board the ship and transported under all expected conditions during the intended voyage⁷.

The information must be confirmed in writing and by appropriate shipping documents prior to loading the cargo on the ship⁸.

In preparing cargo units for carriage by ships, the shipper (or, as the case may be, the forwarder⁹) must ensure that the gross mass of such units is in accordance with the gross mass declared on the shipping documents¹⁰. Where the shipper does not deliver the cargo to the ship or its agent he must provide the forwarder with such cargo information¹¹; and if the shipper does not deliver the cargo to the ship or its agent it is the duty of the forwarder to provide the owner or master with the appropriate cargo information¹².

If a shipper or forwarder fails to provide appropriate cargo information as so required¹³, or furnishes cargo information which he knows to be false or recklessly furnishes cargo information which is false, he is guilty of an offence¹⁴; and if an owner or master accepts for carriage, or takes or receives on board any cargo for which appropriate cargo information as so required¹⁵ has not been furnished, he is guilty of an offence¹⁶.

1 For these purposes, 'shipper' means any person who, whether as principal or agent for another, consigns goods for carriage by sea: Merchant Shipping (Carriage of Cargoes) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/336, reg 2(1). The Merchant Shipping (Carriage of Cargoes) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/336, apply to sea-going United Kingdom ships wherever they may be, and to sea-going ships which are not United Kingdom ships while they are within United Kingdom waters, when loaded or intended to be loaded with any cargo: reg 3(1). For these purposes, 'cargo' means any cargo which, owing to its particular hazard to ships or persons on board, may require special precautions, with the exception of liquids carried in bulk and gases carried in bulk: reg 2(1). 'In bulk', except in the context of roll-on roll-off cargo spaces, means directly and without intermediate form of containment in a hold, tank or cargo space forming a structural part of, or permanently attached to, a ship; and 'cargo space' means any space in the ship appropriated for the carriage of cargo: reg 2(1). 'Roll-on roll-off cargo spaces' means spaces not normally subdivided in any way and extending to either a substantial length or the entire length of the ship in which the goods (packaged or in bulk, in or on rail or road cars, vehicles (including road or rail tankers), trailers, containers, pallets, demountable tanks or in or on similar stowage units or other receptacles) can be loaded and unloaded normally in a horizontal direction; and 'container' means an article of transport equipment as defined in the International Convention for Safe Containers (Geneva, 2 December 1972; TS 40 (1979); Cmnd 7535) (CSC 1972) (as to which see PARA 8), published by the International Maritime Organisation ('IMO'): Merchant Shipping (Carriage of Cargoes) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/336, reg 2(1). As to the International Maritime Organisation see PARA 13.

The Merchant Shipping (Carriage of Cargoes) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/336, apply to the carriage of all cargoes, but are subject to any requirements contained in the Merchant Shipping (Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2367 (as to which see PARA 657), in respect of the carriage of dangerous goods and marine pollutants (as defined in those regulations); and where any requirement in those regulations regulates an aspect of carriage provided for in the Merchant Shipping (Carriage of Cargoes) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/336, the Merchant Shipping (Dangerous Goods and Marine Pollutants) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2367, apply to that extent, and not the Merchant Shipping (Carriage of Cargoes) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/336: reg 3(2). As to exemptions see PARA 665.

2 The cargo information referred to in the Merchant Shipping (Carriage of Cargoes) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/336, reg 4(1)(a) must include:

- 940 (1) in the case of general cargo and cargo carried in cargo units, a general description of the cargo, the gross mass of the cargo or cargo units and any relevant special properties of the cargo (reg 4(1)(b)(i));
- 941 (2) in the case of bulk cargoes, information on the stowage factor of the cargo, the trimming procedures, the likelihood of shifting including angle of repose, if applicable, and any other relevant special properties; and, in the case of a concentrate or other cargo which may liquefy, additional information in the form of a certificate indicating the moisture content of the cargo and its transportable moisture limit (reg 4(1)(b)(ii));
- 942 (3) in the case of bulk cargoes which are not classified in accordance with the SOLAS Convention reg VII/2, but have chemical properties that may create a potential hazard, information on the chemical properties in addition to that required by head (2) (reg 4(1)(b)(iii)).

For these purposes, 'cargo unit' includes a cargo transport unit and means wheeled cargo, vehicle, container, flat, pallet, portable tank, packaged unit, or any other cargo, and loading equipment, or any part thereof, which belongs to the ship and which is not fixed to the ship; reg 2(1). 'Bulk cargo' means cargo carried in bulk; 'trimming' means any levelling of the material within a cargo space, either partial or total, by means of loading spouts or chutes, portable machinery, equipment or manual labour; 'cargoes which may liquefy' means cargoes which are subject to moisture migration and subsequent liquefaction if shipped with a moisture content in excess of the transportable moisture limit; 'moisture content' means the amount of moisture present in a particular sample expressed as a percentage by weight of the total wet weight of the sample; 'transportable moisture limit' means nine-tenths of the flow moisture point; 'flow moisture point' means the percentage moisture content (wet weight basis) at which a flow state develops under the methods of test in a representative sample of the material as prescribed by the Code of Safe Practice for Solid Bulk Cargoes (BC Code), published by the IMO; and 'flow state' means the condition when a mass of granular material is saturated with liquid to an extent that under prevailing external forces such as vibration, impactation or ship's motion, it loses its internal shear strength and behaves as a liquid: Merchant Shipping (Carriage of Cargoes) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/336, reg 2(1). Any reference to a Code includes a reference to any document amending it which is considered by the Secretary of State to be relevant from time to time and is specified in a Merchant Shipping Notice: Merchant Shipping (Carriage of Cargoes) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/336, reg 2(3). For these purposes, 'Merchant Shipping Notice' means a Notice described as such, issued by the Department of Transport: Merchant Shipping (Carriage of Cargoes) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/336, reg 2(1). Any reference to a Merchant Shipping Notice includes a reference to any document amending it which is considered by the Secretary of State to be relevant from time to time and is specified in a Merchant Shipping Notice: Merchant Shipping (Carriage of Cargoes) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/336, reg 2(3). As to the Secretary of State see PARA 38.

'SOLAS Convention' means the International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea 1974 (London, 1 November 1974 to 1 July 1975; TS 46 (1980); Cmnd 7874), with Protocol (London, 1 June 1978 to 1 March 1979; TS 40 (1981); Cmnd 8277) (as to which see PARA 8): Merchant Shipping (Carriage of Cargoes) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/336, reg 2(1). Any reference to a Convention includes a reference to any document amending it which is considered by the Secretary of State to be relevant from time to time and is specified in a Merchant Shipping Notice: Merchant Shipping (Carriage of Cargoes) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/336, reg 2(3).

3 Merchant Shipping (Carriage of Cargoes) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/336, reg 4(1)(a). Where a ship is operated by a person other than its owner, (whether on behalf of the owner or some other person, or on his own behalf) a reference to the owner must be construed as including a reference to that person: reg 2(5).

The Secretary of State may require by notice in writing any person carrying on business or trade in the maritime transport sector to furnish, in the specified form and manner and within the specified time, periodical or other returns about cargo, passenger and vessel movement, certain particulars in relation to the transport of containers or ro-ro units, and information in relation to the vessel: see the Statistical Returns (Carriage of Goods and Passengers by Sea) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/2330; and PARA 44.

- 8 Merchant Shipping (Carriage of Cargoes) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/336, reg 4(2).
- 9 For these purposes, 'forwarder' means a person who receives the appropriate cargo information in preparation for eventual delivery of the cargo to the ship or its agent (and may include a cargo packer or consolidator); and 'appropriate cargo information' means information relevant to the cargo and its stowage and securing, which should specify in particular the precautions necessary for the safe carriage of that cargo by sea: Merchant Shipping (Carriage of Cargoes) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/336, reg 2(1).

SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/ (1) SAFETY AND HEALTH ON SHIPS/(vi) Carriage of Cargoes requiring Special Precautions/A. IN GENERAL/661. Carriage of required documentation.

661. Carriage of required documentation.

The owner and master of every ship¹, other than a ship engaged in the carriage of grain², must ensure that appropriate documentation, relevant to the cargo³ and its stowage and securing, which should specify in particular the precautions necessary for the safe carriage of that cargo by sea, is carried on board⁴.

The owner and master of every ship⁵ carrying grain must ensure that the International Grain Code⁶ is carried on board⁷.

All passenger ships⁸ and cargo ships⁹ carrying cargoes other than solid bulk cargoes¹⁰, except cargo ships of less than 500 tons¹¹ engaged on voyages which are not international voyages, must carry on board a Cargo Securing Manual¹².

An owner or master who contravenes the requirement to carry appropriate documentation¹³, including the requirement to carry the International Grain Code¹⁴, is guilty of an offence¹⁵.

1 le every ship to which the Merchant Shipping (Carriage of Cargoes) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/336, apply: see reg 5(1). As to the application of the Merchant Shipping (Carriage of Cargoes) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/336, see PARA 660 note 1; and as to references to the owner see PARA 660 note 3.

2 For these purposes, 'grain' includes wheat, maize (corn), oats, rye, barley, rice, pulses, seeds and processed forms thereof whose behaviour is similar to that of grain in its natural state: Merchant Shipping (Carriage of Cargoes) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/336, reg 2(1). As to the carriage of grain generally see PARA 668.

3 As to the meaning of 'cargo' for these purposes see PARA 660 note 1.

As to the International Maritime Organisation see PARA 13.

In interpreting the International Grain Code, the requirements having been made mandatory under the Merchant Shipping (Carriage of Cargoes) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/336, reg 11 (as to which see PARA 668) the language thereof must be construed accordingly, the definitions set out in the Code apply, and references to the Administration are, in relation to United Kingdom ships, references to the Secretary of State, and references to the contracting government of the port of loading, in relation to all ships loading in the United Kingdom, are references to the Secretary of State: Merchant Shipping (Carriage of Cargoes) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/336, reg 2(6). As to the Secretary of State see PARA 38.

662. Duties regarding stowage and securing.

The owner¹ and master must ensure that²:

- 710 (1) cargo³ and cargo units⁴ carried on or under deck are loaded, stowed and secured so as to prevent as far as is practicable, throughout the voyage, damage or hazard to the ship and the persons on board, and loss of cargo overboard⁵;

- 712 (3) appropriate precautions are taken during loading and transport of cargo units on board ro-ro ships, especially with regard to the securing arrangements on board such ships and on the cargo units and with regard to the strength of the securing points and lashings⁷; and
- 713 (4) cargo on board all passenger ships⁸ and cargo ships⁹ carrying cargoes other than solid bulk cargoes¹⁰ (except cargo ships of less than 500 tons¹¹ engaged on voyages which are not international voyages)¹² is stowed and secured throughout any voyage in accordance with the Cargo Securing Manual¹³; and
- 714 (5) cargo on board all such ships as are mentioned in head (4) above¹⁴ with roll-on/roll-off cargo spaces¹⁵, must be stowed and secured in accordance with the Cargo Securing Manual before the ship leaves a berth¹⁶.

Where packaged goods have been packed into or onto a cargo unit, the shipper¹⁷ or forwarder¹⁸ of such goods must ensure that¹⁹:

- 715 (a) the cargo is packed and secured so as to prevent, throughout any voyage, damage or hazard to the ship and the persons on board²⁰; and

SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/ (1) SAFETY AND HEALTH ON SHIPS/(vi) Carriage of Cargoes requiring Special Precautions/A. IN GENERAL/663. Requirement for oxygen analysis and gas detection equipment.

663. Requirement for oxygen analysis and gas detection equipment.

In the case of a ship transporting or accepting for transport a bulk cargo¹ which is liable to emit a toxic or flammable gas, or cause oxygen depletion in the cargo hold², an appropriate instrument for measuring the concentration of gas or oxygen in the air must be provided together with detailed instructions for its use³. Such an instrument must be of a type approved by a certifying authority⁴, and the crew are to be trained in its use⁵.

An owner⁶ of a ship which transports, or a master who accepts for carriage, such a bulk cargo without ensuring that this requirement for oxygen analysis and gas detection equipment has been complied with⁷ is guilty of an offence⁸.

1 As to the meaning of 'bulk cargo' see PARA 660 note 2; and as to the meaning of 'cargo' for these purposes see PARA 660 note 1.

2 For these purposes, 'cargo hold' means any hold in the ship appropriated for the carriage of cargo: Merchant Shipping (Carriage of Cargoes) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/336, reg 2(1).

3 Merchant Shipping (Carriage of Cargoes) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/336, reg 7(1). As to equivalents and exemptions see PARA 665.

4 For these purposes, 'Certifying Authority' means the Secretary of State or any other person or organisation authorised by the Secretary of State: Merchant Shipping (Carriage of Cargoes) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/336, reg 2(1). As to the Secretary of State see PARA 38. Any approval given pursuant to the Merchant Shipping (Carriage of Cargoes) Regulations 1999, SI 1999/336, must be given in writing and must specify the date when it is to come into force and the conditions (if any) on which it is given: reg 2(4).

SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/ (1) SAFETY AND HEALTH ON SHIPS/(vi) Carriage of Cargoes requiring Special Precautions/A. IN GENERAL/664. Safe use of pesticides in ships.

664. Safe use of pesticides in ships.

Where pesticides are used in cargo spaces¹, they must be used in accordance with the appropriate Merchant Shipping Notice².

If this requirement as to the safe use of pesticides in ships is not complied with³, the owner⁴ and master are each guilty of an offence⁵.

1 As to the meaning of 'cargo space' see PARA 660 note 1.

As to the meaning of 'Merchant Shipping Notice' see PARA 660 note 2. The stated purpose of Merchant Shipping Notice 1718(M) is to specify: the requirements for the safe use of pesticides in cargo spaces on board ships when loaded or intended to be loaded with any cargo, with the exception of liquids in bulk or gases in bulk; and the relevant aspects of the International Maritime Organisation ('IMO') Recommendations on the Safe Use of Pesticides in Ships which are mandatory for these purposes. 665. Power to provide for equivalents and exemptions.

Where there is a requirement¹ that a particular piece of equipment (or type thereof) is to be provided or carried in a ship (or that any particular provision is to be made) the certifying authority² may permit any other piece of equipment to be provided or carried (or any other provisions to be made in that ship) if he is satisfied by trials thereof or otherwise that such other piece of equipment or provision is at least as effective as that otherwise³ required⁴. For these purposes, the results of verification and tests carried out by bodies or laboratories of other member states of the International Maritime Organisation⁵ offering suitable and satisfactory guarantees of technical and professional competence and independence must be accepted⁶.

The Secretary of State⁷ may exempt any ship from all or any of the provisions relating to the carriage of cargoes⁸ as may be specified in the exemption on such terms, if any, as he may specify and, on giving reasonable notice, he may also alter or cancel such an exemption⁹.

SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/ (1) SAFETY AND HEALTH ON SHIPS/(vi) Carriage of Cargoes requiring Special Precautions/B. BULK CARGOES OTHER THAN GRAIN/666. Conditions to be met before bulk cargoes other than grain are loaded.

B. BULK CARGOES OTHER THAN GRAIN

666. Conditions to be met before bulk cargoes other than grain are loaded.

Prior to loading a bulk cargo¹, the master must be in possession of stability information², containing comprehensive information on the ship's stability and on the distribution of cargo and ballast for the standard loading conditions³.

The master must not accept for loading concentrates or other cargoes which may liquefy⁴ unless⁵:

- 717 (1) either the moisture content⁶ of the cargo indicated in the certificate (which indicates both the moisture content of the cargo and its transportable moisture limit)⁷ is less than its transportable moisture limit⁸; or
- 718 (2) if the moisture content is above that limit, appropriate safety arrangements are made to the satisfaction of the certifying authority⁹ to ensure adequate stability in the case of cargo shifting, and the ship has adequate structural integrity¹⁰.

Prior to loading a bulk cargo which is not classified in accordance with the SOLAS Convention¹¹, but which has chemical properties that may create a potential hazard¹², appropriate special precautions for its safe carriage must be taken¹³.

The owner¹⁴ must ensure that the master is furnished with the stability information¹⁵; and the master must not accept cargo for loading unless:

- 719 (a) he has in his possession the stability information¹⁶;
- 720 (b) he is satisfied by calculations that the proposed loading arrangements would ensure sufficient stability in accordance with the stability information so provided¹⁷; and
- 721 (c) he is satisfied that, in the case of a bulk cargo which is not classified in accordance with the SOLAS Convention¹⁸, but which has chemical properties that may create a potential hazard¹⁹, the appropriate special precautions for its safe carriage that are required²⁰ have been taken²¹.

An owner who contravenes the requirement to ensure that the master is furnished with the stability information²² is guilty of an offence²³; and a master who contravenes the conditions for accepting for loading concentrates or other cargoes which may liquefy²⁴ or who contravenes the conditions for accepting cargo which are set out in heads (a) to (c) above²⁵ is guilty of an offence²⁶.

SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/ (1) SAFETY AND HEALTH ON SHIPS/(vi) Carriage of Cargoes requiring Special Precautions/B. BULK CARGOES OTHER THAN GRAIN/667. Loading, unloading and stowage of bulk cargoes.

667. Loading, unloading and stowage of bulk cargoes.

To enable the master to prevent excessive stresses in the ship's structure, it is the duty of the owner¹ to ensure the ship is provided with a cargo loading manual, which must be written in a language with which the ship's officers responsible for cargo operations are familiar². If this language is not English, the ship must be provided with a manual written also in the English language³. The manual may consist of one or more booklets and must, as a minimum, include⁴:

- 722 (1) stability data⁵;
- 723 (2) ballasting and deballasting rates and capacities⁶;
- 724 (3) maximum allowable load per unit surface area of the tank top plating⁷;
- 725 (4) maximum allowable load per hold⁸;
- 726 (5) general loading and unloading instructions with regard to the strength of the ship's structure including any limitations on the most adverse operating conditions during loading, unloading, ballasting operations and the voyage⁹;
- 727 (6) any special restrictions such as limitations on the most adverse operating conditions imposed by the administration¹⁰ (or organisation recognised by it, if applicable)¹¹; and
- 728 (7) where strength calculations are required, maximum permissible forces and moments on the ship's hull during loading, unloading and the voyage¹².

Before a solid bulk cargo¹³ is loaded or unloaded, the master and the terminal representative¹⁴ must agree on a plan which:

- 729 (a) ensures that the permissible forces and moments on the ship are not exceeded during loading or unloading¹⁵; and
- 730 (b) includes the sequence, quantity and rate of loading or unloading¹⁶, taking into consideration the intended speed of loading or unloading, intended number of pours and the deballasting or ballasting capability of the ship¹⁷. The plan and any subsequent amendments thereto must be lodged with the appropriate authority of the port state¹⁸. The master and terminal representative must ensure that loading and unloading operations are conducted in accordance with the plan so agreed¹⁹.

It is the duty of the master to ensure that:

- 731 (i) bulk cargoes are loaded and trimmed²⁰ reasonably level, as necessary, to the boundaries of the cargo space²¹ so as to minimize the risk of shifting and to ensure that adequate stability will be maintained throughout the voyage²²;
- 732 (ii) when bulk cargoes are carried in 'tween-decks, the hatchways of such 'tween-decks are closed in those cases where the loading information indicates an unacceptable level of stress of the bottom structure if the hatchways are left open²³;
- 733 (iii) the cargo is trimmed reasonably level and either extends from side to side or is secured by additional longitudinal divisions of sufficient strength²⁴;

- 734 (iv) the safe load-carrying capacity of the 'tween-decks is observed to ensure that the deck-structure is not overloaded²⁵.

If during loading or unloading any of the limits of the ship referred to in heads (1) to (7) above²⁶ are exceeded or are likely to become so if the loading or unloading continues, the master has the right to suspend operation, and if he does so he must notify accordingly the appropriate authority of the port state with which the plan has been lodged²⁷; and, where these circumstances apply²⁸, the master and the terminal representative must ensure that corrective action is taken²⁹.

When unloading cargo, the master and terminal representative must ensure that the unloading method does not damage the ship's structure³⁰.

The master must ensure that ship's personnel continuously monitor cargo operations³¹.

Where possible, the ship's draught must be checked regularly during loading or unloading to confirm the tonnage figures supplied³²; and each draught and tonnage observation must be recorded in a cargo log-book³³.

If significant deviations from the plan agreed for loading or unloading³⁴ are detected, cargo or ballast operations (or both) must be adjusted to ensure that the deviations are corrected³⁵.

An owner who contravenes the duty to ensure the ship is provided with a cargo loading manual³⁶ is guilty of an offence³⁷.

A master who contravenes the provisions which require a plan for loading or unloading the ship to be agreed³⁸, or who fails to ensure that loading and unloading operations are conducted in accordance with the plan so agreed³⁹, or who fails to ensure that cargoes are loaded and trimmed as necessary⁴⁰, or who fails to ensure that corrective action is taken where, during loading or unloading, any of the ship's limits⁴¹ are exceeded or are likely to become so⁴², or who fails to ensure that the unloading method does not damage the ship's structure⁴³, or who fails to monitor cargo operations as required or fails to ensure that deviations from the plan agreed for loading or unloading are corrected⁴⁴, is guilty of an offence⁴⁵.

A terminal representative in the United Kingdom who contravenes the provisions which require a plan for loading or unloading the ship to be agreed⁴⁶, or who fails to ensure that loading and unloading operations are conducted in accordance with the plan so agreed⁴⁷, or who fails to ensure that corrective action is taken where, during loading or unloading, any of the ship's limits⁴⁸ are exceeded or are likely to become so⁴⁹, or who fails to ensure that the unloading method does not damage the ship's structure⁵⁰, is guilty of an offence⁵¹.

Ships carrying grain to comply with the International Grain Code.

C. CARGO SHIPS CARRYING GRAIN

668. Ships carrying grain to comply with the International Grain Code.

A ship carrying grain¹ must comply with the requirements of the International Grain Code².

The owner³ and master must ensure⁴ that:

- 735 (1) a ship loading grain complies with the International Grain Code⁵; and
- 736 (2) subject to head (b) below, the ship has on board a document of authorisation as required by that Code⁶.

Except when a ship may be in distress, the owner and master must not permit a ship loaded with grain in bulk outside the United Kingdom⁷ to enter any port in the United Kingdom so laden, unless the ship has been loaded in accordance with the International Grain Code⁸.

No person may order the commencement of the loading of grain into a ship in the United Kingdom unless he is satisfied that⁹:

- 737 (a) the ship has on board a document of authorisation referred to in head (2) above¹⁰; or
- 738 (b) the master has demonstrated to the satisfaction of the certifying authority that the ship will, in its proposed loading condition, comply with the appropriate requirements of the International Grain Code and has obtained a document to this effect signed by a surveyor of such a certifying authority¹¹.

An owner or master who fails to ensure that a ship loading grain complies with the International Grain Code and has on board a document of authorisation as required by that Code¹², or who permits a ship loaded in contravention of the International Grain Code outside the United Kingdom to enter any port in the United Kingdom so laden¹³, is guilty of an offence¹⁴.

A person who orders the commencement of the loading of grain into a ship in the United Kingdom without satisfying himself first as to the conditions so required (as set out in heads (a) and (b) above)¹⁵ is guilty of an offence¹⁶.

(vii) Special Provision for Ships receiving Transhipped Fish

669. Requirements to be met by ships in respect of which transhipment licences are in force.

The Secretary of State¹ may, for all or any of the following purposes², that is to say:

- 739 (1) the purpose of securing the safety of ships³ in respect of which transhipment licences⁴ are in force and persons on them⁵;
- 740 (2) the purpose of protecting the health of persons on such ships⁶;

The matters with respect to which requirements may be so prescribed include, in particular, the construction and equipment of ships, the manning of ships and operational matters¹¹; and such regulations may¹² apply in relation to a ship in respect of which a transhipment licence is in force any requirements contained in safety regulations¹³, regulations relating to pollution¹⁴, or any international agreement¹⁵, whether or not those requirements would otherwise apply in relation to that ship¹⁶.

670. Compliance with standards prescribed for ships in respect of which transhipment licences are in force.

If it appears to the Secretary of State¹ that any requirement of regulations made by him either in relation to ships² in respect of which transhipment licences³ are in force⁴, or in relation to compulsory insurance or security⁵, is being contravened in respect of such a ship⁶, he may serve on the master⁷ a notice⁸, which specifies the contravention by reason of which it is given⁹, and must:

- 743 (1) prohibit the receiving by the ship of fish transhipped from another ship¹⁰;
- 744 (2) prohibit the processing of fish on the ship¹¹; or
- 745 (3) prohibit both such receiving and such processing¹².

The Secretary of State must revoke such a notice if he is satisfied that the contravention specified in it has been remedied¹³.

If a transhipment licence ceases to be in force in respect of a ship to which such a notice relates, the notice is¹⁴ revoked¹⁵.

If without reasonable excuse the master of a ship causes or permits any prohibition imposed by such a notice¹⁶ to be contravened in respect of the ship, he is guilty of an offence¹⁷.

(i) In general

671. Application of the load lines provisions.

The provisions relating to load lines¹ apply to United Kingdom ships wherever they may be and to other ships while they are within United Kingdom waters², except:

- 746 (1) ships of war³;
 - 747 (2) ships solely engaged in fishing⁴;
 - 748 (3) pleasure vessels⁵;
 - 749 (4) ships which do not go to sea⁶; and
 - 750 (5) ships under 80 net tons engaged solely in the coasting trade and not carrying cargo⁷ which fall within one of the following classes⁸, namely:
- 39
- 89. (a) tugs or salvage ships⁹;
 - 90. (b) hopper barges or dredgers¹⁰;
 - 91. (c) ships used by or on behalf of: (i) a general or local lighthouse authority¹¹ for the purpose of the authority's functions as such¹²; (ii) a government department for fishery protection purposes, or a local fisheries committee¹³ for the regulation of sea fisheries within its district¹⁴; (iii) a government department for fishery or scientific research¹⁵; or (iv) the Secretary of State for Defence¹⁶ for the purpose of ensuring safety in the use of firing ranges or weapons at sea¹⁷; and
 - 92. (d) ships in respect of which passenger certificates are in force specifying limits beyond which the ship must not ply, and which operate solely within those limits¹⁸.

1. The Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241: see reg 4(1). For these purposes, 'load line' means a mark on a ship indicating the maximum depth to which it may be loaded: reg 2(1).

2. Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 4(1). As to exemptions granted under the Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, see PARA 672. As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 17 note 3.

The Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, do not apply to large or small commercial vessels which have been examined, and in respect of which a certificate has been issued, in accordance with the applicable Code of Practice, or to a vessel which is operating under the phase-in arrangements of the applicable Code of Practice, pursuant to the Merchant Shipping (Vessels in Commercial Use for Sport or Pleasure) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2771: see PARAS 610, 611.

3. Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 4(1)(a).

4. Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 4(1)(b).

5. Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 4(1)(c). For these purposes, 'pleasure vessel' means:

946 (1) any ship which at the time it is being used is, in the case of a ship wholly owned by an individual or individuals, used only for the sport or pleasure of the owner or the immediate family or friends of the owner or, in the case of a ship owned by a body corporate, used only for sport or pleasure and on which the persons are employees or officers of the body corporate, or their immediate family or friends; and is on a voyage or excursion for which the owner does not receive money for or in connection with operating the ship or carrying any person, other than as a contribution to the direct expenses of the operation of the ship incurred during the voyage or excursion; or

947 (2) any ship wholly owned by or on behalf of a members' club formed for the purpose of sport or pleasure which, at the time it is being used, is used only for the sport or pleasure of members of the club or their immediate family; and for the use of which any charges levied are paid into club funds and applied for the general use of the club; and

948 (3) in the case of any ship referred to in head (1) or head (2) no other payments are made by or on behalf of the users of the ship, other than by the owner;

and, for these purposes, 'immediate family' means, in relation to an individual, the spouse or civil partner of the individual, and a relative of the individual or the individual's spouse or civil partner; and 'relative' means brother, sister, ancestor or lineal descendant: reg 2(1) (definition amended by SI 2005/2114).

6 Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 4(1)(d). For these purposes, 'sea' does not include Category A, B, C or D waters, where 'Category A, B, C or D waters' means the waters specified as such in Merchant Shipping Notice 1776(M): Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 2(1). 'Merchant Shipping Notice' means a Notice described as such and issued by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency, and any reference to a particular Merchant Shipping Notice includes a reference to any Merchant Shipping Notice amending that Notice: reg 2(1). Accordingly, Merchant Shipping Notice 1776(M) (Categorisation of Waters: Notice to Owners, Operators and Masters) (March 2003) is published by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency and categorises United Kingdom waters which are not regarded currently as 'sea' for the purposes of merchant shipping legislation (excepting marine pollution). As to the Maritime and Coastguard Agency see PARA 56.

12 Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 4(2)(c)(i).

13 For these purposes, 'local fisheries committee' means a local fisheries committee constituted under the Sea Fisheries Regulation Act 1966 (see AGRICULTURE AND FISHERIES vol 1(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 964 et seq): Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 2(1).

672. Exemptions from load line rules.

The Secretary of State¹ may exempt from the provisions relating to load lines²:

- 751 (1) any ship which embodies features of a novel kind if the development of those features and their incorporation in ships engaged on international voyages³ might be seriously impeded if the ship had to comply with all the requirements of the provisions relating to load lines⁴;
- 752 (2) any ship plying on international voyages between near neighbouring ports if, in his opinion, the sheltered nature and condition of the voyages make it unreasonable or impracticable to apply the provisions relating to load lines, and if he is satisfied the government of the other country (or, as the case may be, of each of the other countries) concurs in that opinion⁵.

The Secretary of State may also exempt from the provisions a ship which is not a Convention-size⁶ ship or any other ship which does not ply on international voyages⁷.

Where a United Kingdom ship does not normally ply on international voyages but is, in exceptional circumstances, required to undertake a single international voyage, the Secretary of State may exempt the ship while engaged on that voyage⁸.

1 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 38.

2 le exempt from the Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241 (see PARAS 671, 673 et seq): reg 5(1). As to the meaning of 'load line' see PARA 671 note 1. Any exemption conferred under reg 5 may be conferred subject to such conditions as the Secretary of State thinks fit; and, where any such exemption is conferred subject to conditions, the exemption is not to have effect unless those conditions are complied with: reg 5(4).

Where a ship is exempted under reg 5(1), an International Load Line Exemption Certificate in the form prescribed by the International Convention on Load Lines (London, 5 April to 4 July 1966; TS 58 (1968); Cmnd 3708), as amended by the 1988 Protocol (Cmnd 4419) Annex III must be issued in respect of the ship by the Secretary of State: reg 12(1) (substituted by SI 2000/1335). Except in so far as the nature or terms of any such exemption require the contrary, the ship must be assigned freeboards in accordance with the Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 7 (see PARA 674), the ship is subject to surveys in accordance with reg 8 (see PARA 675), and regs 8-11 (see PARA 675 et seq) apply in relation to the Exemption Certificate as they apply in relation to an appropriate certificate, subject to the substitution, for references in those regulations to an Assigning Authority, of references to the Secretary of State: reg 12(3) (amended by SI 2000/1335). As to the meaning of 'Assigning Authority' see PARA 674 note 1. For these purposes, 'Exemption Certificate' means an International Load Line Exemption Certificate or a United Kingdom Load Line Exemption Certificate: Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 2(1) (definition added by SI 2000/1335). 'International Load Line Exemption Certificate' means an International Load Line Exemption Certificate issued under the International Convention on Load Lines (London, 5 April to 4 July 1966; TS 58 (1968); Cmnd 3708) (the '1966 Convention'), as amended by the 1988 Protocol (Cmnd 4419): Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 2(1) (definition added by SI 2000/1335). 'United Kingdom Load Line Exemption Certificate' means a certificate issued pursuant to the Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 12(2) (see PARA 672 note 7): reg 2(1) (definition added by SI 2000/1335).

Any reference in the Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, to the 1966 Convention includes any amendment of it considered by the Secretary of State to be relevant from time to time, and specified in a Merchant Shipping Notice: Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 2(3). As to the meaning of 'Merchant Shipping Notice' see PARA 671 note 6. As to the International Convention on Load Lines 1966 see PARA 8.

3 For these purposes, 'international voyage' means a voyage either between a port in the United Kingdom and a port outside the United Kingdom, or between a port in a Convention country (other than the United Kingdom) and a port in any other country or territory (whether a Convention country or not) which is outside the United Kingdom: Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 2(1). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 17 note 3. In determining for these purposes what are the ports between which a voyage is made no account is to be taken of any deviation by a ship from its intended voyage which is solely due to stress of weather or any other circumstance which neither the master nor the owner or the charterer (if any) of the ship could have prevented or forestalled: reg 2(2). For these purposes, 'Convention country' means a country or territory which is either a country the government of which is party to the International Convention on Load Lines (London, 5 April to 4 July 1966; TS 58 (1968); Cmnd 3708) (the '1966 Convention'), or to the 1966 Convention as amended by the 1988 Protocol (Cmnd 4419), or a territory to which the 1966 Convention, or the 1966 Convention as amended by the 1988 Protocol, extends: Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 2(1) (definition amended by SI 2000/1335). The list of Convention countries was previously contained in the Merchant Shipping (Load Lines Convention) (Various Countries) Order 1977, SI 1977/1875, and the Merchant Shipping (Load Lines Convention) (Countries) Order 1981, SI 1981/236 (both now revoked and not replaced).

4 Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 5(1)(a). See note 2.

5 Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 5(1)(b). See note 2.

6 For these purposes, 'Convention-size' in relation to a ship, means in the case of an existing ship, of not less than 150 gross tons (ascertained in accordance with the law in force on 21 July 1968) and in the case of a new ship, of not less than 24 metres in length; 'new ship' means a ship whose keel is laid (or which is at a similar stage of construction) on or after the material date; and 'existing ship' means a ship which is not a new ship: Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 2(1). 'Material date' for the purposes of the definitions of a 'new' and an 'existing' ship is, in relation to a ship whose parent country is a Convention country other than the United Kingdom, the date on which the 1966 Convention entered into force for that country and, in relation to any other ship, 21 July 1968: reg 2(1). 'Parent country', in relation to a ship, means the country or territory in which the ship is registered or, if the ship is not registered anywhere, it means the country or territory whose flag the ship flies: reg 2(1).

'Length' ('L'), in relation to a ship means the greater of the following distances:

949 (1) 96 per cent of the total length on a waterline at 85 per cent of the least moulded depth measured from the top of the keel; or

and where the stem contour is concave above the waterline at 85% of the least moulded depth, both the forward terminal of the total length and the fore-side of the stem respectively must be taken at the vertical projection to that waterline of the aftermost point of the stem contour above that waterline; in ships designed with a rake of keel, the waterline on which this length is measured must be parallel to the designed waterline: reg 2(1) (definition substituted by SI 2000/1335). As to the meanings of 'moulded depth' and 'rake of keel' for these purposes see the Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 2(1).

7 Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 5(2). See note 2. Where a ship is exempted under reg 5(2), a United Kingdom Load Line Exemption Certificate must be issued in respect of the ship by the Secretary of State which must state the conditions with which the ship is to comply, and which must be in the form prescribed in Merchant Shipping Notice 1752(M) Sch 8 (United Kingdom Load Line Certificates): Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 12(2) (amended by SI 2000/1335). Except in so far as the nature or terms of any such exemption require the contrary, the ship must be assigned freeboards in accordance with the Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 7 (see PARA 674), the ship is subject to surveys in accordance with reg 8 (see PARA 675), and regs 8-11 (see PARA 675 et seq) apply in relation to the Exemption Certificate as they apply in relation to an appropriate certificate, subject to the substitution, for references in those regulations to an Assigning Authority, of references to the Secretary of State: reg 12(3) (as amended: see note 2).

8 Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 5(3). See note 2. Where a ship is exempted under reg 5(3), an International Load Line Exemption Certificate in the form prescribed by the International Convention on Load Lines (London, 5 April to 4 July 1966; TS 58 (1968); Cmnd 3708), as amended by the 1988 Protocol (Cmnd 4419) must be issued in respect of the ship by the Secretary of State: reg 12(1) (as substituted: see note 2). Except in so far as the nature or terms of any such exemption require the contrary, the ship must be assigned freeboards in accordance with the Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 7 (see PARA 674), is subject to surveys in accordance with reg 8 (see PARA 675), and regs 8-11 (see PARA 675 et seq) apply in relation to the Exemption Certificate as they apply in relation to an appropriate certificate, subject to the substitution, for references in those regulations to an Assigning Authority, of references to the Secretary of State: reg 12(3) (as amended: see note 2).

Halsbury's Laws of England/SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW (VOLUME 93 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-590; VOLUME 94 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 591-1254)/7. SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/(2) LOAD LINES/(i) In general/673. General compliance with load line rules.

673. General compliance with load line rules.

Subject to any exemption conferred under the provisions relating to load lines¹, a ship must not proceed, or attempt to proceed, to sea² unless:

- 753 (1) it has been surveyed in accordance with the load lines rules³;
- 754 (2) it is marked with the appropriate marks⁴;
- 755 (3) it complies with the conditions of assignment applicable to it⁵; and
- 756 (4) information as to the stability of the ship⁶, or as to the loading and ballasting of any ship of more than 150 metres in length⁷, is provided for the guidance of the master of the ship⁸.

However, this requirement does not apply to a non-United Kingdom ship⁹ in respect of which a valid Convention certificate¹⁰ is produced¹¹.

A ship must not be so loaded that if the ship is in salt water and has no list the appropriate load line on each side of the ship is submerged¹² or, in any other case, so that the appropriate load line on each side of the ship would be submerged if the ship were in salt water and had no list¹³; and a ship must not proceed to sea when it is in contravention of this provision¹⁴.

Before any ship proceeds to sea from any port in the United Kingdom¹⁵, the master of that ship must produce to an officer of revenue and customs from whom a clearance¹⁶ for the ship is demanded for an international voyage¹⁷: (a) in the case of a Convention-size ship¹⁸, a valid Convention certificate¹⁹; or (b) in the case of any other ship, a United Kingdom Load Line Certificate²⁰ or a United Kingdom Load Line Exemption Certificate²¹, which is in force in relation to the ship²².

For these purposes²³, where a valid Convention certificate cannot be produced, the freeboard deck²⁴ and the freeboard must be determined in accordance with the provisions relating to load lines²⁵ and the appropriate load line is the maximum depth to which the ship may be loaded in salt water²⁶.

1 le subject to any exemption conferred under the Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241 (see PARA 672): see reg 6(1). As to the meaning of 'load line' see PARA 671 note 1.

2 As to the meaning of 'sea' see PARA 671 note 6. As to penalties relating to the contravention of heads (1) to (4) in the text see PARA 1189.

3 Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 6(1)(a). Head (1) in the text refers to a ship that has been surveyed in accordance with the Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241 (as to which see PARA 675 et seq): see reg 6(1)(a).

4 Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 6(1)(b). For these purposes, 'appropriate marks' means the appropriate load lines, the deck-line (as to which see reg 16; and PARA 681) and load-line mark (as to which see reg 17; and PARA 681): Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 2(1). 'Appropriate load line' means the load line directed to be marked on a ship pursuant to reg 7(2)(b) (see PARA 674), or in the case of a ship not surveyed under the Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, pursuant to an International Load Line Certificate or an International Load Line Certificate (1966) which is in force, indicating the maximum depth to which the ship may be loaded in salt water in a particular zone or area and seasonal period: Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 2(1) (definition amended by SI 2000/1335). 'International Load Line Certificate' means an International Load Line Certificate issued under the International Convention on Load Lines (London, 5 April to 4 July 1966; TS 58 (1968); Cmnd 3708) (the '1966 Convention'), as amended by the 1988 Protocol (Cmnd 4419); and 'International Load Line Certificate (1966)' means an International Load Line Certificate issued under the 1966 Convention before the relevant entry into force date, where 'relevant entry into force date' means the date when the 1988 Protocol enters into force in respect of the Government of the parent country of the ship in question: Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 2(1) (all definitions added by SI 2000/1335). As to the International Convention on Load Lines 1966 see PARA 8; and as to any reference, in the Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, to the 1966 Convention see PARA 672 note 2.

For these purposes, 'conditions of assignment' means the conditions relating to construction, arrangement and stability with which a ship must comply in order to be assigned freeboards: reg 2(1) (definition added by SI 2000/1335). 'Freeboard' means the distance measured vertically downwards at amidships (ie the middle of the ship's length) from the upper edge of the deck-line described in the Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 16 (see PARA 681) to the position at which the upper edge of the load line appropriate to the freeboard is to be marked, where 'amidships' in relation to a ship means the middle of the ship's length (L): reg 2(1). As to the meaning of 'length (L)' see PARA 672 note 6. As to compliance with the applicable conditions of assignment of freeboards see PARA 674.

10 For these purposes, 'valid Convention certificate' means either an International Load Line Certificate (1966) or an International Load Line Exemption Certificate (1966), which is in force, or an International Load Line Certificate or an International Load Line Exemption Certificate, which is in force: Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 2(1) (definition substituted by SI 2000/1335). As to the meaning of 'International Load Line Exemption Certificate' see PARA 672 note 2. 15 As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 17 note 3.

16 For these purposes, 'clearance' includes transire: Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 2(1). A transire is a warrant from the custom-house to let goods pass: see CUSTOMS AND EXCISE vol 12(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1065.

23 Ie for the purpose of the Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 6: see reg 6(6).

24 For these purposes, 'freeboard deck' means the deck from which the freeboards assigned to the ship are calculated, being:

951 (1) the uppermost complete deck exposed to weather and sea, which has permanent means of closing all openings open to the weather, and below which all openings in the sides of the ship are fitted with permanent means of watertight closing; or

952 (2) at the request of the owner and subject to the approval of the Secretary of State, a deck lower than that described in head (1) above, it being a complete and permanent deck which is continuous both in a fore and aft direction at least between the machinery space and peak bulkheads of the ship, and athwartships, a deck which is stepped being taken to consist for this purpose of the lowest line of the deck and the continuation of that line parallel to the upper part of the deck: Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 2(1) (definition amended by SI 2000/1335). 'Watertight', in relation to any part of the ship, means capable of preventing the passage of water in any direction: Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, reg 2(1). Any approval given pursuant to the Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241, must be given in writing and must specify the date on which it takes effect and the conditions (if any) on which it is given: reg 2(5). (ii) Freeboards

674. Assignment of freeboards and the conditions of assignment.

The Assigning Authority¹ must assign freeboards² to a United Kingdom ship in accordance with the requirements of the provisions relating to load lines³. The Authority must:

- 757 (1) determine the particulars of the freeboards to be assigned⁴;
- 758 (2) determine which load lines⁵ are to be marked⁶ on the sides of the ship⁷;
- 759 (3) determine the position where the load lines, the deck-line and the load line mark are to be so marked⁸; and
- 760 (4) complete a copy of the record of particulars⁹ relating to the conditions of assignment¹⁰.

Various types of freeboards, including timber freeboards, may be assigned under the provisions¹¹. The freeboards assigned to a new ship¹² must be determined in accordance with the relevant provisions of the appropriate Merchant Shipping Notice¹³; while the freeboards assigned to an existing ship¹⁴ must be determined in accordance with the provisions applicable to the ship under the law in force immediately before 21 July 1968¹⁵. In either case, a freeboard so determined¹⁶ is the minimum freeboard that may be assigned to the ship¹⁷, although a greater than minimum freeboard (except a timber freeboard) may be assigned in certain circumstances¹⁸.

Every ship to which freeboards are assigned under the load line provisions¹⁹ must comply with the conditions of assignment²⁰ applicable to that ship which are set out in the relevant provisions of the appropriate Merchant Shipping Notice²¹. However, an existing ship may, instead of complying with these conditions²², comply with such of the requirements relevant to the assignment of freeboards to ships as were applicable to the ship under the law in force immediately before 21 July 1968²³.

A ship ceases to comply with the conditions of assignment:

- 761 (a) if, at any time after the assignment of freeboards, there has been any alteration²⁴ of the hull, superstructures, fittings or appliances of the ship such that²⁵:
(i) a requirement relevant to the assignment of freeboards which is applicable to the ship²⁶ is not complied with²⁷; or (ii) it differs in a material respect from the record of particulars²⁸; or
- 762 (b) if the record of particulars is not on board²⁹.

However, a ship is taken to comply with the conditions of assignment notwithstanding an alteration referred to in head (a) above if³⁰: (A) amended freeboards appropriate to the condition of the ship have been assigned, the ship has been marked with these load lines and a new certificate issued to the owner of the ship accordingly³¹; or (B) the alteration has been inspected by a surveyor³² on behalf of the Authority and that Authority is satisfied that the alteration is not such as to require any change in the freeboards assigned to the ship, and full particulars of the alteration together with the date and place of his inspection have been indorsed by the surveyor on the record of particulars³³.

- 1 For these purposes, 'Assigning Authority' means the Secretary of State or any person or organisation authorised by him for the purposes of the Merchant Shipping (Load Line) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/2241: reg 2(1). As to the Secretary of State see PARA 38.

As to the significance of the date 21 July 1968 see note 12.

(iii) Surveys and Certificates

675. The required initial survey, renewal survey and annual survey.

A United Kingdom ship is subject to the following surveys¹:

- 763 (1) an initial survey before the ship is put into service, which must include a complete inspection of its structure and equipment², and must be such as to ensure that the arrangements, materials and scantlings comply fully with the requirements of the provisions relating to load lines³;
- 764 (2) a renewal survey at intervals not exceeding five years⁴, which must be such as to ensure that the structure, equipment, arrangements, materials and scantlings comply fully with the requirements of the provisions relating to load lines⁵;
- 765 (3) an annual survey within the period of three months before or after each anniversary date of the appropriate certificate⁶ to ensure that⁷: (a) alterations⁸ have not been made to the hull or superstructures which would affect the calculations determining the position of the load line⁹; (b) the fittings and appliances for the protection of openings, guard rails, freeing ports and means of access to crew's quarters are maintained in an effective condition¹⁰; (c) the appropriate marks¹¹ are correctly and permanently indicated¹²; and (d) information as to the stability of the ship¹³, or as to the loading and ballasting of any ship of more than 150 metres in length¹⁴, is provided for the guidance of the master of the ship¹⁵.

The owner and master must ensure that after any of the surveys referred to in heads (1) to (3) above has been completed, no material alteration is made to the ship, its structure and equipment, without the approval¹⁶ of the Assigning Authority¹⁷.

After a satisfactory annual survey referred to in head (3) above, the surveyor¹⁸ must indorse the appropriate certificate¹⁹ accordingly²⁰.

676. Issue of appropriate certificates.

The Assigning Authority¹ must issue² an International Load Line Certificate³ in the case of a Convention-size ship⁴, or a United Kingdom Load Line Certificate⁵ in respect of any other ship, in respect of a United Kingdom ship which has been duly surveyed and marked⁶. Whether the certificate is an International Load Line Certificate or a United Kingdom Load Line Certificate, it must be in the prescribed form⁷.

Subject to any exemption conferred by or under the provisions relating to load lines⁸, a ship must not proceed, or attempt to proceed, to sea⁹ unless the appropriate certificate¹⁰ is in force in respect of that ship¹¹.

Provision is made concerning the surveying of ships and the issuing of an International Load Line Certificate (or the endorsement of the appropriate certificate¹²) in respect of United Kingdom ships by the governments of other Convention countries¹³, upon request by the Secretary of State¹⁴; and the surveying and issuing of an International Load Line Certificate by the Assigning Authority in respect of ships transferred from the registries of the governments of other countries to the United Kingdom registry, provided certain conditions are satisfied¹⁵.

677. Issue of certificate following survey of non-United Kingdom ship.

The Secretary of State¹ may, at the request of a government of a Convention country² survey a ship registered in that country and, if satisfied that the requirements of the International Convention on Load Lines 1966³ are complied with and that a survey has been satisfactorily completed in accordance with the provisions relating to load lines⁴, issue to the ship an International Load Line Certificate⁵ and, where appropriate, indorse such certificates in accordance with the requirements of the 1966 Convention⁶. A certificate issued in accordance with such a request must contain a statement that it has been so issued and it has the same effect as if it was issued by that government and not by the Secretary of State⁷.

A United Kingdom Load Line Certificate⁸ may be issued to a non-United Kingdom ship⁹ which has been surveyed and marked in accordance with the load line provisions¹⁰. A certificate issued in this way is subject to the same conditions and has the same effect as a similar certificate issued to a United Kingdom ship¹¹, except that any certificate so issued in respect of a ship registered in a Convention country is valid only so long as the ship is not plying on international voyages¹², and must be cancelled by the Secretary of State if he has reason to believe that the ship is plying on such voyages¹³.

678. Duration and extension of issued certificates.

The duration of any certificate issued under the provisions relating to load lines¹ must not exceed five years² beginning with the date of completion of any initial or renewal survey³. However, this is subject to the following qualifications⁴:

- 766 (1) when the renewal survey⁵ is completed within three months before the expiry of the existing certificate, the new certificate is valid for a period beginning with the date of completion of the renewal survey and ending on a date which does not exceed five years from the expiry of the existing certificate⁶;
- 767 (2) when the renewal survey⁷ is completed after the expiry of the existing certificate, the new certificate is valid for a period beginning with the date of completion of the renewal survey and ending on a date which does not exceed five years from the expiry of the previous certificate⁸;
- 768 (3) when the renewal survey⁹ is completed more than three months before the expiry of the existing certificate, the new certificate is valid for a period beginning with the date of completion of the renewal survey and ending on a date which does not exceed five years from the date of completion of the renewal survey¹⁰;
- 769 (4) if, after the renewal survey, a new certificate cannot be issued to the ship before the expiry of the existing certificate, the Assigning Authority may extend the validity of the existing certificate for a period not exceeding five months¹¹;
- 770 (5) if, at the time when a certificate expires, a ship is not in a port in which it is to be surveyed, the Assigning Authority may extend the validity of the certificate, but this extension may be granted only where it appears proper and reasonable to the Assigning Authority to do so for the purpose of allowing the ship to complete its voyage to the port in which it is to be surveyed¹²; and
- 771 (6) a certificate issued to a ship engaged on short voyages which has not already been extended¹³ may be extended by the Assigning Authority for a period of not more than one month beginning with the date of its expiry¹⁴.

In special circumstances, as determined by the Assigning Authority, a new certificate need not be dated from the expiry of the previous certificate before the extension was granted, as required by heads (1) to (3), (5) and (6) above; and, in these special circumstances, the new certificate is valid for a period ending on a date which is not more than five years from the date of completion of the renewal survey¹⁵.

If an annual survey is completed before the period of three months specified in relation thereto¹⁶ then: (a) a new anniversary date must be indorsed on the certificate, which must not be more than three months later than the date on which the annual survey was completed¹⁷; (b) the subsequent annual survey¹⁸ must be completed at the intervals prescribed in relation thereto¹⁹ using the new anniversary date²⁰; and (c) the expiry date of the certificate may remain unchanged provided one or more annual surveys are carried out so that the maximum prescribed intervals between the surveys²¹ are not exceeded²².

SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/(2) LOAD LINES/(iii) Surveys and Certificates/679. Certificates ceasing to be valid, and surrender and cancellation of certificates.

679. Certificates ceasing to be valid, and surrender and cancellation of certificates.

An appropriate certificate¹ issued in respect of a United Kingdom ship² ceases to be valid where³:

- 772 (1) material alterations⁴ have taken place in the hull or superstructures of the ship such as would necessitate the assignment of an increased freeboard⁵;
- 773 (2) the fittings and appliances for the protection of openings, guard rails, freeing ports and means of access to crew's quarters⁶ are not maintained in an effective condition⁷;
- 774 (3) the certificate is not appropriately indorsed⁸ to show that it has been the subject of an annual survey⁹;
- 775 (4) the structural strength of the ship is lowered to such an extent that the ship is unsafe¹⁰;
- 776 (5) a new certificate is issued in respect of the ship¹¹; or
- 777 (6) the ship ceases to be a United Kingdom ship¹².

The Secretary of State¹³ may cancel an appropriate certificate issued in respect of a United Kingdom ship if he is satisfied that¹⁴:

- 778 (a) the certificate was issued on false or erroneous information¹⁵;
- 779 (b) information on the basis of which freeboards were assigned to the ship was incorrect in a material particular¹⁶; or
- 780 (c) the ship ceases to comply with the conditions of assignment relating to it¹⁷.

However, where the Secretary of State proposes to cancel a certificate, he must first notify the owner in writing, specifying the grounds for the proposed cancellation¹⁸; and, unless he considers that urgent safety considerations so require¹⁹, the Secretary of State must not cancel the certificate until the owner has been given a reasonable opportunity to make representations, and until the Secretary of State has considered any such representations made²⁰.

The Secretary of State may require any certificate duly issued²¹ which has expired, ceased to be valid, or been cancelled, to be surrendered as he directs²².

Where an appropriate certificate¹ or an exemption certificate² is issued³ in respect of a United Kingdom ship, the owner and master of the ship must ensure that the certificate is kept legible and posted up in some conspicuous place on board the ship⁴.

Before any United Kingdom ship leaves any dock, wharf, harbour or other place for the purpose of proceeding to sea⁵, the master of the ship must⁶ ensure a notice is posted up in some conspicuous place on board the ship, in a form and containing such particulars relating to the depth to which the ship is loaded as is specified in the relevant provisions of the appropriate Merchant Shipping Notice⁷. Where a notice has been posted up in this way⁸, the master of the ship must cause it to be kept posted and legible until the ship arrives at some other dock, wharf, harbour or place⁹.

(iv) Load Lines and Marks

681. Specification of load lines and marks.

Provisions relating to load lines¹ make detailed specification as to the marking of deck-lines, load line marks and load lines², in particular:

- 781 (1) the exact size and positioning of the deck-line³;
- 782 (2) the exact size and positioning of the load line mark⁴;
- 783 (3) the exact size, variant type and positioning of the load lines⁵;
- 784 (4) the exact size, variant type and positioning of timber load lines⁶;
- 785 (5) the exact positioning of each load line mark on each side of the ship⁷; and
- 786 (6) the method of marking⁸.

The appropriate load line⁹ in respect of a ship at any particular zone or area and seasonal period must be ascertained in accordance with the relevant provisions of the appropriate Merchant Shipping Notice¹⁰.

After the appropriate marks have been made on a ship, it is the duty of the owner and master to keep the ship so marked¹¹; and the marks must not be concealed, removed, altered, defaced or obliterated except with the authority of the Assigning Authority¹².

(v) Information for the Master

682. Information as to stability, loading and ballasting of ships.

The owner of every ship¹ must provide, for the guidance of the master, information relating to the stability of the ship². Such information must be in the form of a book which must be kept on the ship at all times in the custody of the master³. In the case of a United Kingdom ship, the information must include all matters specified in the relevant provisions of the appropriate Merchant Shipping Notice⁴ and must be in the form required therein⁵.

The information must be based on the determination of stability taken from an inclining test carried out in the presence of a surveyor⁶ appointed by the Secretary of State⁷ or, in the case of any of the following type of ship⁸, namely

- 787 (1) an oil tanker over 100 metres in length⁹;
- 788 (2) a bulk carrier, or an ore carrier, over 150 metres in length¹⁰;
- 789 (3) a single deck bulk carrier over 100 metres in length but not exceeding 150 metres in length¹¹;
- 790 (4) a single deck dry cargo ship over 100 metres in length¹²;
- 791 (5) a purpose built container ship over 125 metres in length¹³;
- 792 (6) a column stabilised mobile offshore drilling unit¹⁴; or
- 793 (7) a column stabilised mobile offshore support unit¹⁵, by the Assigning Authority¹⁶. The information must be amended whenever any alterations¹⁷ are made to the ship or changes occur to it which will materially affect the information and, if necessary, the ship must be re-inclined¹⁸. However, the inclining test may be dispensed with if:

- 794 (a) in the case of any ship, basic stability data is available from the inclining test of a sister ship and the Secretary of State (or, in the case of a ship falling within any of heads (1) to (7) above¹⁹, the Assigning Authority) is satisfied that reliable stability information can be obtained from such data²⁰; and
- 795 (b) in the case of a ship specially designed for the carriage of liquids or ore in bulk (or of any class of such ships), the information available in respect of similar ships shows that the ship's proportions and arrangements will ensure more than sufficient stability in all probable loading conditions²¹.

Before the information is issued to the master, if it relates to a ship falling within any of heads (1) to (7) above²², it must be approved²³ either by the Secretary of State or by the Authority which assigned freeboards to the ship²⁴; and if the information relates to any other ship it must be approved by the Secretary of State before being so issued²⁵.

The owner of any ship of more than 150 metres in length²⁶ specially designed for the carriage of liquids or ore in bulk must provide, for the guidance of the master, information relating to the loading and ballasting of the ship²⁷. This information must indicate the maximum stresses permissible for the ship and specify the manner in which the ship is to be loaded and ballasted to avoid the creation of unacceptable stresses in its structure²⁸.

- 797 (2) allow in an exceptional case departure from the requirements of any of the provisions relating to load lines⁵ on condition that the freeboards to be assigned to the ship⁶ are increased to such an extent as to satisfy the Secretary of State that the safety of the ship and protection afforded to the crew will be no less effective than would be the case if the ship fully complied with those requirements and there were no such increase of freeboards⁷.

SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/(3) TEMPORARY EXCLUSION ZONES/684. Power to establish temporary exclusion zones where a casualty is wrecked, damaged or in distress.

(3) TEMPORARY EXCLUSION ZONES

684. Power to establish temporary exclusion zones where a casualty is wrecked, damaged or in distress.

Where a ship¹, structure or other thing (the 'relevant casualty')² is in United Kingdom waters³, or in a part of the sea within which the jurisdiction and rights of the United Kingdom are exercisable for the purposes of the protection and preservation of the marine environment⁴, and where the relevant casualty is wrecked, damaged or in distress⁵, then, if it appears to the Secretary of State⁶:

- 798 (1) that significant harm⁷ will or may occur as a direct or indirect result of the relevant casualty being wrecked, damaged or in distress⁸; and
- 799 (2) that, if access to an area around the relevant casualty were restricted⁹, significant harm, or the risk of such harm, would be prevented or reduced¹⁰, he may by a direction¹¹ identify an area to which access is so restricted (a 'temporary exclusion zone')¹².

A temporary exclusion zone may not include any area which is neither within United Kingdom waters nor within a part of the sea within which the jurisdiction and rights of the United Kingdom are exercisable for the purposes of the protection and preservation of the marine environment¹³.

If it appears to the Secretary of State at any time after a temporary exclusion zone is established that the zone is larger than is needed for the purpose of preventing or reducing significant harm, or the risk of such harm, he must by direction vary the direction establishing the zone accordingly¹⁴.

A temporary exclusion zone may be identified¹⁵ by reference to the position of the relevant casualty from time to time¹⁶.

If it appears to the Secretary of State at any time after a temporary exclusion zone is established that the zone is not needed for the purpose of preventing or reducing significant harm, or the risk of such harm, he must by direction revoke the direction establishing the zone¹⁷.

Where the Secretary of State gives a direction in relation to temporary exclusion zones¹⁸, he must¹⁹: (a) as soon as practicable, publish it in such manner as he considers appropriate for bringing it to the attention of persons likely to be affected by it²⁰; and (b) within the period of 24 hours from the giving of the direction, send a copy of it to the International Maritime Organisation²¹.

685. Control of movements affected by temporary exclusion zones.

A direction establishing a temporary exclusion zone¹ may contain a statement to the effect that the direction is given for the purpose of preventing or reducing significant pollution (or the risk of significant pollution) in the United Kingdom², in United Kingdom waters³, or in a part of the sea within which the jurisdiction and rights of the United Kingdom are exercisable for the purposes of the protection and preservation of the marine environment⁴. If a direction establishing a temporary exclusion zone contains a statement to such effect, no ship⁵ may⁶ enter or remain in the zone⁷. However, if such a direction establishing a temporary exclusion zone does not contain a statement to such effect, then⁸:

- 800 (1) no ship may enter or remain in any part of the zone that is in United Kingdom waters⁹; and
- 801 (2) no United Kingdom ship¹⁰ may enter or remain in any part of the zone that is in a part of the sea within which the jurisdiction and rights of the United Kingdom are exercisable for the purposes of the protection and preservation of the marine environment¹¹.

A ship may, however, enter or remain in a temporary exclusion zone or a part of such a zone if it does so¹²:

- 802 (a) in accordance with the direction establishing the zone¹³;
- 803 (b) with the consent of the Secretary of State¹⁴; or
- 804 (c) in accordance with regulations made by the Secretary of State for these purposes¹⁵.

A qualifying foreign ship¹⁶ may enter a temporary exclusion zone or a part of such a zone if, in doing so, it is exercising the right of transit passage¹⁷ through straits used for international navigation¹⁸.

If a ship enters or remains in a temporary exclusion zone or a part of such a zone in contravention¹⁹ of the restrictions in force²⁰, its owner and its master²¹ are each guilty of an offence²².

(4) SAFETY DIRECTIONS

686. Secretary of State's power to give safety directions in respect of a ship.

The Secretary of State¹ may give a direction in respect of a ship² if, in his opinion, an accident³ has occurred to or in the ship⁴, if, in his opinion, the accident has created a risk to safety or a risk of pollution by a hazardous substance⁵, and if, in his opinion, the direction is necessary to remove or reduce the risk⁶. The direction may be given to:

- 805 (1) the owner of the ship⁷;
- 806 (2) a person in possession of the ship⁸;
- 807 (3) the ship's master⁹;
- 808 (4) a ship's pilot¹⁰;
- 809 (5) the owner of a hazardous substance in the ship¹¹;
- 810 (6) a salvor in possession of the ship¹²;
- 811 (7) a person who is the servant or agent of a salvor in possession and who is in charge of the salvage operation¹³; or
- 812 (8) where the ship is in or has been directed to move into waters regulated or managed by a harbour authority¹⁴, the harbour authority or harbour master¹⁵.

The direction may require the person to whom it is given to take or refrain from taking any specified action in relation to the ship¹⁶, anything which is or was in the ship¹⁷, anything which forms or formed part of the ship¹⁸, anything which is or was being towed by the ship¹⁹, or a person on the ship²⁰. In particular, the direction may require a person to ensure that:

- 813 (a) a ship or other thing is moved or not moved²¹;
- 814 (b) a ship or other thing is moved or not moved to or from a specified area or over a specified route²²;
- 815 (c) cargo is or is not unloaded or discharged²³;
- 816 (d) a substance is or is not unloaded or discharged²⁴;
- 817 (e) specified salvage measures are taken or not taken²⁵;
- 818 (f) a person is put ashore or on board a ship²⁶.

The Secretary of State also may give such a direction in respect of a ship if, in his opinion, an accident has occurred to or in the ship²⁷, if, in his opinion, the accident has created a risk to safety or a risk of pollution by a hazardous substance²⁸, and if, in his opinion, the direction is necessary to remove or reduce the risk²⁹, and he may give the direction to a person in charge of coastal land or premises³⁰. Such a direction must be given in writing (or, if that is not reasonably practicable, confirmed in writing as soon as is reasonably practicable)³¹ and may require the person to whom it is given to grant access or facilities to or in relation to the ship or any person or thing which is or was on the ship³². In particular, such a direction may require a person:

- 819 (i) to permit persons to land³³;
- 820 (ii) to make facilities available for the undertaking of repairs or other works³⁴;

- 821 (iii) to make facilities available for the landing, storage and disposal of cargo or other things³⁵.

However, before giving such a direction³⁶ in respect of land or premises, the Secretary of State must, unless he thinks that it is not reasonably practicable, give the person to whom he proposes to give the direction an opportunity to make representations, and consider any representations made³⁷.

The Secretary of State also may give a direction in respect of a ship³⁸ if in his opinion it is necessary for the purpose of securing the safety of the ship or of other ships³⁹, securing the safety of persons or property⁴⁰, or preventing or reducing pollution⁴¹. The direction may be given to the owner of the ship⁴², to a person in possession of the ship⁴³, or to the master of the ship⁴⁴; and may require the person to whom it is given to ensure that:

- 822 (A) the ship is moved or not moved from a specified place or area in United Kingdom waters⁴⁵;
 823 (B) the ship is moved or not moved to a specified place or area in United Kingdom waters⁴⁶;
 824 (C) the ship is moved or not moved over a specified route in United Kingdom waters⁴⁷;
 825 (D) the ship is removed from United Kingdom waters⁴⁸.

A person acting on behalf of the Secretary of State may board a ship for the purpose of serving a safety direction⁴⁹ and may enter land or premises for that purpose also⁵⁰.

Where the Secretary of State proposes to give a safety direction⁵¹ to a company or other body, and he thinks that the usual provisions as to service on a company⁵² or on an overseas company⁵³ do not apply⁵⁴, he may serve the direction in such manner as he thinks most suitable⁵⁵.

A person to whom a safety direction is given⁵⁶ must comply with the direction⁵⁷, and he commits an offence if he fails so to comply⁵⁸. A person to whom a safety direction is given also must try to comply with the direction in a manner which avoids risk to human life⁵⁹.

If a person intentionally obstructs another person who is acting on behalf of the Secretary of State in connection with the giving of such a direction⁶⁰, or who is complying with such a direction, that first-named person commits an offence⁶¹.

1 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 38.

2 Ie under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 108A(1), Sch 3A para 1: see Sch 3A para 1(1) (s 108A, Sch 3A added by the Marine Safety Act 2003 s 1(1), (2), Sch 1). As to the Secretary of State's power to make directions under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 generally see PARA 41. A provision made by or by virtue of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 (including one which creates an offence) has no effect in so far as it is inconsistent with the exercise by or on behalf of the Secretary of State of a power under Sch 3A, or would interfere with a person's compliance with a direction under Sch 3A, or would interfere with action taken by virtue of Sch 3A: s 108A(2) (as so added). However, nothing in Sch 3A is to be taken to prejudice any right or power of Her Majesty's government: Sch 3A para 23 (as so added).

A direction under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 3A para 1 or under Sch 3A para 2 (see the text and notes 27-37), in so far as it relates to a risk of pollution, may have effect in respect of a ship only if it is a United Kingdom ship, or is in United Kingdom waters or an area of the sea specified under s 129(2)(b): Sch 3A para 17 (as so added). For these purposes, 'pollution' means significant pollution in the United Kingdom, United Kingdom waters or an area of the sea specified under s 129(2)(b): Sch 3A para 22(1) (as so added). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom ship' see PARA 230; as to the meaning of 'ship' see PARA 229; as to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 17 note 3; and as to the meaning of 'United Kingdom waters' see PARA 48 note 10. The reference to an area of the sea specified under s 129(2)(b) is to an area of sea (so specified by order) above any of the areas for the time being designated under the Continental Shelf Act 1964 s 1(7) (as to which see FUEL AND ENERGY vol 19(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1636) as waters within which the jurisdiction and rights of the United Kingdom are exercisable in accordance with the United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea (Montego Bay, 10 December 1982 to 9 December 1984; TS 3 Misc 11 (1983); Cmnd 8941) (the 'United Nations Convention on the Law of the Sea 1982') (as to which see PARA 10) Pt XII (arts 192-237) (protection and preservation of the marine environment): see ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY AND PUBLIC HEALTH vol 45 (2010) PARA 402 et seq.

Her Majesty may by Order in Council provide that a direction under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 3A para 1 or under Sch 3A para 2, in so far as it relates to a risk of pollution, is to have effect in respect of a ship which is not a United Kingdom ship and is not in United Kingdom waters or an area of the sea specified under s 129(2)(b): Sch 3A para 18(1) (as so added). Such an order may be expressed to apply generally or only in specified circumstances, may make different provision for different circumstances, may provide for Sch 3A to have effect in cases to which the Order in Council applies with specified modifications, and may contain transitional or consequential provision (including provision amending an enactment): Sch 3A para 18(2) (as so added).

A direction under Sch 3A para 1 or under Sch 3A para 2, in so far as it relates to a risk of safety, may have effect in respect of a ship only if it is in United Kingdom waters and it is not a qualifying foreign ship, or if it is in United Kingdom waters and it is a qualifying foreign ship which in the Secretary of State's opinion is exercising neither the right of innocent passage nor the right of transit passage through straits used for international navigation: Sch 3A para 19 (as so added). For these purposes, 'risk to safety' means a risk to the safety of persons, property or anything navigating in or using United Kingdom waters: Sch 3A para 22(1) (as so added). As to the meaning of 'qualifying foreign ship' see PARA 19; as to the meaning of 'right of transit passage' see PARA 68 note 11; and as to the meaning of 'straits used for international navigation' see PARA 68 note 12.

A direction may not be given under Sch 3A para 1(2)(a)-(d) (see heads (1) to (4) in the text) or under Sch 3A para 3 (see the text and notes 38-48) in respect of a ship of Her Majesty's Navy or a government ship: Sch 3A para 21 (as so added). As to the meaning of 'government ship' see PARA 20 note 3.

A direction under Sch 3A may be varied or revoked by a further direction: Sch 3A para 10(1) (as so added). If the Secretary of State thinks that such a direction is wholly or partly no longer necessary for the purpose for which it was given, he must vary or revoke the direction as soon as is reasonably practicable: Sch 3A para 10(2) (as so added). Where the Secretary of State has given such a direction to a person he must consider any representations about varying or revoking the direction which are made to him by that person: Sch 3A para 10(3) (as so added).

3 For these purposes, 'accident' means a collision of ships, a stranding, another incident of navigation or another event (whether on board a ship or not) which results in material damage to a ship or its cargo or in an imminent threat of such material damage: Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 3A para 22(1) (as added: see note 2).

4 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 3A para 1(1)(a) (as added: see note 2).

5 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 3A para 1(1)(b) (as added: see note 2). For these purposes, 'hazardous substance' means oil within the meaning given by s 151(1) (see ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY AND PUBLIC HEALTH vol 45 (2010) PARA 425 NOTE 1), any other substance which creates a hazard to human health, harms living resources or marine life, damages amenities or interferes with lawful use of the sea, and any other substance prescribed by order of the Secretary of State: Sch 3A para 22(1), (2) (as so added). As to the power of the Secretary of State to make subordinate legislation under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995, including his power to appoint committees for the purpose of advising him when considering the making or alteration of any regulations etc, see PARA 41. At the date at which this volume states the law, no such regulations had been made under Sch 3A but, by virtue of the Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b), the Merchant Shipping (Prevention of Pollution: Substances Other than Oil) (Intervention) Order 1997, SI 1997/1869, takes effect as if made under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 3A para 22(2). Accordingly, the substances prescribed for the purposes of Sch 3A para 22(2) (substances other than oil) are those listed in the Merchant Shipping (Prevention of Pollution: Substances Other than Oil) (Intervention) Order 1997, SI 1997/1869, art 2, Schedule.

6 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 3A para 1(1)(c) (as added: see note 2). As to action which may be taken in lieu of a safety direction see PARA 687; and as to liabilities in respect of action taken in accordance with a safety direction see PARA 688.

7 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 3A para 1(2)(a) (as added: see note 2). For these purposes, 'owner', in relation to the ship to or in which an accident has occurred, includes its owner at the time of the accident: Sch 3A para 22(1) (as so added).

8 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 3A para 1(2)(b) (as added: see note 2).

9 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 3A para 1(2)(c) (as added: see note 2). As to the meaning of 'master' see PARA 424.

10 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 3A para 1(2)(d) (as added: see note 2). For these purposes, 'pilot' means a person who does not belong to a ship but who has the conduct of it: Sch 3A para 22(1) (as so added).

11 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 3A para 1(2)(da) (Sch 3A as added (see note 2); Sch 3A para 1(2)(da) added by SI 2004/2110).

13 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 3A para 1(2)(f) (as added: see note 2).

14 For these purposes, 'harbour authority' has the meaning given by the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 151(1) (see ENVIRONMENTAL QUALITY AND PUBLIC HEALTH vol 45 (2010) PARA NOTE 6): Sch 3A para 22(1) (as added: see note 2).

15 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 3A para 1(2)(g) (as added: see note 2). For these purposes, 'harbour master' includes a dock master or pier master, and any person specially appointed by a harbour authority for the purpose of enforcing the provisions of Sch 3A in relation to the harbour: Sch 3A para 22(1) (as so added).

16 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 3A para 1(3)(a) (as added: see note 2). For these purposes, 'action' includes omission: Sch 3A para 22(1) (as so added).

30 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 3A para 2(2) (as added: see note 2). For these purposes, a person is in charge of land or premises if he is wholly or partly able to control the use made of the land or premises; 'coastal' means adjacent to or accessible from United Kingdom waters over which the public is permitted to navigate: Sch 3A para 2(3) (as so added). 686 Secretary of State's power to give safety directions in respect of a ship

TEXT AND NOTES 51-55--Where the Secretary of State (1) proposes to give a direction under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 3A to a company or other body, and (2) thinks that the Companies Act 2006 s 1139 (see COMPANIES vol 15 (2009) PARA 1836) does not apply, the direction may be served in such manner as the Secretary of State thinks most suitable: Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 3A para 11 (substituted by SI 2009/1941).

Halsbury's Laws of England/SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW (VOLUME 93 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-590; VOLUME 94 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 591-1254)/7. SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/(4) SAFETY DIRECTIONS/687. Action taken in lieu of safety direction.

687. Action taken in lieu of safety direction.

Where the Secretary of State¹ thinks that circumstances exist which would entitle him to give a safety direction in respect of a ship², but that the giving of a direction would not be likely to achieve a sufficient result³, or where he has given such a direction⁴ but, in his opinion, the direction has not achieved a sufficient result⁵, he may take such action as appears to him necessary or expedient for the purpose for which the direction could have been given or was given⁶. In particular, the Secretary of State may:

- 826 (1) authorise a person to enter land or make use of facilities⁷;
- 827 (2) do or authorise a person to do anything which the Secretary of State could require a person to do by a direction⁸;
- 828 (3) authorise a person to assume control of a ship⁹;
- 829 (4) make arrangements or authorise the making of arrangements for the sinking or destruction of a ship¹⁰.

If a person intentionally obstructs another person who is taking such action¹¹, that first-named person commits an offence¹².

Halsbury's Laws of England/SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW (VOLUME 93 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-590; VOLUME 94 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 591-1254)/7. SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/(4) SAFETY DIRECTIONS/688. Liabilities in respect of action taken in accordance with, or in lieu of, a safety direction.

688. Liabilities in respect of action taken in accordance with, or in lieu of, a safety direction.

Where action ('remedial action') taken in accordance with a safety direction¹, or taken in lieu of such a direction², either:

- 830 (1) was not reasonably necessary for the purpose for which the direction was given³; or
- 831 (2) caused loss or damage which could not be justified by reference to that purpose⁴, the Secretary of State⁵ must pay compensation to any person who suffered loss or damage as a result of the remedial action (whether it was taken by him or someone else)⁶ and who applies to him for compensation⁷. In considering what is reasonably necessary or justifiable for the purposes of heads (1) and (2) above, account must be taken of⁸:

- 832 (a) the extent of the risk to safety⁹ or threat of pollution¹⁰ which the direction was intended to address¹¹;
- 833 (b) the likelihood of the remedial action being effective¹²; and
- 834 (c) the extent of the loss or damage caused by the remedial action¹³.

Where a safety direction is given in respect of a ship¹⁴ to a person in respect of land or premises¹⁵, or where the Secretary of State¹⁶ takes, or authorises action, in lieu of such a direction¹⁷, the following expenses may be recovered¹⁸:

- 835 (i) the person to whom such a direction is given is entitled to recover the costs of his compliance with the direction from the ship's owner¹⁹;
- 836 (ii) a person in charge of coastal land or premises is entitled to recover from the ship's owner costs incurred by him as a result of action taken in lieu of a direction²⁰ in relation to that land or premises²¹;
- 837 (iii) the Secretary of State is entitled to recover from the owner of the ship: (A) costs incurred in connection with the giving of a direction²²; (B) costs incurred in connection with action taken in lieu of such a direction²³; (C) costs incurred by the Secretary of State in making payments to a person on account of sums recoverable by that person under head (i) or (ii) above²⁴.

The Admiralty jurisdiction of the High Court²⁵ includes jurisdiction to hear and determine any claim so arising in relation to such expenses²⁶ or in relation to such compensation²⁷.

Where action is taken in respect of a ship which is under arrest (or in respect of anything in a ship which is under arrest), being action duly taken in accordance with a safety direction²⁸, or taken in lieu of such a direction²⁹, the action does not constitute contempt of court and does not give rise to civil liability on the part of the Admiralty Marshal³⁰.

(5) PORT STATE CONTROL

(i) In general

689. EC Council Directive concerning port state control.

A comprehensive proposal was made by the EC Commission in June 1980 for a Directive on the application to ships using ports of the European Community of international standards relating to the safety of sea transport and the prevention of pollution¹. Although the merits of the measure were generally conceded, the member states were not prepared to see the measure adopted² but the proposal did have the effect of stimulating the adoption in 1982 of a Memorandum of Understanding ('MOU') on Port State Control ('PSC') of ships, which contained many of the elements of the proposal³.

Concerns persisted, however, about serious failures on the part of flag states to implement and enforce international standards, and these concerns, together with the requirement for compliance with such standards to be ensured by the port state, and the experience gained during the operation of the 1982 Memorandum of Understanding, led to the formulation and adoption of an EC Council Directive of 19 June 1995 on port state control of shipping⁴. The stated purpose of the Directive is to help drastically to reduce sub-standard shipping in the waters under the jurisdiction of member states by: (1) increasing compliance with international and relevant EC legislation on maritime safety, protection of the marine environment and living and working conditions on board ships of all flags⁵; and (2) establishing common criteria for control of ships by the port state and harmonising procedures on inspection and detention, taking proper account of the commitments made by the maritime authorities of the member states under the 1982 Memorandum of Understanding on Port State Control⁶.

1 Ie Proposal for a Council Directive concerning the enforcement, in respect of shipping using community ports, of international standards for shipping safety and pollution prevention (OJ C192, 30.07.1980, p 8). The Directive so proposed would have required member states to ensure the identification of ships which were below the international standards contained in certain specified Conventions when they entered their ports and to ensure the correction of any defects discovered: see Proposal for a Council Directive (OJ C192, 30.07.1980, p 8).

2 Ie because member states were reluctant to allow the European Community to acquire competence in the areas involved, which would in effect have given the European Community an increased role in relation to the international Conventions concerned. Concerns of this nature had hindered the development of early EC policy on maritime and shipping issues whose coverage was co-terminous with that of international Conventions: see PARA 15.

3 See the Memorandum of Understanding ('MOU') on Port State Control ('PSC') (Paris, 26 January 1982). The maritime authorities of all the member states at that time, except Luxembourg, participated in the Memorandum, together with those of Finland, Norway, Portugal, Spain and Sweden.

EC Council Directive 95/21 (OJ L157, 07.07.1995, p 1) (as so amended) is implemented in the United Kingdom by the Merchant Shipping (Port State Control) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/3128, Pt I (regs 1-18) (see PARA 690 et seq) (see reg 2(1) (substituted by SI 2003/1636)). Community measures also have been taken to enhance ship and port facility security: see EC Regulation 725/2004 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 31 March 2004 on enhancing ship and port facility security (OJ L129, 29.04.2004, p 6); and PARA 708.

UPDATE

689-692 EC Council Directive concerning port state control etc

From 1 January 2011, Directive 95/21 replaced: European Parliament and EC Council Directive 2009/16 on port state control (OJ L131, 28.5.2009, p 57); references to the repealed directive should be construed as references to Directive 2009/16 and read in accordance with the correlation table in Annex XVI: art 37.

Halsbury's Laws of England/SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW (VOLUME 93 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-590; VOLUME 94 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 591-1254)/7. SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/(5) PORT STATE CONTROL/(ii) Shipping using EC Ports etc/690. Application of provisions on port state control.

(ii) Shipping using EC Ports etc

690. Application of provisions on port state control.

The provisions on port state control¹ apply to any sea-going ship²:

- 838 (1) in a port in the United Kingdom³ or at an offshore installation⁴; or
- 839 (2) anchored off such a port or such an installation (except in waters which are neither United Kingdom waters⁵ nor designated waters)⁶, and its crew⁷.

However, the provisions on port state control⁸ do not apply to⁹:

- 840 (a) a British ship¹⁰;
- 841 (b) a fishing vessel¹¹;
- 842 (c) a ship of war¹²;
- 843 (d) a naval auxiliary¹³;
- 844 (e) a wooden ship of a primitive build¹⁴;
- 845 (f) a government ship used for non-commercial purposes¹⁵; or
- 846 (g) a pleasure yacht not engaged in trade¹⁶.

In the case of a ship below 500 gross tonnage (to the extent to which a Convention¹⁷ does not apply) an inspector¹⁸ must, without prejudice to any other powers under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 or statutory instruments made under it, take such action as may be necessary to ensure that the ship is not clearly hazardous to safety, health or the environment¹⁹.

When inspecting a ship for port state control purposes²⁰, no more favourable treatment is to be given to a ship flying the flag of a state which is not a party to a Convention or to the crew of such a ship than that given to a ship flying the flag of a state which is a party to that Convention or to the crew of such a ship²¹.

A power of inspection or detention conferred by a Convention enactment²² is also exercisable in relation to a ship which is²³:

- 847 (i) at any offshore installation²⁴; or
- 848 (ii) anchored off an offshore installation or a port in the United Kingdom²⁵, where the ship is one to which the port state control provisions²⁶ apply²⁷.

Where such a ship²⁸ is detained under a Convention enactment²⁹ or where the master of such a ship is served with a detention notice under such an enactment³⁰, the provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 relating to enforcing the detention of ships³¹ apply in relation to the ship, but with modifications³².

692. Inspection commitments.

The Maritime and Coastguard Agency¹ must² ensure that an inspection³ is carried out on any ship⁴ which is not subject to an expanded inspection⁵ and has a target factor greater than 50 in the Sirenac information system⁶, provided that a period of at least one month has elapsed since the last inspection carried out in a port in the MOU region⁷.

In selecting other ships for inspection, the Maritime and Coastguard Agency must determine the order of priority as follows⁸:

- 849 (1) the first ships to be selected for inspection must be those listed in Part I of Annex 1 to the specified Merchant Shipping Notice⁹, irrespective of their target factor¹⁰;
- 850 (2) the ships listed in Part II of Annex 1 to the specified Merchant Shipping Notice¹¹ must be selected in decreasing order, depending on the order of priority resulting from the value of their target factor ranges as referred to in the Sirenac information system¹².

For the purposes of carrying out any such inspection¹³, the inspector¹⁴ must consult the public and private databases relating to ship inspection accessible through the Equasis information system¹⁵.

The total number of inspections of such ships¹⁶, including ships subject to an expanded inspection¹⁷, which must be carried out annually by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency must correspond to at least 25 per cent of the average annual number of individual ships which entered United Kingdom ports, calculated on the basis of the three most recent calendar years for which statistics are available¹⁸.

However, the Marine Safety Agency must refrain from inspecting a ship which has been inspected by the competent authority¹⁹ of any member state²⁰ within the previous six months²¹, provided that:

- 851 (a) the ship is not in a category listed in Annex 1 to the specified Merchant Shipping Notice²²; and
- 852 (b) no deficiencies have been reported following a previous inspection²³;
- 853 (c) no clear grounds²⁴ exist for carrying out an inspection²⁵; and
- 854 (d) the ship is not covered by the provisions which make it liable to inspection, being a ship which is not subject to an expanded inspection and has a target factor greater than 50 in the Sirenac information system²⁶.

However, if such a ship is selected for routine inspection⁴ an expanded inspection must be carried out⁵, and a routine inspection⁶ may be carried out in the period between two expanded inspections⁷.

After a period of 12 months since the last expanded inspection of a ship, the owner⁸ or master of a ship subject to an expanded inspection⁹ must communicate to the Maritime and Coastguard Agency all the required information¹⁰ before each call at a port in the United Kingdom¹¹; and any ship not complying with these requirements is subject to an expanded inspection at the port of destination¹².

The Maritime and Coastguard Agency must¹³ ensure that an expanded inspection is carried out in respect of a ship subject to such an inspection¹⁴ and which has a target factor¹⁵ of seven or more at its first visit to a port in the United Kingdom after a period of 12 months since the last expanded inspection carried out in a port of a state signatory to the MOU¹⁶.

For the purposes of carrying out an expanded inspection, the inspector¹⁷ must consult the public and private databases relating to ship inspection accessible through the Equasis information system¹⁸.

SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/(5) PORT STATE CONTROL/(ii) Shipping using EC Ports etc/695. Procedure in cases where the Maritime and Coastguard Agency is unable to inspect a ship.

695. Procedure in cases where the Maritime and Coastguard Agency is unable to inspect a ship.

In cases where, for operational reasons, the Maritime and Coastguard Agency¹ is unable to carry out a routine inspection of a ship² with a target factor of more than 50³ or a mandatory expanded inspection⁴, it must, without delay, inform the Sirenac information system⁵ that such inspection did not take place⁶; and the Maritime and Coastguard Agency must, at intervals of six months, notify such cases⁷ to the European Commission together with the reasons for not inspecting the ships concerned⁸.

During any calendar year, such cases of non-inspection must not exceed 5 per cent of the average annual number of individual ships eligible for the inspections⁹ calling at ports in the United Kingdom¹⁰, calculated on the basis of the three most recent calendar years for which statistics are available¹¹.

Where a ship, which for operational reasons was not subject to a routine inspection¹² or a mandatory expanded inspection¹³ at its previous call at a port in a member state¹⁴ (including the United Kingdom) visits a port in the United Kingdom, it must be inspected, as appropriate, by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency¹⁵.

696. Access refusal measures.

Where a ship in one of the specified categories¹:

- 857 (1) flies the flag of a state appearing in the black list as published in the annual report of the MOU² and has been detained more than twice in the preceding 24 months in a port of a state signatory to the MOU³; or
- 858 (2) flies the flag of a state described as 'high risk' or 'very high risk' in the black list referred to in head (1) above and has been detained more than once in the preceding 36 months in a port of a state signatory to the MOU⁴, and an access refusal notice⁵ has previously been served on it, the ship must not enter any port in the United Kingdom⁶. This prohibition applies at any time after the ship has been authorised to leave the port where it has been the subject of a second or third detention as the case may be⁷. However, notwithstanding these provisions⁸, access to a specific port in the United Kingdom may be permitted by the Secretary of State⁹ in the event of force majeure or overriding safety considerations, or to reduce or minimize the risk of pollution or to have deficiencies rectified, provided adequate measures to the satisfaction of the Maritime and Coastguard Agency have been implemented by the owner¹⁰ or the master of the ship to ensure safe entry¹¹.

Where a ship in one of the specified categories¹² calls at a United Kingdom port and is detained there¹³:

- 859 (a) for the third time in the preceding 24 months if it is a ship which flies the flag of a state appearing in the black list referred to in head (1) above¹⁴; or
- 860 (b) for the second time in the preceding 36 months if it is a ship which flies the flag of a state described as 'high risk' or 'very high risk' in the said black list¹⁵, the Maritime and Coastguard Agency must serve an access refusal notice on it¹⁶.

1. I.e. a ship falling within one of the categories of Merchant Shipping Notice 1775(M) Annex XII section A: Merchant Shipping (Port State Control) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/3128, reg 7B(1) (reg 7B added by SI 2003/1636). 697. Report of inspector to the master.

On completion of an inspection, a more detailed inspection¹, or an expanded inspection², the inspector³ must draw up a document in the prescribed form⁴, and a copy of such report must be provided to the master of the ship⁵.

SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/(5) PORT STATE CONTROL/(ii) Shipping using EC Ports etc/698. Rectification and detention where inspection reveals or confirms deficiencies.

698. Rectification and detention where inspection reveals or confirms deficiencies.

The owner¹ must satisfy the Maritime and Coastguard Agency² that any deficiencies confirmed or revealed by any inspection³ are or will be rectified in accordance with the Conventions⁴.

In case of deficiencies which are clearly hazardous to safety, health or the environment, the inspector⁵ must detain the ship⁶, or require the stoppage of the operation⁷ in the course of which the deficiencies have been revealed, using powers of detention in Convention enactments⁸ as appropriate, or issuing a prohibition notice⁹, as the case may be¹⁰. A detention notice may:

- 861 (1) include a direction that a ship must remain in a particular place, or must move to a particular anchorage or berth¹¹; and
- 862 (2) specify circumstances when the master of the ship may move his ship from a specified place for reasons of safety or prevention of pollution¹².

The detention notice or stoppage of an operation must not be lifted until the Maritime and Coastguard Agency establishes that the ship can, subject to any necessary conditions, proceed to sea or the operation be resumed without risk to the safety and health of passengers or crew, or risk to other ships, or without there being an unreasonable threat to or harm to the marine environment¹³.

Without prejudice to any other requirement in the Convention enactments, when exercising his professional judgment as to whether or not a ship should be detained, the inspector must apply the prescribed criteria¹⁴; but a ship must be detained if it is not equipped with a functioning voyage data recorder system, when its use is compulsory¹⁵.

In exceptional circumstances, where the overall condition of a ship is obviously sub-standard, the inspector may, in addition to detaining the ship, suspend the inspection of that ship until the responsible parties have taken the steps necessary to ensure that it complies with the relevant requirements of the Conventions¹⁶.

Without prejudice to any other requirement in the Convention enactments, in the event that a ship is detained following any inspection¹⁷, the Maritime and Coastguard Agency must immediately inform, in writing, the ship's flag administration¹⁸ or the consul of the state of the flag administration (or, in his absence, the nearest diplomatic representative of the state of the flag administration)¹⁹ of all the circumstances relating to the Maritime and Coastguard Agency's decision to detain the ship and must include the report of inspection²⁰. In addition, nominated surveyors or recognised organisations responsible for the issue of class certificates²¹ or other ship's certificates issued on behalf of the state of a flag administration must also be notified by the Agency, where relevant²².

The provisions relating to port state control²³ are without prejudice to the additional requirements of the Conventions concerning notification and reporting procedures related to port state control²⁴.

When carrying out inspections²⁵, the inspector must make all possible efforts to avoid a ship being unduly detained or delayed²⁶.

If the deficiency mentioned in reg 9(3)(b) cannot readily be rectified in the port of detention, the Maritime and Coastguard Agency may either allow the ship to proceed to the nearest appropriate port where it is capable of being rectified (and must be so rectified), or require that the deficiency be rectified within a maximum period of 30 days: reg 9(3)(c) (as so substituted). SAFETY AND SECURITY AT SEA/(5) PORT STATE CONTROL/(ii) Shipping using EC Ports etc/699. Rectification and detention where inspection reveals absence of ISM certificates.

699. Rectification and detention where inspection reveals absence of ISM certificates.

Where an inspection under the port state control provisions¹ reveals that a copy of the document of compliance or the safety management certificate required by the International Management Code for the Safe Operation of Ships and for Pollution Prevention ('ISM Code') are not on board a vessel to which the ISM Code is applicable² at the date of inspection, the inspector³ must detain the ship⁴.

Notwithstanding the absence of this documentation:

- 863 (1) if the inspection reveals no other deficiencies warranting detention the Maritime and Coastguard Agency⁵ may lift the detention order for the purpose of avoiding port congestion and whenever such a decision is taken, the Agency must immediately alert the competent authorities of the member states⁶; and
- 864 (2) where deficiencies hazardous to safety, health or the environment are found⁷ and cannot be rectified in the port of detention, the provisions governing the follow-up to inspection and detention⁸ apply⁹.

A ship which proceeds to sea from any port in any member state following release in order to avoid port congestion must not enter any port in the United Kingdom¹⁰ until the owner¹¹ has provided evidence to the satisfaction of the competent authority of the member state where the ship was detained that the ship fully complies with the requirements of the ISM Code¹². However, notwithstanding this prohibition¹³, access to a specific port in the United Kingdom may be permitted by the Secretary of State¹⁴ in the event of force majeure or overriding safety considerations, or to reduce or minimize the risk of pollution or to have deficiencies rectified, provided adequate measures to the satisfaction of the Maritime and Coastguard Agency have been implemented by the owner or the master of the ship to ensure safe entry¹⁵.

700. Right of appeal; compensation.

Provisions allowing for the right of appeal and compensation¹ apply in relation to the exercise of the power of detention or refusal of access² in any Convention enactment³ which is contained in a statutory instrument⁴.

Any question as to whether any of the matters specified in relation to a ship⁵ in a detention notice or access refusal notice in pursuance of such a power of detention or refusal of access in connection with any opinion formed by the inspector⁶ constituted a valid basis for that opinion must, if the master or owner⁷ of the ship so requires by a notice given to the inspector within 21 days from the service of the detention notice or access refusal notice, be referred to a single arbitrator appointed by agreement between the parties for that question to be decided by him⁸. Where a notice is so given by the master or owner of the ship, the giving of the notice does not suspend the operation of the detention notice or access refusal notice⁹.

The arbitrator must have regard, in coming to his decision, to any other matters not specified in the detention notice or access refusal notice which appear to him to be relevant as to whether the ship was or was not liable to be detained or served with an access refusal notice¹⁰.

Where, on such a reference, the arbitrator decides as respects any matter to which the reference relates, that in all the circumstances the matter did not constitute a valid basis for the inspector's opinion, he must either cancel the detention notice or access refusal notice, as the case may be, or affirm it with such modifications as he may in the circumstances think fit¹¹; and in any other case the arbitrator must affirm such notice in its original form¹².

The arbitrator must include in his decision a finding whether there was or was not a valid basis for the detention of the ship or for the service of an access refusal notice¹³.

If, on such a reference relating to a detention notice or access refusal notice¹⁴:

- 865 (1) the arbitrator decides that the owner has proved that any matter did not constitute a valid basis for the inspector's opinion¹⁵; and
- 866 (2) it appears to him that the owner has proved that there were no reasonable grounds for the inspector to form that opinion¹⁶, the arbitrator must award the owner of the ship such compensation in respect of any loss suffered in consequence of, as the case may be, the detention of the ship or the service of an access refusal notice, as the arbitrator thinks fit¹⁷. Any compensation so awarded is payable by the Secretary of State¹⁸.

701. Follow-up to inspections and detention.

Where deficiencies hazardous to safety, health or the environment are confirmed or revealed by inspection¹ but cannot be rectified in the port of inspection, the Maritime and Coastguard Agency² may allow the ship³ to proceed to the nearest appropriate repair yard available, as chosen by the master and the responsible parties, provided that the conditions determined by the competent authority⁴ of the flag administration⁵, and agreed by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency, are complied with⁶. Such conditions must ensure that the ship can proceed without risk to the safety and health of passengers or crew, or risk to other ships, or without there being an unreasonable threat of harm to the marine environment⁷. In these circumstances, the Maritime and Coastguard Agency must notify the competent authority of the state where the repair yard is situated, the relevant parties⁸ and any other authority as appropriate of all the conditions for the voyage⁹. Where the Maritime and Coastguard Agency receives notification from the competent authority of another member state¹⁰ in respect of a ship which that authority (the 'notifying authority') has¹¹ allowed to proceed to a repair yard in the United Kingdom¹², the Maritime and Coastguard Agency must inform the notifying authority of the action it has taken¹³.

A ship, detained in a port in a member state after inspection has revealed deficiencies which are clearly hazardous to safety, health or the environment, which has been allowed by the competent authority to proceed to the nearest appropriate repair yard¹⁴, and which proceeds to sea from any port in any member state¹⁵:

- 867 (1) without complying with the conditions determined by the competent authority of the member state in the port of inspection¹⁶; or
- 868 (2) which fails to comply with the applicable requirements of the Conventions¹⁷ by not calling into the indicated repair yard¹⁸, must not enter any port within the United Kingdom, until the owner¹⁹ has provided evidence to the satisfaction of the competent authority of the member state where the ship was found defective that the ship fully complies with all applicable requirements of the Conventions²⁰.

If a ship proceeds to sea from a port in the United Kingdom without complying with the conditions determined by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency²¹, the Maritime and Coastguard Agency must immediately alert the competent authorities of all the other member states²².

If a ship, detained in a port in a member state after inspection which has revealed deficiencies which are clearly hazardous to safety, health or the environment, which has been allowed by the competent authority to proceed to the nearest appropriate repair yard²³, is so to proceed to a repair yard in the United Kingdom, but fails to call into the indicated repair yard, the Maritime and Coastguard Agency must immediately alert the competent authorities of all the other member states²⁴.

Access to a specific port may be permitted²⁵ by the Secretary of State²⁶ in the event of force majeure or overriding safety considerations, or to reduce or minimise the risk of pollution or to have deficiencies rectified, provided that adequate measures to the satisfaction of the Maritime and Coastguard Agency have been implemented by the owner or the master of the ship to ensure safe entry²⁷.

(6) SHIP AND PORT FACILITY SECURITY

(i) EC Regulation on Enhancing Ship and Port Facility Security

708. In general.

A European Parliament and EC Council Regulation¹ has been made to introduce and implement Community measures aimed at enhancing the security of ships used in international trade and domestic shipping² and associated port facilities in the face of threats of intentional unlawful acts³; and regulations⁴ have been made whose purpose is to provide for its implementation⁵.

1 The Regulation 725/2004 of the European Parliament and of the Council of 31 March 2004 on enhancing ship and port facility security (OJ L129, 29.04.2004, p 6).

2 For these purposes, 'domestic shipping' means any transport service by ship in sea areas from a port facility of a member state to the same port facility or another port facility within that member state: see European Parliament and EC Council Regulation 725/2004 (OJ L129, 29.04.2004, p 6) art 2(9). 'Port facility' means a location where the ship/port interface takes place; this includes areas such as anchorages, waiting berths and approaches from seaward, as appropriate: see art 2(11). 'Ship/port interface' means the interactions that occur when a ship is directly and immediately affected by actions involving the movement of persons or goods or the provision of port services to or from the ship: see art 2(12).

3 See European Parliament and EC Council Regulation 725/2004 (OJ L129, 29.04.2004, p 6) art 1(1). For these purposes, 'intentional unlawful act' means a deliberate act, which, by its nature or context, could harm the vessels used for international or national maritime traffic, their passengers or their cargoes, or the port facilities connected therewith: see art 2(13).

European Parliament and EC Council Regulation 725/2004 (OJ L129, 29.04.2004, p 6) is also intended to provide a basis for the harmonised interpretation and implementation and Community monitoring of the special measures to enhance maritime security as provided for in the International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea 1974 (London, 1 November 1974 to 1 July 1975; TS 46 (1980); Cmnd 7874) ('SOLAS Convention'), with Protocol (London, 1 June 1978 to 1 March 1979; TS 40 (1981); Cmnd 8277) (as to which see PARA 8) and the International Ship and Port Facility Security Code ('ISPS Code') adopted by the International Maritime Organisation (the 'IMO'): see European Parliament and EC Council Regulation 725/2004 (OJ L129, 29.04.2004, p 6) art 1(2). See also note 5. For these purposes, 'maritime security' means the combination of preventive measures intended to protect shipping and port facilities against threats of intentional unlawful acts: see art 2(5). As to the International Maritime Organisation see PARA 13.

4 The Ship and Port Facility (Security) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1495: see PARA 709 et seq.

5 See the Ship and Port Facility (Security) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1495, reg 3. The Secretary of State for Transport is designated as:

965 (1) the 'focal point for maritime security' for the purposes of European Parliament and EC Council Regulation 725/2004 (OJ L129, 29.04.2004, p 6) (Ship and Port Facility (Security) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1495, reg 5(a));

966 (2) the 'competent authority for maritime security' for the purposes of European Parliament and EC Council Regulation 725/2004 (OJ L129, 29.04.2004, p 6) (Ship and Port Facility (Security) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1495, reg 5(b)); and 967 (3) the 'designated authority' for the purposes of the SOLAS Convention Ch XI-2 and the ISPS Code (Ship and Port Facility (Security) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1495, reg 5(c)).

For these purposes, 'SOLAS Convention' means the International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea 1974 (London, 1 November 1974 to 1 July 1975; TS 46 (1980); Cmnd 7874) (see note 3) as amended from time to time, in so far as those amendments are integrated in Community maritime legislation in accordance with European Parliament and EC Council Regulation 725/2004 (OJ L129, 29.04.2004, p 6) art 10 (integration of amendments to international instruments), and 'ISPS Code' means the International Ship and Port Facility Security Code (see note 3) as amended from time to time, in so far as those amendments are integrated in Community maritime legislation in accordance with European Parliament and EC Council Regulation 725/2004 (OJ L129, 29.04.2004, p 6) art 10: Ship and Port Facility (Security) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1495, reg 2(1). The expressions used in the Ship and Port Facility (Security) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1495, which are given a meaning in the SOLAS Convention or the ISPS Code have the same meaning they bear in those instruments (see the Ship and Port Facility (Security) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1495, reg 2(2), Schedule); and other expressions used in the Regulations which are also used in European Parliament and EC Council Regulation 725/2004 (OJ L129, 29.04.2004, p 6), have the same meaning they bear in that Regulation (see the Ship and Port Facility (Security) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1495, reg 2(3)). As to the Department of Transport see CONSTITUTIONAL LAW AND HUMAN RIGHTS vol 8(2) (Reissue) PARAS 509-511.

Powers of inspection exercisable in relation to ships and port facilities.

B. INSPECTIONS

710. Powers of inspection exercisable in relation to ships and port facilities.

A duly authorised officer¹ has the power², on production, if required, of his credentials, to inspect³:

- 881 (1) any United Kingdom ship⁴;
- 882 (2) any non-United Kingdom ship⁵ while in a port facility⁶;
- 883 (3) any non-United Kingdom ship in United Kingdom waters⁷ which has communicated its intention to enter a port in the United Kingdom⁸;
- 884 (4) any United Kingdom port facility⁹.

A duly authorised officer inspecting a ship or a port facility has the following powers¹⁰:

to be exercised as the duly authorised officer may consider necessary for the purpose for which the inspection is carried out¹⁵.

A duly authorised officer, for the purpose of exercising any power so conferred on him¹⁶ in relation to a ship or in relation to a port facility, may¹⁷:

- 890 (ii) for the purpose of inspecting a port facility, enter any building or works in the port facility or enter any land in the port facility¹⁹.

However, the powers conferred under heads (i) and (ii) above do not include power for a duly authorised officer to use force for the purpose of going on board any ship, entering any building or works or entering any land²⁰.

Any person who, without reasonable excuse, fails to comply with a requirement imposed on him under head (d) above, or who, in furnishing any information so required makes a statement which he knows to be false in a material particular, or recklessly makes a statement which is false in a material particular, commits an offence²¹.

1 For these purposes, 'duly authorised officer' means either an inspector or a surveyor appointed under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 256 (as to which see PARA 46), or an 'authorised person' within the meaning of the Aviation and Maritime Security Act 1990 s 46(1) (see PORTS AND HARBOURS vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 725): Ship and Port Facility (Security) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1495, reg 2(1). As to the meaning of 'port facility' see PARA 709 note 12. As to enforcement notices see PARA 714.

The following persons are required to submit to such inspections of ships and port facilities that are conducted by the EC Commission pursuant to European Parliament and EC Council Regulation 725/2004 (OJ L129, 29.04.2004, p 6) art 9 (implementation and conformity checking):

As to the meaning of 'company' for these purposes see PARA 709 note 11.

The persons referred to in heads (1) to (6) above must take all necessary steps to remedy any shortcomings identified by the EC Commission following such an inspection as are notified to them in writing by the Secretary of State, and must do so within such period as may be required in the notification: Ship and Port Facility (Security) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1495, reg 7(2). In the case of ships, any completed declaration of security relating to one of its last ten calls at port facilities must be retained on board the ship by the master for as long as it relates to any of those last ten calls, even where the period over which those calls extend exceeds the minimum three-year period referred to in reg 18(1) (see the text and notes 4-5): reg 18(2).

In accordance with the ISPS Code¹, the Secretary of State² must decide (and thereafter must notify companies³ and owners of port facility security plans⁴, in writing, of) the changes or amendments to the relevant approved ship security plan or port facility security plan that must first be submitted to him for approval before they are implemented in respect of those ships and port facilities⁵. Any changes or amendments notified in this way⁶ must not be implemented by the companies or owners of port facility security plans without first obtaining the approval of the Secretary of State⁷.

Detention notices; the procedure relating to objections.

D. DETENTION NOTICES

713. Detention notices; the procedure relating to objections.

Where a duly authorised officer¹ proposes to detain a ship pursuant to control and compliance measures², he must serve on the master³ of the ship a notice (a 'detention notice')⁴. A detention notice must specify the steps that the duly authorised officer requires to be taken in respect of the ship in order to secure its release from detention⁵, and must require the master to take steps to ensure that the ship does not proceed to sea while the detention notice is in force⁶.

The master of a ship in respect of which a detention notice is served may object to the notice in writing to the Secretary of State⁷. On receipt of an objection to a detention notice, the Secretary of State must:

- 891 (1) consider the objection⁸;
- 892 (2) allow the person making the objection and the duly authorised officer who gave the notice an opportunity to make written or oral representations to the Secretary of State or a person appointed by him⁹;
- 893 (3) confirm, modify or cancel the notice¹⁰; and
- 894 (4) give notice of his decision in writing to the person who made the objection and to the duly authorised officer who served the notice¹¹.

The Secretary of State must include in his decision a finding as to whether in relation to any of the matters specified in respect of a ship in a detention notice, there was or was not a valid basis for the detention of the ship¹². A detention notice in respect of a ship continues in force until a duly authorised officer cancels it by notice in writing¹³ or until the Secretary of State cancels it under head (3) above¹⁴. A person commits an offence if without reasonable excuse he fails to comply with a requirement of a detention notice¹⁵.

Where, having considered an objection in respect of a detention notice relating to a ship¹⁶, the Secretary of State finds that there was no valid basis for the detention, the owner of the ship is entitled, on application, to receive compensation for such loss or damage suffered by him which is directly attributable to the detention of the ship¹⁷. Such a claim for compensation must be made in writing to the Secretary of State within three months beginning with the date the Secretary of State serves notice of his decision under head (4) above¹⁸. Any person claiming compensation in this way¹⁹ must provide all such information and supplementary information in respect of the loss or damage incurred as the Secretary of State may at any time reasonably require and must verify the same in any such manner, including the production of original documents in his possession or control, as may be reasonably required²⁰.

4 Ship and Port Facility (Security) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1495, reg 8(1). The detention notice must state that the duly authorised officer is detaining the ship because he has grounds for believing that:

975 (2) the ship is not in compliance with the ISPS Code Pt A (Ship and Port Facility (Security) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1495, reg 8(1)(b)); or 976 (3) there has been a failure to make available for inspection a valid International Ship Security Certificate or a valid Interim International Ship Security Certificate issued under the ISPS Code Pt A (Ship and Port Facility (Security) Regulations 2004, SI 2004/1495, reg 8(1)(c)).

Enforcement notices; the procedure relating to objections.

E. ENFORCEMENT NOTICES

714. Enforcement notices; the procedure relating to objections.

Where it appears to a duly authorised officer¹ that any of the following persons², namely:

- 895 (1) the company³;
- 896 (2) the company security officer⁴;
- 897 (3) the ship security officer⁵;
- 898 (4) the master⁶ of a ship⁷;
- 899 (5) the port facility security officer⁸;
- 900 (6) the owner of the port facility security plan⁹; or
- 901 (7) any person who carries on port operations in a port facility¹⁰, has failed to comply with the relevant specified requirements of the SOLAS Convention¹¹, the ISPS Code¹², or the ship and port facility security regulations¹³, that duly authorised officer may serve a notice (an 'enforcement notice') on that person¹⁴. An enforcement notice:

- 902 (a) must state the matters which appear to the duly authorised officer to constitute a failure to comply with the requirements duly specified in the SOLAS Convention, in the ISPS Code, or in the ship and port facility security regulations¹⁵;
- 903 (b) may be framed so as to afford the person on whom it is served a choice between different ways of complying with the requirements set out in the notice¹⁶;
- 904 (c) must specify the steps which the duly authorised officer requires to be taken (or the activity or the activities which the duly authorised officer requires to cease) in order to achieve compliance with the specified requirements mentioned in head (a) above¹⁷;
- 905 (d) must specify the date on which it is to take effect and takes effect on that date¹⁸; and
- 906 (e) must specify the period at the end of which any steps are required to have been taken (or any activities are required to have ceased) and may specify different periods for different steps or activities¹⁹.

Any person who without reasonable excuse fails to comply with an enforcement notice served on him is guilty of an offence²⁰.

A person on whom an enforcement notice is served may serve on the Secretary of State a notice in writing of his objection to the enforcement notice²¹. The grounds of objection to an enforcement notice are:

- 907 (i) that the steps required by the notice to be taken as mentioned in heads (a) to (e) above²² have been complied with²³;
- 908 (ii) that the matters stated in the enforcement notice in accordance with head (a) above do not constitute a failure to comply with the requirements mentioned there²⁴;

- 909 (iii) that any requirement of the notice is unnecessary for complying with the specified requirements²⁵ and should be dispensed with or, having regard to the terms of those requirements, is excessively onerous or inconvenient and should be modified in a manner specified in the notice of objection²⁶.

An objection to an enforcement notice must be served on the Secretary of State within seven days of the date on which the enforcement notice was served²⁷.

Where the person on whom an enforcement notice is served serves a notice objecting to the enforcement notice²⁸, the Secretary of State must consider the grounds of the objection and, if so required by the objector, must afford to him an opportunity of appearing before and being heard by a person appointed by the Secretary of State for the purpose²⁹. The Secretary of State must then serve on the objector a notice in writing either confirming the enforcement notice as originally served³⁰, or confirming it subject to one or more modifications specified in the notice³¹, or cancelling the enforcement notice³². An enforcement notice to which an objection has been made may not take effect until it has been so confirmed (with or without modification) by such a notice³³.

An enforcement notice served on any person may be revoked by a notice served on him by a duly authorised officer, and may be varied by a further enforcement notice served on him by a duly authorised officer³⁴.

8. AVOIDANCE OF COLLISIONS

(1) INTRODUCTION

715. Meaning of 'collision'; power to make regulations.

Damage by collision is damage sustained by a ship as a result of another ship coming into contact with her¹.

Safety regulations² made by the Secretary of State³ may make provision with respect to (amongst other things) the steps to be taken to prevent any collision involving a ship and in consequence of any collision involving a ship⁴.

Before 1840, liability in collision cases was determined by applying rules of navigation which were a matter for the opinion of experts⁵. In 1840, however, the Trinity House Regulations⁶ were promulgated and were regarded by the Admiralty Court as of binding authority⁷. Since then, many sets of regulations of varying application have been made from time to time, by Order in Council and otherwise, for the purpose of preventing collision⁸. Those now in force are the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972 ('COLREGS')⁹.

Damage done by a ship to a pier or other structure on land is not damage by collision for this purpose: cf The Normandy; Gartland Steamship Co and Lablanc v R [1960] 1 Lloyd's Rep 388 (Can SC). 3 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 38.

4 See the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 85(3)(k); and PARA 591. In exercise of the power so conferred, the Secretary of State has made the Merchant Shipping (Distress Signals and Prevention of Collisions) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/75 (see PARA 716 et seq). See also the International Convention for the Safety of Life at Sea 1974 (London, 1 November 1974 to 1 July 1975; TS 46 (1980); Cmnd 7874), with Protocol (London, 1 June 1978 to 1 March 1979; TS 40 (1981); Cmnd 8277) (see PARA 8), especially Ch V, which is given effect by the Merchant Shipping (Safety of Navigation) Regulations 2002, SI 2002/1473 (as to which see PARA 641).

8 It would seem that it is also the purpose of the Collision Regulations to minimise the results of collision: see Stoomvaart Maatschappij Nederland v Peninsular and Oriental Steam Navigation Co (1880) 5 App Cas 876 at 903, 904, HL, per Lord Watson.

9 Ie the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea (London, 20 October 1972; TS 77 (1977); Cmnd 6962) (as to which see PARA 8). Vessels to which the Merchant Shipping (Distress Signals and Prevention of Collisions) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/75, apply must comply with the provisions of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972 rr 1-36, Annexes I-III: see the Merchant Shipping (Distress Signals and Prevention of Collisions) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/75, reg 4(1); and PARA 718. For the purposes of the Merchant Shipping (Distress Signals and Prevention of Collisions) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/75, 'International Regulations' means the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972 as amended by Resolutions A464(XII), A626(15), A678(16) and A736(18) of the International Maritime Organization ('IMO'), and by any further Resolutions of the IMO which the Secretary of State notifies by Merchant Shipping Notice that he considers relevant from time to time: Merchant Shipping (Distress Signals and Prevention of Collisions) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/75, reg 1(3). 'Merchant Shipping Notice' means a Notice described as such and issued by the Maritime and Coastguard Agency: reg 1(3). As to the International Maritime Organisation see PARA 13; as to the Maritime and Coastguard Agency see PARA 56.

Accordingly, Merchant Shipping Notice 1781(M) sets out the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972 as amended by Resolutions A464(XII), A626(15), A678(16), A736(18) and A.910(22) of the IMO, which came into force in this form internationally on 29 November 2003, and Merchant Shipping Notice 1781(M), and the rules referred to in it, form an integral part of the Merchant Shipping (Distress Signals and Prevention of Collisions) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/75: see Merchant Shipping Notice 1781(M) Introduction paras 1-3. The application of the Rules contained in the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972 is limited, through the Merchant Shipping (Distress Signals and Prevention of Collisions) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/75, to the vessels or ships as defined in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995; and application to craft falling outside of this definition is subject to a Maritime and Coastguard Agency opinion of what it considers to be good conduct and practice by the owners, operators and those in charge of such craft: see Merchant Shipping Notice 1781(M) Introduction para 4. As to the application of the International Regulations see PARA 720.

See also the International Convention on certain Rules concerning Civil Jurisdiction in matters of Collision 1952 (Brussels, 10 May 1952; Cmd 8954), to which the Administration of Justice Act 1956 (largely repealed) gave effect in English law (see now the Supreme Court Act 1981 Pt II (ss 15-52), especially s 22; and PARA 94).

716. Application of the provisions relating to distress signals and prevention of collisions.

The provisions relating to distress signals and the prevention of collisions¹ apply to the following vessels²:

717. Signals of distress.

The signals of distress which must be used by United Kingdom ships¹, wherever they may be, and other ships while within the United Kingdom or the territorial waters thereof², are those set out in Annex IV to the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972³.

No signal of distress must be used by any vessel unless the master of the vessel so orders⁴; and the master must not order any signal of distress to be used by his vessel unless he is satisfied⁵:

- 912 (1) that his vessel is in serious and imminent danger, or that another ship or an aircraft or person is in serious and imminent danger and cannot send that signal⁶; and
- 913 (2) that the vessel in danger, whether his own vessel or another vessel, or the aircraft or person in danger, as the case may be, requires immediate assistance in addition to any assistance then available⁷.

The master of a vessel which has sent any signal of distress by means of radio or other means must cause that signal to be revoked by all appropriate means as soon as he is satisfied that the vessel or aircraft to which or the person to whom the signal relates is no longer in need of such assistance⁸.

718. Prevention of collision.

Vessels to which the provisions¹ relating to distress signals and the prevention of collisions apply² must comply with the relevant provisions of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972³.

¹ ie the Merchant Shipping (Distress Signals and Prevention of Collisions) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/75 (see PARAS 716, 717, 719 et seq): see reg 4(1).

² As to the vessels to which the Merchant Shipping (Distress Signals and Prevention of Collisions) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/75, apply see PARA 716.

³ Merchant Shipping (Distress Signals and Prevention of Collisions) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/75, reg 4(1). The text refers to the provisions of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea (London, 20 October 1972; TS 77 (1977); Cmnd 6962) rr 1-36, Annexes I-III (as to which see PARA 720 et seq): see the Merchant Shipping (Distress Signals and Prevention of Collisions) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/75, reg 4(1). As to the meaning of 'International Regulations' see PARA 715 note 9.

Nothing in the Merchant Shipping (Distress Signals and Prevention of Collisions) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/75, is to be taken to require compliance by any vessel or class of vessels, which, by virtue of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972 r 38 (exemptions from the Collision Regulations in favour of any vessel or class of vessels, the keel of which was laid or which was at a corresponding stage of construction before the date of entry into force of the Regulations, provided that she complies with the requirements of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1960 (revoked)), may be exempted from compliance therewith, with any of the provisions of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972 specified in r 38(a)-(h) inclusive, at any time when, by virtue of r 38, that vessel or class of vessels may be exempted from that provision: Merchant Shipping (Distress Signals and Prevention of Collisions) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/75, reg 4(2). For these purposes, 'date of entry into force of the Regulations' in the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972 r 38 (exemptions) means, in the case of a vessel registered outside the United Kingdom, the date of entry into force of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972 for the state whose flag the vessel is entitled to fly: see the Merchant Shipping (Distress Signals and Prevention of Collisions) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/75, reg 1(5). 719. Exemptions.

The Secretary of State¹ may exempt any ship² or description of ships from all or any of the provisions governing distress signals and the prevention of collisions³, which relate to the number, position, range or arc of visibility of lights or shapes, as well as to the disposition and characteristics of sound-signalling appliances if he is satisfied that compliance with such provision is either impractical or unreasonable in the case of that ship or description of ships in such terms, if any, as he may specify and may, subject to giving reasonable notice, alter or cancel any such exemption⁴.

(2) THE INTERNATIONAL REGULATIONS FOR PREVENTING COLLISIONS AT SEA 1972

(i) In general

720. Application of the rules of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972.

The rules of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972¹ apply to all vessels² upon the high seas and in all waters connected therewith navigable by sea-going vessels³.

Nothing in those rules interferes with the operation of special rules duly made by an appropriate authority for roadsteads, harbours, rivers, lakes or inland waterways connected with the high seas and navigable by sea-going vessels; but such special rules must conform as closely as possible to the Collision Regulations 1972⁴. If there is conflict between a local rule and one of the rules of the Collision Regulations 1972, the local rule prevails⁵. Where local rules make no provision at all, they are to be supplemented by the Collision Regulations 1972, but this is not to be done where a local rule provides adequately for a situation although differently from the general regulations⁶. A local rule which has not been duly made by a competent authority may nevertheless represent a standard of care to which seamen should conform⁷; and well-recognised practice and long usage may give such a rule the force of law⁸.

Nothing in the rules interferes with the operation of any special rules made by the government of any state with respect to additional station or signal lights, shapes or whistle signals for ships of war and vessels proceeding under convoy, or with respect to additional station or signal lights for fishing vessels engaged in fishing⁹ as a fleet¹⁰. These additional station or signal lights, shapes or whistle signals must, so far as possible, be such that they cannot be mistaken for any light, shape or signal authorised elsewhere under the rules¹¹.

Traffic separation schemes may be adopted by the International Maritime Organisation¹² for the purpose of the rules¹³.

Whenever the government concerned has determined that a vessel of any special construction or purpose cannot comply fully with the provisions of any of the rules with respect to the number, position, range or arc of visibility of lights or shapes¹⁴, as well as to the disposition and characteristics of sound-signalling appliances¹⁵, such vessel must comply with such other provisions in regard to the number, position, range or arc of visibility of lights or shapes, as well as to the disposition and characteristics of sound-signalling appliances, as her government has determined to be the closest possible compliance with the rules in respect of that vessel¹⁶.

¹ As to the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972 ('Collision Regulations 1972') see PARA 715. The Collision Regulations 1972 have force in the United Kingdom in the version, as amended, that is set out in Merchant Shipping Notice 1781(M), which, together with the rules of the Collision Regulations 1972 referred to in it, form an integral part of the Merchant Shipping (Distress Signals and Prevention of Collisions) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/75: see PARA 715 note 9.

2 For these purposes, 'vessel' includes every description of water craft, including non-displacement craft, wing-in-ground (WIG) craft and seaplanes, used or capable of being used as a means of transportation on water (Collision Regulations 1972 r 3(a)); 'seaplane' includes any aircraft designed to manoeuvre on the water (r 3(e)); and 'wing-in-ground (WIG) craft' means a multimodal craft which, in its main operational mode, flies in close proximity to the surface by utilizing surface-effect action (r 3(m)).

The International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972¹ are issued for the guidance of seafarers and are to be construed literally and with seamanlike knowledge². They are not to be construed according to the strictest and nicest interpretation of language but are to be given the same kind of reasonable and business interpretation as in an Act of Parliament which regulates some large trade or business³.

722. Responsibility under the rules.

Nothing in the rules of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972¹ exonerates any vessel² (or her owner, master or crew) from the consequences of any neglect to comply with the rules or of the neglect of any precaution which may be required by the ordinary practice of seamen, or by the special circumstances of the case³.

In construing and complying with the rules, due regard must be had to all dangers of navigation and collision and to any special circumstances, including the limitations of the vessels involved, which may make a departure from the rules necessary to avoid immediate danger⁴.

1 As to the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972 ('Collision Regulations 1972') see PARA 715. 723. Infringement of the rules and breaches of duty.

Although a ship may have infringed the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972¹, the onus is on the party setting up a case of negligence against the ship to prove breach of duty and damage².

When radar is installed, there is no duty to use it at common law³ but, under the rules of the Collision Regulations 1972, proper use must be made of radar, if fitted and operational, to obtain early warning of the risk of collision⁴. The use of radar may justify a speed that would otherwise be excessive⁵. Radar must be used in an intelligent and seamanlike manner, and failure so to use it is negligence⁶. Where, however, there is clear visibility, failure to make radar observations on the alteration of another vessel's course is not necessarily negligence⁷. Failure to obtain the information available from a port radar installation when navigating in a river in fog has been held to be negligence⁸.

2 See SS Heranger (Owners) v SS Diamond (Owners) [1939] AC 94 at 104, 62 LI L Rep 204 at 211, HL (where the actual default in question was merely a breach of the rules of good seamanship). See also SS Heranger (Owners) v SS Diamond (Owners) at 100 and at 209. However, the court considered to be incorrect the view (which had been expressed in The Aeneas [1935] P 128 at 131, 18 Asp MLC 571 at 575, on the authority of certain cases decided before the Maritime Conventions Act 1911 (repealed)) that those guilty of a breach of a rule contained in the collision regulations or a local rule must show affirmatively that their default did not contribute to the collision or the resulting loss: SS Heranger (Owners) v SS Diamond (Owners) at 104, 105 and at 211, 212. The grounds for holding this view to be incorrect were that it was contrary to: (1) the principle that only faults which contribute to the accident are to be taken into account in apportioning liability under what is now the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 187 (see PARA 800); and (2) the general principle of the law of negligence that the claimant must show both breach of duty and consequent damage (SS Heranger (Owners) v SS Diamond (Owners) at 104 and at 211). For instances of cases decided before the Maritime Conventions Act 1911 (repealed), in which no statutory presumption of fault was applicable but breach of collision regulations or local rules was treated as throwing on those in default the burden of exonerating themselves, see The Fenham (1870) LR 3 PC 212 at 216; Cayzer, Irvine & Co, SS Clan Sinclair (Owners) v Carron Co, SS Margaret (Owners) (1884) 9 App Cas 873 at 886, 887, 5 Asp MLC 371 at 374, 375, HL. For an instance since the passing of the Maritime Conventions Act 1911 (repealed), in which it was suggested that the onus was on a wrongdoer to show that his default had not contributed to the collision, see SS Haugland (Owners) v SS Karamea (Owners) [1922] 1 AC 68 at 75, 15 Asp MLC 430 at 432, HL (onus on vessel failing to give whistle signal to show that it would not have been heard); but cf Haugland (Owners) v Karamea (Owners) at 74, 77 and at 432, 433. A. CONDUCT OF VESSELS IN ANY CONDITION OF VISIBILITY

724. Requirement to maintain a proper look-out.

Under the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972¹, every vessel² must at all times maintain a proper look-out³ by sight and hearing as well as by all available means appropriate in the prevailing circumstances and conditions so as to make a full appraisal of the situation and of the risk of collision⁴.

This rule applies in any condition of visibility⁵.

1 As to the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972 ('Collision Regulations 1972') see PARA 715. The Collision Regulations 1972 have force in the United Kingdom in the version, as amended, that is set out in Merchant Shipping Notice 1781(M), which, together with the rules of the Collision Regulations 1972 referred to in it, form an integral part of the Merchant Shipping (Distress Signals and Prevention of Collisions) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/75: see PARA 715 note 9.

CONDUCT OF VESSELS IN ANY CONDITION OF VISIBILITY/725. Safe speed.

725. Safe speed.

Under the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972¹, every vessel² must at all times proceed at a safe speed³ so that she can take proper and effective action to avoid collision⁴ and be stopped within a distance appropriate to the prevailing circumstances and conditions⁵. This rule applies in any condition of visibility⁶.

In determining a safe speed, the following factors must be among those taken into account by all vessels⁷:

- 914 (1) the state of visibility⁸;
- 915 (2) the traffic density including concentrations of fishing vessels or any other vessels⁹;
- 916 (3) the manoeuvrability of the vessel with special reference to stopping distance and turning ability in the prevailing conditions¹⁰;
- 917 (4) at night the presence of background light such as from shore lights or from back scatter of her own lights¹¹;
- 918 (5) the state of wind, sea and current, and the proximity of navigational hazards¹²;
- 919 (6) the draught in relation to the available depth of water¹³.

The following additional factors must be taken into account by vessels with operational radar¹⁴:

- 920 (a) the characteristics, efficiency and limitations of the radar equipment¹⁵;
- 921 (b) any constraints imposed by the radar range scale in use¹⁶;
- 922 (c) the effect on radar detection of the sea state, weather and other sources of interference¹⁷;
- 923 (d) the possibility that small vessels, ice and other floating objects may not be detected by radar at an adequate range¹⁸;
- 924 (e) the number, location and movement of vessels detected by radar¹⁹;
- 925 (f) the more exact assessment of the visibility that may be possible when radar is used to determine the range of vessels or other objects in the vicinity²⁰.

726. Risk of collision.

Under the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972¹, every vessel² must use all available means appropriate to the prevailing circumstances and conditions to determine if risk of collision exists³. If there is any doubt, such risk is deemed to exist⁴. This rule applies in any condition of visibility⁵.

Proper use must be made of radar equipment⁶, if fitted and operational, including long-range scanning to obtain early warning of the risk of collision and radar plotting or equivalent systematic observation of detected objects⁷. Assumptions must not be made on the basis of scanty information, especially scanty radar information⁸.

In determining if the risk of collision exists⁹, the following considerations must be among those taken into account¹⁰:

- 926 (1) risk of collision is deemed to exist if the compass bearing of an approaching vessel does not appreciably change¹¹;
- 927 (2) such risk may sometimes exist even when an appreciable bearing change is evident, particularly when approaching a very large vessel or a tow or when approaching a vessel at close range¹².

CONDUCT OF VESSELS IN ANY CONDITION OF VISIBILITY/727. Action to avoid collision.

727. Action to avoid collision.

Under the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972¹, any action taken to avoid collision must, if the circumstances of the case admit, be positive, made in ample time and with due regard to the observance of good seamanship². Any alteration of course and/or speed to avoid collision must, if the circumstances of the case admit, be large enough to be readily apparent to another vessel³ observing visually or by radar⁴; a succession of small alterations of course and/or speed should be avoided⁵. If there is sufficient sea room, alteration of course alone may be the most effective action to avoid a close-quarters situation⁶ provided that it is made in good time, is substantial and does not result in another close-quarters situation⁷.

Action taken to avoid collision with another vessel must be such as to result in passing at a safe distance⁸. The effectiveness of the action must be carefully checked until the other vessel is finally past and clear⁹.

If necessary to avoid collision or allow more time to assess the situation, a vessel must slacken her speed or take all way off by stopping or reversing her means of propulsion¹⁰.

A vessel which is required¹¹ not to impede the passage or safe passage of another vessel must, when required by the circumstances of the case, take early action to allow sufficient sea room for the safe passage of the other vessel¹². A vessel required not to impede the passage or safe passage of another vessel is not relieved of this obligation if approaching the other vessel so as to involve risk of collision and must, when taking action, have full regard to the action which may be required¹³ by the steering and sailing rules¹⁴. A vessel the passage of which is not to be impeded remains fully obliged to comply with the steering and sailing rules¹⁵ when the two vessels are approaching one another so as to involve risk of collision¹⁶.

This rule applies in any condition of visibility¹⁷.

CONDUCT OF VESSELS IN ANY CONDITION OF VISIBILITY/728. The narrow channel rule.

728. The narrow channel rule.

Under the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972¹, a vessel² proceeding along the course of a narrow channel³ or fairway⁴ must keep as near to the outer limit of the channel or fairway which lies on her starboard side as is safe and practicable⁵. A vessel of less than 20 metres in length⁶ or a sailing vessel⁷ must not impede the passage of a vessel which can safely navigate only within a narrow channel or fairway⁸. A vessel engaged in fishing⁹ must not impede the passage of any other vessel navigating within a narrow channel or fairway¹⁰.

A vessel must not cross a narrow channel or fairway if such crossing impedes the passage of a vessel which can safely navigate only within such channel or fairway¹¹. The latter vessel may use the appropriate sound signal¹² if in doubt as to the intention of the crossing vessel¹³.

In a narrow channel or fairway, when overtaking¹⁴ can take place only if the vessel to be overtaken has to take action to permit safe passing, the vessel intending to overtake must indicate her intention by sounding the appropriate signal¹⁵. The vessel to be overtaken must, if in agreement, sound the appropriate signal¹⁶ and take steps to permit safe passing¹⁷. If in doubt, she may sound the signals appropriate for that circumstance instead¹⁸.

A vessel nearing a bend or an area of a narrow channel or fairway where other vessels may be obscured by an intervening obstruction must navigate with particular alertness and caution and must sound the appropriate warning signal¹⁹.

Any vessel must, if the circumstances of the case admit, avoid anchoring in a narrow channel²⁰. This rule applies in any condition of visibility²¹.

CONDUCT OF VESSELS IN ANY CONDITION OF VISIBILITY/729. Meaning of 'narrow channel'.

729. Meaning of 'narrow channel'.

Prima facie, 'narrow channel'¹ means a channel bounded on either side by land, so that a vessel² cannot navigate in any great width between the two banks; it is opposed to 'at sea'³. A narrow channel must have two boundaries which are close to one another; a stretch of water which on one side is open to an indefinite extent cannot be a narrow channel⁴. The court will not lay down what particular width or length will constitute a narrow channel⁵, but, while a narrow channel is of necessity comparatively small in breadth, it may also be very short in length⁶. An entrance between the piers of a harbour has more than once been held to be a narrow channel⁷. In view of its object, which is the prevention of risk of collision⁸, there is as much reason to apply the 'narrow channel rule'⁹ to such an entrance as to a longer channel¹⁰.

When such an entrance or opening is a narrow channel, the duty to keep to the starboard side applies in so much of the water inside and outside of the entrance as is required for manoeuvring for the entrance¹¹.

Although physical conditions remain the same, the alteration in lights and other marks which affect navigation sometimes makes a part of a large piece of water into a narrow channel¹².

There have been many decisions of the courts as to whether particular waters are narrow channels. These decisions relate both to the territorial waters of the United Kingdom¹³ and to Commonwealth¹⁴, Irish¹⁵ and foreign waters¹⁶. In some instances, while not deciding that certain waters were a narrow channel, the courts have held that vessels should navigate in them as if the narrow channel rule applied¹⁷.

The narrow channel rule is to be construed with reasonable latitude. Some allowance has to be made for tide, locality and wind and for the case of a vessel being in tow¹⁸. Although the court might be of the opinion that the vessel might have kept 50 yards closer to the proper shore of the river, it may refuse to look at a question of a few yards more or less¹⁹.

AVOIDANCE OF COLLISIONS/(2) THE INTERNATIONAL REGULATIONS FOR PREVENTING COLLISIONS AT SEA 1972/(ii) Steering and Sailing Rules of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972/A. CONDUCT OF VESSELS IN ANY CONDITION OF VISIBILITY/730. Traffic separation schemes.

730. Traffic separation schemes.

Special provisions of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972¹ apply to traffic separation schemes adopted by the International Maritime Organisation².

Accordingly, a vessel using a traffic separation scheme must³:

- 928 (1) proceed in the appropriate traffic lane in the general direction of traffic flow for that lane⁴;
- 929 (2) so far as practicable keep clear of a traffic separation line or separation zone⁵;
- 930 (3) normally join or leave a traffic lane at the termination of the lane, but, when joining or leaving from the side, must do so at as small an angle to the general direction of traffic flow as practicable⁶.

A vessel must, so far as practicable, avoid crossing traffic lanes, but, if obliged to do so, must cross on a heading as nearly as practicable at right angles to the general direction of traffic flow⁷.

A vessel must not use an inshore traffic zone when she can safely use the appropriate traffic lane within the adjacent traffic separation scheme⁸; but vessels of less than 20 metres in length⁹, sailing vessels¹⁰ and vessels engaged in fishing¹¹ may use the inshore traffic zone¹². A vessel may¹³ use an inshore traffic zone when en route to or from a port, offshore installation or structure, pilot station or any other place situated within the inshore traffic zone, or to avoid immediate danger¹⁴.

A vessel, other than a crossing vessel or a vessel joining or leaving a lane, must not normally enter a separation zone or cross a separation line¹⁵, except:

- 931 (a) in cases of emergency to avoid immediate danger¹⁶;
- 932 (b) to engage in fishing within a separation zone¹⁷.

A vessel navigating in areas near the termination of traffic separation schemes must do so with particular caution¹⁸; and a vessel must so far as practicable avoid anchoring in a traffic separation scheme or in areas near its terminations¹⁹. A vessel not using a traffic separation scheme must avoid it by as wide a margin as is practicable²⁰. A vessel engaged in fishing must not impede the passage of any vessel following a traffic lane²¹. A vessel of less than 20 metres in length or a sailing vessel must not impede the safe passage of a power-driven vessel²² following a traffic lane²³.

A vessel restricted in her ability to manoeuvre²⁴ when engaged in an operation for:

- 933 (i) the maintenance of safety of navigation in a traffic separation scheme²⁵; or

The traffic separation schemes which are referred to in r 10(a) are the schemes listed in Notice to Mariners No 17 and marked '*' in the margin: Merchant Shipping (Distress Signals and Prevention of Collisions) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/75, reg 1(4); Merchant Shipping Notice 1781(M) Introduction para 7(1). For these purposes, 'Notice to Mariners' means an Admiralty Notice to Mariners published by the Hydrographer of the Navy (Merchant Shipping (Distress Signals and Prevention of Collisions) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/75, reg 1(3)); and 'Hydrographer of the Navy' means the person for the time being appointed to that office by the Admiralty Board (reg 1(3)). 'Notice to Mariners No 17' means Notice to Mariners No 17 in the Annual Summary of Admiralty Notices to Mariners of 1989 and any subsequent Notice to Mariners containing like material which the Hydrographer of the Navy considers relevant from time to time, being a Notice to Mariners which: (1) replaces Admiralty Notice to Mariners No 17; or (2) replaces any subsequent Notice to mariners containing the like material; and a reference to any such subsequent Notice to Mariners includes a reference to any Notice to Mariners amending the same which the Hydrographer of the Navy considers relevant from time to time: Merchant Shipping (Distress Signals and Prevention of Collisions) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/75, reg 1(4).

731. Rules applicable to sailing vessels.

Under the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972¹, when two sailing vessels² are approaching one another, so as to involve risk of collision³, one of them must keep out of the way of the other⁴, as follows:

- 935 (1) when each has the wind on a different side, the vessel which has the wind on the port side must keep out of the way of the other⁵;
- 936 (2) when both have the wind on the same side, the vessel which is to windward⁶ must keep out of the way of the vessel which is to leeward⁷;
- 937 (3) if a vessel with the wind on the port side sees a vessel to windward and cannot determine with certainty whether the other vessel has the wind on the port or on the starboard side, she must keep out of the way of the other⁸.

732. Overtaking rules.

Under the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972¹, any vessel² overtaking any other must keep out of the way of the vessel being overtaken³. A vessel is deemed to be overtaking when coming up⁴ with another vessel from a direction more than 22.5 degrees abaft her beam (that is, in such a position with reference to the vessel she is overtaking, that at night she would be able to see only the sternlight⁵ of that vessel but neither of her sidelights)⁶. When a vessel is in any doubt as to whether she is overtaking another, she must assume that this is the case and act accordingly⁷.

Any subsequent alteration of the bearing between the two vessels does not make the overtaking vessel a crossing vessel⁸ or relieve her of the duty of keeping clear of the overtaken vessel until she is finally past and clear⁹.

This rule applies only to vessels in sight of one another¹⁰.

733. Head-on situation.

Under the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972¹, when two power-driven vessels² are meeting on reciprocal or nearly reciprocal courses so as to involve risk of collision³, each must alter her course to starboard so that each pass on the port side of the other⁴. Such a situation is deemed to exist when a vessel sees the other ahead or nearly ahead and by night she could see the masthead lights⁵ of the other in a line or nearly in a line and/or both sidelights⁶ and by day she observes the corresponding aspect of the other vessel⁷. When a vessel is in any doubt as to whether such a situation exists, she must assume that it does exist and act accordingly⁸.

This rule applies only to vessels in sight of one another⁹.

AVOIDANCE OF COLLISIONS/(2) THE INTERNATIONAL REGULATIONS FOR PREVENTING COLLISIONS AT SEA 1972/(ii) Steering and Sailing Rules of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972/B. CONDUCT OF VESSELS IN SIGHT OF ONE ANOTHER/734. The crossing rule.

734. The crossing rule.

Under the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972¹, when two power-driven vessels² are crossing³ so as to involve risk of collision⁴, the vessel which has the other on her own starboard side must keep out of the way and, if the circumstances of the case admit, must avoid crossing ahead of the other vessel⁵. This rule applies only to vessels in sight of one another⁶.

If two vessels are on courses which, if maintained, will bring them to the same point at, or nearly at, the same moment, they are crossing for the purpose of this rule; but vessels are not so crossing if the course which is reasonably to be attributed to either vessel would keep her clear of the other⁷. Thus if, as a result of their both following the winding curves of the river, two vessels find themselves momentarily on courses which would, if pursued, cross, the crossing rule does not apply⁸.

Where two vessels are on crossing courses in open waters or the sea and each knows that the other is going to alter her course at about the same place but there is nothing that definitely settles where they will alter course, the crossing rule nevertheless applies. In such circumstances, however, as a matter of good seamanship the give-way vessel should give way clearly, presenting the stand-on vessel with the clearest indication that the give-way vessel means to get out of the way⁹. The fact that two vessels on crossing courses are both manoeuvring to take up a pilot is not of itself a special circumstance¹⁰ justifying departure from the crossing rule¹¹.

The crossing rule does not apply if it is not possible for the give-way vessel under the rule to appreciate that the other vessel is on a crossing course¹² and it seems that, if two vessels are within sight of one another and one of them, without observing the other, by her manoeuvres creates a situation in which the crossing rule would apply, the vessel creating the situation is not entitled to rely on the rule¹³.

Whether the crossing rule applies to the case of a vessel coming out of a dock into a river in which another vessel is passing up or down depends on whether or not the vessels sight one another at such a distance that they can each of them reasonably act under the crossing rule and so avoid collision¹⁴. When two vessels are approaching one another at a forked intersection in a narrow channel and bear from one another as if on crossing courses, it appears that they will be governed not by the crossing rule but by the narrow channel rule¹⁵, if it is reasonable to assume that their courses will not in fact cross or that one vessel will pass well ahead or astern of the other¹⁶. Where, however, the course of one vessel intersects the course of the other so that both will meet at about the point of intersection, both the 'narrow channel rule' and the 'crossing rule' apply, so that normally each vessel ought to keep to the starboard side of the channel¹⁷ in which she is and it is the duty of the vessel which has the other on her starboard side to keep out of the way¹⁸ and not to cross ahead¹⁹ of the other vessel and the duty of the other vessel²⁰ to keep her course and speed²¹.

AVOIDANCE OF COLLISIONS/(2) THE INTERNATIONAL REGULATIONS FOR PREVENTING COLLISIONS AT SEA 1972/(ii) Steering and Sailing Rules of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972/B. CONDUCT OF VESSELS IN SIGHT OF ONE ANOTHER/736. Action by stand-on vessel.

736. Action by stand-on vessel.

Under the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972¹, where one of two vessels² is to keep out of the way³, the other (the 'stand-on' vessel) must keep her course and speed⁴. The duty of the stand-on vessel to keep her course and speed does not come into force until it is the duty of the give-way vessel to keep out of the way and that duty does not arise until there is risk of collision⁵ within the meaning of the collision rules⁶, or a close proximity between vessels in an overtaking situation⁷.

The stand-on vessel may, however, take action to avoid collision by her manoeuvre alone, as soon as it becomes apparent to her that the vessel required to keep out of the way is not taking appropriate action in compliance with the Collision Regulations 1972⁸. When, from any cause, the vessel required to keep her course and speed finds herself so close that collision cannot be avoided by the action of the give-way vessel alone, she must take such action as will best aid⁹ to avoid collision¹⁰.

A power-driven vessel¹¹ which takes action¹² in a crossing situation¹³ to avoid collision with another power-driven vessel must not, if the circumstances of the case admit, alter course to port for a vessel on her own port side¹⁴.

This rule applies only to vessels in sight of one another¹⁵; and it does not relieve the give-way vessel of her obligation¹⁶ to keep out of the way¹⁷.

1 As to the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972 ('Collision Regulations 1972') see PARA 715. The Collision Regulations 1972 have force in the United Kingdom in the version, as amended, that is set out in Merchant Shipping Notice 1781(M), which, together with the rules of the Collision Regulations 1972 referred to in it, form an integral part of the Merchant Shipping (Distress Signals and Prevention of Collisions) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/75: see PARA 715 note 9.

2 As to the meaning of 'vessel' for these purposes see PARA 720 note 2.

3 See eg the Collision Regulations 1972 r 13 (overtaking vessel to keep out of way of other) (see PARA 732) and r 15 (vessel with other on starboard side when crossing to keep out of way) (see PARA 734).

4 Collision Regulations 1972 r 17(a)(i). For these purposes, 'course and speed' means course and speed in following the nautical manoeuvre in which, to the knowledge of the other vessel, the stand-on vessel is at the time engaged: The Roanoke [1908] P 231 at 239, 11 Asp MLC 253 at 257, CA, per Lord Alverstone CJ; and see eg The Afrika (1937) 57 Ll L Rep 215 at 220, 221, PC (vessel engaged in coming to anchor); The Taunton (1928) 31 Ll L Rep 119 at 120. Thus it means the course and speed which the vessel would take naturally and independently of the presence of the other vessel, as the proper method of her navigation at the particular time and place: The Roanoke at 247 and at 259 per Kennedy LJ; and see The Karama [1921] P 76, 15 Asp MLC 318, CA (affd sub nom Haughland (Owners) v Karama (Owners) [1922] 1 AC 68, 15 Asp MLC 430, HL) (two crossing ships making for the same buoy where both would make an eight point turn).

In ordinary circumstances, when no alteration of course or speed is required by the manoeuvre which the vessel is carrying out, the first duty of the stand-on vessel under the Collision Regulations 1972 r 17 is not to make any alteration in either, but to keep her course and speed as long as this will enable the other vessel to keep out of the way: cf The Ranza (1898) 79 LJP 21n; The Huntsman (1911) 11 Asp MLC 606.

The rules in the Collision Regulations 1972 Pt B (Steering and Sailing Rules) Section II (Conduct of vessels in sight of one another) (rr 11-18) (see also PARAS 731-735, 737) must be strictly complied with; however, vessels are not prevented from taking sufficiently early action ahead of the point in time at which those rules come into effect: Merchant Shipping Notice 1781(M) Introduction para 6.

5 As to the risk of collision see PARA 726.

A vessel which would normally be the give-way vessel and which is not under command and has hoisted the appropriate shapes (see PARA 746) is not thereby converted into a stand-on vessel for the purposes of the Collision Regulations 1972 r 17, but the other ship has a duty arising from the duty of good seamanship to keep out of her way: Mendip Range (Owners) v Radcliffe [1921] 1 AC 556, 15 Asp MLC 242, HL. See also Orduna (Owners) v Shipping Controller [1921] 1 AC 250, HL; The Fancy [1917] P 13, 13 Asp MLC 603 (patrol steamer when intercepting a steamship not relieved of her obligations under the crossing rule, but other vessel also to blame for altering course and speed).

8 Collision Regulations 1972 r 17(a)(ii).

9 The liability of the stand-on vessel is to be judged on the supposition that she is only aiding action by the other vessel and she is not to be held to blame because of the other vessel's inaction: see The Sparto [1956] 1 Lloyd's Rep 400 at 407. The action which as a rule will best aid to avert collision is to go full speed astern: Peter Pan v Mendocino (1921) 6 Ll L Rep 519 at 521, 522; Kitano Maru (Owners) v Otranto (Owners), The Otranto [1931] AC 194, 18 Asp MLC 193, HL.

10 Collision Regulations 1972 r 17(b). Prior to the Collision Regulations 1972 which gave the vessel discretionary power to take action to avoid collision (see r 17(a)(ii); and the text and note 8) it was a matter of some difficulty for the officer in charge of a stand-on vessel to determine when the time had arrived for him to take action, although latitude was allowed to him: see SS Albano v Allan Line SS Co Ltd, Union Dampfschiffsrhederei AG v SS Parisian [1907] AC 193 at 207, 10 Asp MLC 365 at 370, PC; The Huntsman (1911) 11 Asp MLC 606 at 608; and see also Compagnie des Forges et d'Hormecourt v Gibson & Co, The Eidsvaag v The Gala 1920 SC 247 (action to avert collision justified); The Treherbert [1934] P 31, 18 Asp MLC 458, CA; The Sparto [1956] 1 Lloyd's Rep 400 at 407. It is quite impossible to determine mathematically the point at which the stand-on vessel must act; the rules have to be construed so that persons may act reasonably upon them: The Ranza (1898) 79 LJP 21n; and see Kitano Maru (Owners) v Otranto (Owners), The Otranto [1931] AC 194, 18 Asp MLC 193, HL. If the officer in charge is found to have been watching the other vessel and doing his best to make up his mind when to act, he ought not to be held to blame for waiting a moment too long before acting or acting too soon: The Ranza (1898) 79 LJP 21n at 22; The Huntsman (1911) 11 Asp MLC 606; The Sparto [1956] 1 Lloyd's Rep 400 at 407. 737. Responsibilities between vessels.

Except where the rules of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972¹ relating to narrow channels², traffic separation schemes³ and overtaking⁴ otherwise require⁵:

938 (1) a power-driven vessel⁶ underway⁷ must keep out of the way⁸ of:

41

- 93. (a) a vessel not under command⁹;
- 94. (b) a vessel restricted in her ability to manoeuvre¹⁰;
- 95. (c) a vessel engaged in fishing¹¹;
- 96. (d) a sailing vessel¹²;

42

939 (2) a sailing vessel underway must keep out of the way of:

43

- 97. (a) a vessel not under command¹³;
- 98. (b) a vessel restricted in her ability to manoeuvre¹⁴;
- 99. (c) a vessel engaged in fishing¹⁵;

44

940 (3) a vessel engaged in fishing when underway must, so far as possible, keep out of the way of:

45

- 100. (a) a vessel not under command¹⁶;
- 101. (b) a vessel restricted in her ability to manoeuvre¹⁷.

Any vessel other than a vessel not under command or a vessel restricted in her ability to manoeuvre must, if the circumstances of the case admit, avoid impeding the safe passage of a vessel constrained by her draught¹⁸, exhibiting the appropriate¹⁹ signals²⁰. A vessel constrained by her draught must navigate with particular caution having full regard to her special condition²¹.

A seaplane²² on the water must, in general, keep well clear of all vessels and avoid impeding their navigation²³. In circumstances, however, where risk of collision²⁴ exists, she must comply with the steering and sailing rules²⁵.

A wing-in-ground (WIG) craft²⁶ must, when taking off, landing and in flight near the surface, keep well clear of all other vessels and avoid impeding their navigation²⁷; and such a craft operating on the water surface must comply with the steering and sailing rules²⁸ as a power-driven vessel²⁹.

This rule applies only to vessels in sight of one another³⁰.

CONDUCT OF VESSELS IN RESTRICTED VISIBILITY/738. Vessels proceeding in restricted visibility.

C. CONDUCT OF VESSELS IN RESTRICTED VISIBILITY

738. Vessels proceeding in restricted visibility.

Special provisions of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972¹ apply to vessels² not in sight of one another³ when navigating in or near an area of restricted visibility⁴.

Every vessel must proceed at a safe speed⁵ adapted to the prevailing circumstances and conditions of restricted visibility⁶. A power-driven vessel⁷ must have her engines ready for immediate manoeuvre⁸.

Every vessel must have due regard to the prevailing circumstances and conditions of restricted visibility when complying with the rules relating to the conduct of vessels in any conditions of visibility⁹.

A vessel which detects, by radar¹⁰ alone, the presence of another vessel must determine if a close-quarters situation¹¹ is developing and/or risk of collision¹² exists¹³. If so, she must take avoiding action¹⁴ in ample time, provided that, when such action consists of an alteration of course, so far as possible the following must be avoided¹⁵:

- 941 (1) an alteration of course to port for a vessel forward of the beam, other than for a vessel being overtaken¹⁶;
- 942 (2) an alteration of course towards a vessel abeam or abaft the beam¹⁷.

Except where it has been determined that a risk of collision does not exist, every vessel which hears apparently forward of her beam the fog signal¹⁸ of another vessel, or which cannot avoid a close-quarters situation with another vessel forward of her beam, must reduce her speed to the minimum at which she can be kept on her course¹⁹. She must, if necessary, take all her way off and in any event navigate with extreme caution until danger of collision is over²⁰.

The rules in the Collision Regulations 1972 Pt B (Steering and Sailing Rules) section III (Conduct of vessels in restricted visibility) (r 19) (see PARA 738) must be strictly complied with; however, vessels are not prevented from taking sufficiently early action ahead of the point in time at which those rules come into effect: Merchant Shipping Notice 1781(M) Introduction para 6.

The rules of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972¹ concerning lights and shapes² must be complied with in all weathers³.

The rules concerning lights⁴ must be complied with from sunset to sunrise and during such times no other lights may be exhibited, except such lights as cannot be mistaken for the lights specified in the rules⁵ or do not impair their visibility or distinctive character, or interfere with the keeping of a proper look-out⁶. The lights so prescribed⁷ must, if carried, also be exhibited from sunrise to sunset in restricted visibility⁸ and may be exhibited in all other circumstances when it is deemed necessary⁹.

The lights prescribed in the rules of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972 relating to lights and shapes¹ must be of a specified intensity² so as to be visible at various prescribed minimum ranges³, as follows:

- 943 (1) in vessels of 50 metres or more in length⁴, the prescribed minimum ranges are: for a masthead light⁵, six miles; for a sidelight⁶, three miles; for a sternlight⁷, three miles; for a towing light⁸, three miles; for a white, red, green or yellow all-round⁹ light, three miles¹⁰;
- 944 (2) in vessels of 12 metres or more in length but less than 50 metres in length, the prescribed minimum ranges are: for a masthead light, five miles (except that, where the length of the vessel is less than 20 metres, it is three miles); for a sidelight, two miles; for a sternlight, two miles; for a towing light, two miles; for a white, red, green or yellow all-round light, two miles¹¹;
- 945 (3) in vessels of less than 12 metres in length, the prescribed minimum ranges are: for a masthead light, two miles; for a sidelight, one mile; for a sternlight, two miles; for a towing light, two miles; for a white, red, green or yellow all-round light, two miles¹²;
- 946 (4) in inconspicuous, partly submerged vessels or objects being towed, the prescribed range is, for a white all-round light, three miles¹³.

4 As to the meaning of 'length' see PARA 728 note 6.

5 For these purposes, 'masthead light' means a white light placed over the fore and aft centreline of the vessel showing an unbroken light over an arc of the horizon of 225 degrees and so fixed as to show the light from right ahead to 22.5 degrees abaft the beam on either side of the vessel: Collision Regulations 1972 r 21(a).

6 For these purposes, 'sidelights' means a green light on the starboard side and a red light on the port side each showing an unbroken light over an arc of the horizon of 112.5 degrees and so fixed as to show the light from the right ahead to 22.5 degrees abaft the beam on its respective side; but in a vessel of less than 20 metres in length the sidelights may be combined in one lantern carried on the fore and aft centreline of the vessel: Collision Regulations 1972 r 21(b).

7 For these purposes, 'sternlight' means a white light placed as nearly as practicable at the stern showing an unbroken light over an arc of the horizon of 135 degrees and so fixed as to show the light 67.5 degrees from right aft on each side of the vessel: Collision Regulations 1972 r 21(c).

8 For these purposes, 'towing light' means a yellow light having the same characteristics as the sternlight as defined in the Collision Regulations 1972 r 21(c) (see note 7): r 21(d).

9 For these purposes, 'all-round light' means a light showing an unbroken light over an arc of the horizon of 360 degrees: Collision Regulations 1972 r 21(e).

741. Lights required by power-driven vessels underway.

Under the rules of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972 relating to lights and shapes¹, a power-driven vessel² underway³ must exhibit⁴:

- 947 (1) a masthead light⁵ forward⁶;
- 948 (2) a second masthead light abaft of and higher than the forward one, except that a vessel of less than 50 metres in length⁷ is not obliged to exhibit such light but may do so⁸;
- 949 (3) sidelights⁹;
- 950 (4) a sternlight¹⁰.

An air-cushion vessel when operating in the non-displacement mode must, in addition to the lights prescribed in heads (1)-(4) above, exhibit an all-round¹¹ flashing¹² yellow light¹³; and a wing-in-ground (WIG) craft¹⁴ only when taking off, landing and in flight near the surface must, in addition to the lights prescribed in heads (1)-(4) above, exhibit a high intensity all-round flashing red light¹⁵.

A power-driven vessel of less than 12 metres in length may, in lieu of the lights prescribed in heads (1) to (4) above, exhibit an all-round white light and sidelights¹⁶.

A power-driven vessel of less than seven metres in length whose maximum speed does not exceed seven knots may, in lieu of the lights prescribed in heads (1) to (4) above, exhibit an all-round white light and must, if practicable, also exhibit sidelights¹⁷.

The masthead light or all-round white light on a power-driven vessel of less than 12 metres in length may be displaced from the fore and aft centreline of the vessel if centreline fitting is not practicable, provided that the sidelights are combined in one lantern which must be carried on the fore and aft centreline of the vessel or located as nearly as practicable in the same fore and aft line as the masthead light or the all-round white light¹⁸.

AVOIDANCE OF COLLISIONS/(2) THE INTERNATIONAL REGULATIONS FOR PREVENTING COLLISIONS AT SEA 1972/(iii) Lights and Shapes/742. Lights and shapes required by vessels towing and pushing.

742. Lights and shapes required by vessels towing and pushing.

Under the rules of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972 relating to lights and shapes¹, a power-driven vessel², when towing³, must exhibit⁴:

- 951 (1) two masthead lights⁵ forward in a vertical line, or, when the length of the tow, measuring from the stern of the towing vessel to the after end of the tow, exceeds 200 metres, three such lights in a vertical line⁶;
- 952 (2) sidelights⁷;
- 953 (3) a sternlight⁸;
- 954 (4) a towing light⁹ in a vertical line above the sternlight¹⁰;
- 955 (5) when the length of the tow exceeds 200 metres, a diamond shape where it can best be seen¹¹.

When a pushing vessel and a vessel being pushed ahead are rigidly connected in a composite unit, they are to be regarded as a power-driven vessel and exhibit the appropriate lights¹².

A power-driven vessel, when pushing ahead or towing alongside, except in the case of a composite unit, must exhibit¹³:

- 956 (a) two masthead lights forward in a vertical line¹⁴;
- 957 (b) sidelights¹⁵;
- 958 (c) a sternlight¹⁶.

Where, from any sufficient cause, it is impracticable for a vessel not normally engaged in towing operations to display the lights prescribed in heads (1) to (5) above¹⁷ or in heads (a) to (c) above¹⁸, such vessel is not required to exhibit those lights when engaged in towing another vessel in distress or otherwise in need of assistance¹⁹. All possible measures must be taken to indicate the nature of the relationship between the towing vessel and the vessel being towed²⁰, in particular by illuminating the towline²¹.

AVOIDANCE OF COLLISIONS/(2) THE INTERNATIONAL REGULATIONS FOR PREVENTING COLLISIONS AT SEA 1972/(iii) Lights and Shapes/743. Lights and shapes required by vessels being towed or pushed.

743. Lights and shapes required by vessels being towed or pushed.

Under the rules of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972 relating to lights and shapes¹, a vessel² or object being towed³ must exhibit⁴:

- 959 (1) sidelights⁵;
- 960 (2) a sternlight⁶;
- 961 (3) when the length of the tow exceeds 200 metres, a diamond shape where it can best be seen⁷.

Any number of vessels being towed alongside or pushed in a group must be lighted as one vessel⁸; however:

- 962 (a) a vessel being pushed ahead, not being part of a composite unit, must exhibit, at the forward end, sidelights⁹;
- 963 (b) a vessel being towed alongside must exhibit a sternlight and, at the forward end, sidelights¹⁰.

An inconspicuous, partly submerged vessel or object, or combination of such vessels or objects being towed, must exhibit¹¹:

- 964 (i) if it is less than 25 metres in breadth¹², one all-round white light¹³ at or near the forward end and one at or near the after end, except that dracones need not exhibit a light at or near the forward end¹⁴;
- 965 (ii) if it is 25 metres or more in breadth, two additional all-round white lights at or near the extremities of its breadth¹⁵;
- 966 (iii) if it exceeds 100 metres in length¹⁶, additional all-round white lights between the lights prescribed in heads (i) and (ii) above so that the distance between the lights does not exceed 100 metres¹⁷;
- 967 (iv) a diamond shape at or near the aftermost extremity of the last vessel or object being towed and, if the length of the tow exceeds 200 metres, an additional diamond shape where it can best be seen and located as far forward as is practicable¹⁸.

Where from any sufficient cause it is impracticable for a vessel or object being towed to exhibit the lights or shapes prescribed in heads (1) to (3) above¹⁹ or in heads (i) to (iv) above²⁰, all possible measures must be taken to light the vessel or object towed or at least to indicate the presence of such vessel or object²¹.

3 Ie other than a vessel or object being towed as mentioned in the Collision Regulations 1972 r 24(g) (see the text and notes 11-18): see r 24(e).

A dumb barge lashed alongside a tug underway is probably a vessel being towed: see The Lighter (No 3) (1902) 18 TLR 322, PC (where it seems to have been assumed that the dumb barge was being towed). In view of the special provision now made as to lights for vessels being pushed (see PARA 742), the question might perhaps arise whether a vessel lashed alongside another was being towed or pushed. A vessel being drawn up to her anchor by a tug is not being towed: The Romance [1901] P 15, 9 Asp MLC 149. The tug must carry towing lights: see PARA 742. A tug which merely has a rope fast to a vessel with the intention of towing her at a future time is not towing: The Sargasso [1912] P 192, 12 Asp MLC 202.

Under the rules of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972 relating to lights and shapes¹, a sailing vessel² underway³ must exhibit⁴:

- 968 (1) sidelights⁵;
- 969 (2) a sternlight⁶.

In a sailing vessel of less than 20 metres in length⁷, the lights prescribed by heads (1) and (2) above may be combined in one lantern carried at or near the top of the mast where it can best be seen⁸.

A sailing vessel underway may, in addition to the lights prescribed by heads (1) and (2) above, exhibit at or near the top of the mast, where they can best be seen, two all-round lights⁹ in a vertical line, the upper being red and the lower green, but these lights must not be exhibited in conjunction with the combined lantern¹⁰.

A sailing vessel of less than seven metres in length must, if practicable, also exhibit the prescribed lights¹¹ but, if she does not, she must have ready at hand an electric torch or lighted lantern showing a white light which must be exhibited in sufficient time to prevent collision¹².

A vessel under oars may exhibit the prescribed lights for sailing vessels¹³ but, if she does not, she must have ready at hand an electric torch or lighted lantern showing a white light which must be exhibited in sufficient time to prevent collision¹⁴.

A vessel proceeding under sail, when also being propelled by machinery, must exhibit forward where it can best be seen a conical shape, apex downwards¹⁵.

Under the rules of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972 relating to lights and shapes¹, a vessel engaged in fishing², whether underway³ or at anchor, must exhibit only the lights and shapes prescribed as follows:⁴

- 970 (1) a vessel, when engaged in trawling⁵, must exhibit⁶:
102. (a) two all-round lights⁷ in a vertical line, the upper being green and the lower white, or a shape consisting of two cones with their apexes together in a vertical line one above the other⁸;
103. (b) a masthead light⁹ abaft of and higher than the all-round green light, although a vessel of less than 50 metres in length is not obliged to exhibit such a light but may do so¹⁰;
104. (c) when making way through the water, in addition to the lights prescribed in heads (a) and (b) above, sidelights¹¹ and a sternlight¹²;
- 48
- 971 (2) a vessel engaged in fishing, other than trawling, must exhibit¹³:
49
105. (a) two all-round lights in a vertical line, the upper being red and the lower white, or a shape consisting of two cones with apexes together in a vertical line one above the other¹⁴;
106. (b) when there is outlying gear extending more than 150 metres horizontally from the vessel, an all-round white light or a cone apex upwards in the direction of the gear¹⁵;
107. (c) when making way through the water, in addition to the lights prescribed in heads (a) and (b) above, sidelights and a sternlight¹⁶;
- 50
- 972 and
- 973 (3) the additional signals which are prescribed¹⁷ must be exhibited by a vessel engaged in fishing in close proximity to other vessels engaged in fishing¹⁸.

A vessel, when not engaged in fishing, must not exhibit the lights or shapes so prescribed¹⁹, but only those prescribed for a vessel of her length²⁰.

'Engaged in trawling' is not the same as trawling, but seems to cover the work of fishing with a trawl from the first shooting until in any case the trawl is got aboard again: The Cockatrice [1908] P 182 at 188, 11 Asp MLC 50 at 52. 'Engaged in trawling' even covers the interval after the trawl has been got aboard and before the vessel shoots again if she is going to shoot immediately on the same ground (The Cockatrice at 188 and at 52), or if she is hove-to, with the work of trawling not yet completed (The Picton [1910] P 46, 11 Asp MLC 358); but, if the vessel decides to go off to another spot to trawl, then, as soon as she is under command and in a position to go full steam ahead, she ought to shift her lights and put up the underway lights (The Upton Castle [1906] P 147, 10 Asp MLC 153; The Cockatrice at 188 and at 52; The Skrim (1914) 30 TLR 555).

AVOIDANCE OF COLLISIONS/(2) THE INTERNATIONAL REGULATIONS FOR PREVENTING COLLISIONS AT SEA 1972/(iii) Lights and Shapes/746. Lights and shapes required by vessels not under command or restricted in their ability to manoeuvre.

746. Lights and shapes required by vessels not under command or restricted in their ability to manoeuvre.

Under the rules of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972 relating to lights and shapes¹, a vessel not under command² must exhibit³:

- 974 (1) two all-round red lights⁴ in a vertical line where they can best be seen⁵;
- 975 (2) two balls or similar shapes in a vertical line where they can best be seen⁶;
- 976 (3) when making way through the water, in addition to the lights prescribed in heads (1) and (2) above, sidelights⁷ and a sternlight⁸.

A vessel restricted in her ability to manoeuvre⁹, except a vessel engaged in mine-clearance operations, must exhibit¹⁰:

- 977 (a) three all-round lights in a vertical line where they can best be seen, the highest and lowest of these lights being red and the middle light white¹¹;
- 978 (b) three shapes in a vertical line where they can best be seen, the highest and lowest of these shapes being balls and the middle one a diamond¹²;
- 979 (c) when making way through the water, a masthead light¹³ or lights, sidelights and a sternlight, in addition to the lights prescribed in head (a) above¹⁴;
- 980 (d) when at anchor, in addition to the lights or shapes prescribed in heads (a) and (b) above, the appropriate light, lights or shapes¹⁵ for vessel at anchor¹⁶.

A power-driven vessel¹⁷ engaged in a towing operation such as severely restricts the towing vessel and her tow in their ability to deviate from their course must, in addition to the lights or shapes otherwise prescribed in relation to towing¹⁸, exhibit the lights or shapes prescribed in heads (a) and (b) above¹⁹.

A vessel engaged in dredging or underwater operations, when restricted in her ability to manoeuvre, must exhibit the lights and shapes prescribed in heads (a) to (c) above and must in addition, when an obstruction exists, exhibit²⁰:

- 981 (i) two all-round red lights or two balls in a vertical line to indicate the side on which the obstruction exists²¹;
- 982 (ii) two all-round green lights or two diamonds in a vertical line to indicate the side on which another vessel may pass²²;
- 983 (iii) when at anchor, the lights or shapes prescribed in heads (i) and (ii) above instead of the lights or shape normally exhibited²³ by vessels at anchor²⁴.

Whenever the size of a vessel engaged in diving operations makes it impracticable to exhibit the shapes prescribed in heads (i) to (iii) above, the following must be exhibited²⁵:

- 984 (A) three all-round lights in a vertical line where they can best be seen, the highest and lowest of these lights being red and the middle light white²⁶;

- 985 (B) a rigid replica of the International Code flag 'A' not less than one metre in height; and measures must be taken to ensure its all-round visibility²⁷.

A vessel engaged in mine-clearance operations must, in addition to the lights prescribed for a power-driven vessel²⁸ or to the lights or shape prescribed for a vessel at anchor²⁹, as appropriate, exhibit three all-round green lights or three balls, one of these lights or shapes being exhibited at or near the foremast head and one at each end of the fore yard³⁰. These lights or shapes indicate that it is dangerous for another vessel to approach within 1,000 metres of the mine-clearance vessel³¹.

Vessels of less than 12 metres in length³², except those engaged in diving operations, are not required to exhibit the lights and shapes so prescribed³³.

The signals so prescribed³⁴ are not signals of vessels in distress and requiring assistance³⁵, for which other provision is made³⁶.

A vessel at anchor may, and a vessel of 100 metres and more in length must, also use the available working or equivalent lights to illuminate her decks¹⁰.

A vessel aground¹¹ must exhibit the usual lights prescribed¹² and in addition, where they can best be seen¹³:

- 991 (a) two all-round red lights in a vertical line¹⁴;
- 992 (b) three balls in a vertical line¹⁵.

A vessel of less than seven metres in length, when at anchor, not in or near a narrow channel¹⁶, fairway¹⁷ or anchorage (or where other vessels normally navigate) is not required to exhibit the usual prescribed¹⁸ lights or shape¹⁹.

(iv) Sound and Light Signals

751. Equipment for sound signals.

Under the rules of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972¹, a vessel² of 12 metres or more in length³ must be provided with a whistle⁴, a vessel of 20 metres or more in length must be provided with a bell in addition to a whistle, and a vessel of 100 metres or more in length must, in addition, be provided with a gong, the tone and sound of which cannot be confused with that of the bell⁵.

A vessel of less than 12 metres in length is not obliged to carry the sound signalling appliances so prescribed⁶ but, if she does not, she must be provided with some other means of making an efficient sound signal⁷.

1 As to the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972 ('Collision Regulations 1972') see PARA 715. As to exemptions from the Collision Regulations 1972 regarding the requirements for sound signal appliances in favour of any vessel or class of vessels, the keel of which was laid or which was at a corresponding stage of construction before the date of entry into force of the Regulations, provided that she complies with the requirements of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1960 (revoked), see the Collision Regulations 1972 r 38(g). 5 Collision Regulations 1972 r 33(a). The whistle, bell and gong referred to in the text must comply with the specifications in Annex III (Technical details of sound signal appliances): see r 33(a). The bell or gong or both may be replaced by other equipment having the same respective sound characteristics, provided that manual sounding of the required signals is always possible: see r 33(a).

AVOIDANCE OF COLLISIONS/(2) THE INTERNATIONAL REGULATIONS FOR PREVENTING COLLISIONS AT SEA 1972/(iv) Sound and Light Signals/752. Manoeuvring and warning signals.

752. Manoeuvring and warning signals.

Under the rules of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972¹, when vessels² are in sight of one another³, a power-driven vessel⁴ underway⁵, when manoeuvring as authorised or required by the rules of the Collision Regulations 1972⁶, must indicate that manoeuvre by the following signals on her whistle⁷: one short blast⁸ to mean 'I am altering my course to starboard'; two short blasts to mean 'I am altering my course to port'; three short blasts to mean 'I am operating astern propulsion'⁹.

Any vessel may supplement the whistle signals so prescribed¹⁰ by light signals, repeated as appropriate, whilst the manoeuvre is being carried out¹¹. The light signals have the following significance¹²: one flash¹³ to mean 'I am altering my course to starboard'; two flashes to mean 'I am altering my course to port'; three flashes to mean 'I am operating astern propulsion'¹⁴.

When in sight of one another in a narrow channel¹⁵ or fairway¹⁶, a vessel intending to overtake another must¹⁷ indicate her intention by the following signals on her whistle¹⁸: two prolonged blasts¹⁹ followed by one short blast to mean 'I intend to overtake you on your starboard side'; two prolonged blasts followed by two short blasts to mean 'I intend to overtake you on your port side'²⁰.

The vessel about to be overtaken must²¹ indicate her agreement by the following signal on her whistle, that is to say one prolonged, one short, one prolonged and one short blast, in that order²².

When vessels in sight of one another are approaching each other and from any cause either vessel fails to understand the intentions or actions of the other, or is in doubt whether sufficient action is being taken by the other to avoid collision²³, the vessel in doubt must immediately indicate such doubt by giving at least five short and rapid blasts on the whistle²⁴. Such signal may be supplemented by a light signal of at least five short and rapid flashes²⁵.

A vessel nearing a bend or an area of a channel or fairway where other vessels may be obscured by an intervening obstruction must sound one prolonged blast²⁶. Such signal must be answered with a prolonged blast by any approaching vessel that may be within hearing around the bend or behind the intervening obstruction²⁷.

If whistles are fitted on a vessel at a distance apart of more than 100 metres, one whistle only must be used for giving manoeuvring and warning signals²⁸.

AVOIDANCE OF COLLISIONS/(2) THE INTERNATIONAL REGULATIONS FOR PREVENTING COLLISIONS AT SEA 1972/(iv) Sound and Light Signals/753. Sound signals in restricted visibility.

753. Sound signals in restricted visibility.

Under the rules of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972¹, the following signals must be used in or near an area of restricted visibility², whether by day or night, as prescribed³:

- 993 (1) a power-driven vessel⁴ making way through the water must sound at intervals of not more than two minutes one prolonged blast⁵;
- 994 (2) a power-driven vessel underway⁶ but stopped and making no way through the water must sound at intervals of not more than two minutes two prolonged blasts in succession with an interval of about two seconds between them⁷;
- 995 (3) a vessel not under command⁸, a vessel restricted in her ability to manoeuvre⁹, a vessel constrained by her draught¹⁰, a sailing vessel¹¹, a vessel engaged in fishing¹² and a vessel engaged in towing¹³ or pushing another vessel must, instead of the signals prescribed in head (1) or (2) above, sound at intervals of not more than two minutes three blasts in succession, that is one prolonged followed by two short blasts¹⁴;
- 996 (4) a vessel engaged in fishing, when at anchor¹⁵, and a vessel restricted in her ability to manoeuvre when carrying out her work at anchor, must, instead of the signals prescribed in head (7) below sound the signal prescribed in head (3) above¹⁶;
- 997 (5) a vessel towed¹⁷ or, if more than one vessel is towed, the last vessel of the tow, if manned, must at intervals of not more than two minutes sound four blasts in succession, namely one prolonged followed by three short blasts; and when practicable, this signal must be made immediately after the signal made by the towing vessel¹⁸;
- 998 (6) when a pushing vessel and a vessel being pushed ahead are rigidly connected in a composite unit, they are regarded as a power-driven vessel and must give the signals prescribed in head (1) or (2) above¹⁹;
- 999 (7) a vessel at anchor must at intervals of not more than one minute ring the bell²⁰ rapidly for about five seconds; in a vessel of 100 metres or more in length²¹ the bell must be sounded in the forepart of the vessel and, immediately after the ringing of the bell, the gong²² must be sounded rapidly for about five seconds in the after part of the vessel²³;
- 1000 (8) a vessel aground²⁴ must give the bell signal and, if required, the gong signal prescribed in head (7) above and must, in addition, give three separate and distinct strokes on the bell immediately before and after the rapid ringing of the bell²⁵;
- 1001 (9) a vessel of 12 metres or more but less than 20 metres in length is not obliged to give the bell signals prescribed in heads (7) and (8) above, but, if she does not, she must make some other efficient sound signal at intervals of not more than two minutes²⁶;
- 1002 (10) a vessel of less than 12 metres in length is not obliged to give the above-mentioned signals but, if she does not, must make some other efficient sound signal at intervals of not more than two minutes²⁷;
- 1003 (11) a pilot vessel, when engaged on pilotage duty, may, in addition to the signals prescribed in head (1), (2) or (7) above, sound an identity signal consisting of four short blasts²⁸.

754. Signals to attract attention.

Under the rules of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972¹, if necessary to attract the attention of another vessel², any vessel may make light³ or sound⁴ signals that cannot be mistaken for any signal authorised elsewhere in the rules of the Collision Regulations 1972⁵, or may direct the beam of her searchlight in the direction of the danger, in such a way as not to embarrass any vessel⁶. Any light to attract the attention of another vessel must be such that it cannot be mistaken for any aid to navigation; and, for these purposes, the use of high intensity intermittent or revolving lights, such as strobe lights, must be avoided⁷.

755. Distress signals.

Under the rules of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972¹, when a vessel² is in distress and requires assistance, she must use or exhibit the signals prescribed as follows³, the signals, to be so used or exhibited either together or separately, in order to indicate distress and need of assistance⁴:

- 1004 (1) a gun or other explosive signal fired at intervals of about a minute⁵;
- 1005 (2) a continuous sounding with any fog-signalling apparatus⁶;
- 1006 (3) rockets or shells, throwing red stars fired one at a time at short intervals⁷;
- 1007 (4) a signal made by radiotelegraphy or by any other signalling method consisting of the group ... -- -- -- ... (SOS) in the Morse Code⁸;
- 1008 (5) a signal sent by radiotelephony consisting of the spoken word 'Mayday'⁹;
- 1009 (6) the International Code Signal of distress indicated by NC¹⁰;
- 1010 (7) a signal consisting of a square flag having above or below it a ball or anything resembling a ball¹¹;
- 1011 (8) flames on the vessel, as from a burning tar barrel, oil barrel etc¹²;
- 1012 (9) a rocket parachute flare or a hand flare showing a red light¹³;
- 1013 (10) a smoke signal giving off orange-coloured smoke¹⁴;
- 1014 (11) slowly and repeatedly raising and lowering arms outstretched to each side¹⁵;
- 1015 (12) the radiotelegraph alarm signal¹⁶;
- 1016 (13) the radiotelephone alarm signal¹⁷;
- 1017 (14) signals transmitted by emergency position-indicating radio beacons ('EPIRBs')¹⁸;
- 1018 (15) approved signals transmitted by radiocommunication systems, including survival craft radar transponders¹⁹.

The use or exhibition of any of the signals set out in heads (1) to (15) above, except for the purpose of indicating distress and need of assistance, and the use of other signals which may be confused with any of the above signals, is prohibited²⁰.

(3) DUTIES AFTER COLLISION

756. Duty of ship to assist the other in case of collision.

In every case of collision between two ships¹, it is the duty of the master² of each ship, if and so far as he can do so without danger³ to his own ship, crew and passengers, if any⁴:

1019 (1) to render⁵ to the other ship, its master, crew and passengers, if any, such assistance as may be practicable⁶, and may be necessary to save them from any danger caused by the collision, and to stay by the other ship until he has ascertained that it has no need of further assistance⁷; and 1020 (2) to give to the master of the other ship the name of his own ship and also the names of the ports⁸ from which it comes and to which it is bound⁹.

The failure of the master of a ship to comply with this duty¹⁰ does not raise any presumption of law that the collision was caused by his wrongful act, neglect or default¹¹. However, if the master fails without reasonable excuse to comply with the duty¹², he commits an offence¹³; and, if he is a certified officer, an inquiry into his conduct may be held¹⁴ and his certificate cancelled or suspended¹⁵.

Compliance with the statutory duty of rendering assistance after a collision does not prevent the assistance so given ranking as voluntary services for salvage purposes¹⁶.

1 As to the meaning of 'ship' see PARA 229.

The Secretary of State may make safety regulations with respect to the steps to be taken to prevent any collision involving a ship and in consequence of any collision involving a ship: see the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 85(3)(k); and PARA 591. As to the meaning of 'safety regulations' see PARA 591. As to the Secretary of State see PARA 38.

2 The duties imposed on the master of a ship by the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 92(1) apply to the masters of United Kingdom ships and to the masters of foreign ships when in United Kingdom waters: s 92(2). As to the meaning of 'master' see PARA 424. As to the meaning of 'foreign', in relation to a ship, see PARA 19 note 2; as to the meaning of 'United Kingdom ship' see PARA 230; and as to the meaning of 'United Kingdom waters' see PARA 48 note 10.

3 It seems that a reasonable apprehension that delay may result in capture by an enemy may excuse a vessel from staying to render assistance when that assistance may be rendered by the approaching enemy: The Thuringia (1872) 1 Asp MLC 283 at 292. Where, after a collision for which one vessel was solely to blame, the other vessel rendered assistance to her, although assistance could not be rendered without danger, and there was, therefore, no statutory duty to assist, and the vessel rendering assistance suffered damage in doing so, her owners were held not entitled to recover in a collision action from the owners of the ship assisted in respect of the damage suffered by their ship while rendering assistance, since that damage was not the direct result of the negligence which caused the collision, although the position might have been different if there had been a statutory duty to assist: The San Onofre [1922] P 243, 16 Asp MLC 1, CA. As to damages in collision actions see PARA 822 et seq.

4 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 92(1).

5 The duty to render arises only if there is danger from the collision. In the case of probable danger to life, the duty is to stay by until the extent of the danger can be ascertained: The Queen of the Orwell (1863) 7 LT 839.

6 This may consist of sending a ship's boat when more direct assistance would be impossible or dangerous: see The Adriatic (1875) 3 Asp MLC 16. Even when no other assistance can be given, it seems that at least the distress signals of the other vessel must be acknowledged: The Emmy Haase (1884) 9 PD 81, 5 Asp MLC 216.

(4) RULES OF GOOD SEAMANSHIP

(i) Scope of Rules

758. Matters to which the rules relate.

The rules of good seamanship extend over the whole range of conditions in the working of a vessel from the time of launching and getting underway until she returns to her anchorage in port or moorings in a dock¹. There are special rules of good seamanship for the manoeuvring of sailing ships and other vessels², and for cases of fog and heavy weather³, and for navigation in rivers and other inland waters⁴. The question of what is good seamanship is one of fact to be decided on a consideration of all the relevant circumstances⁵.

1 See PARA 760 et seq. Even though a vessel may have infringed a rule of good seamanship, it seems that a party alleging negligence against her must prove both breach of duty and damage: see PARA 723. As to negligence causing damage see PARA 785 et seq.

AVOIDANCE OF COLLISIONS/(4) RULES OF GOOD SEAMANSHIP/(i) Scope of Rules/759. Relationship between the rules of good seamanship and the collision regulations.

759. Relationship between the rules of good seamanship and the collision regulations.

In any case where one of the rules contained in the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972¹ applies, and the obligation imposed by that rule differs from the obligation which, in the absence of such a rule, would be imposed by good seamanship, the rule must be observed². In general, however, the duty to observe good seamanship has been preserved by the Collision Regulations 1972³. Moreover, the rules of good seamanship normally⁴ embody the obligations to be observed by persons in charge of vessels in circumstances for which the Collision Regulations 1972 make no provision⁵, or in other cases where those Regulations do not apply.

1 As to the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972 ('Collision Regulations 1972') see PARA 715. The Collision Regulations 1972 have force in the United Kingdom in the version, as amended, that is set out in Merchant Shipping Notice 1781(M), which, together with the rules of the Collision Regulations 1972 referred to in it, form an integral part of the Merchant Shipping (Distress Signals and Prevention of Collisions) Regulations 1996, SI 1996/75: see PARA 715 note 9.

2 A difference may exist between the obligation contained in the Collision Regulations 1972 r 8(e) (see PARA 727) to slacken speed and take all way off if necessary to avoid collision and the practice of good seamanship to keep way on the ship to make her more manageable.

(ii) Particular Conditions

760. Launching of vessel.

When a vessel is to be launched, those in charge of her are bound to give customary¹ or reasonable² notice of the launching, to prevent damage to vessels in the neighbourhood. This notice should be given by hoisting flags, by having boats in attendance to warn passing vessels³, by giving written notices or otherwise. Those in charge are also bound to take customary⁴ or reasonable⁵ precautions to prevent damage to other vessels, by keeping a good look-out, by having a tug or tugs in attendance and otherwise. The burden of proving such notice and such precautions lies on those in charge, even when they are defendants⁶. There are also, however, obligations on those in charge of passing vessels to keep out of the way⁷. A vessel at anchor in the track of a launch is bound to get out of the way if she has warning and the offer of a tug to move her⁸. If she refuses, those in charge of the launch may be justified in risking the chance of damaging her to avoid serious risk to life and property which would result from postponement⁹.

761. Special weather conditions.

It may be exceedingly imprudent to move a large vessel, without the use of her engines, by means of a tug in a river at night in anything like thick weather¹, and an owner may be held liable for a collision if his vessel gets underway unnecessarily in bad weather with other vessels about her². In a dense fog, it may be improper for her to be underway at all³.

Apart from the rules contained in the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972⁴ as to conduct in fog or other conditions restricting visibility⁵, a vessel may be to blame for neglecting such precautions as good seamanship dictates to guard against dangers arising from special weather⁶. Thus a steamship with three hands on board which broke from her moorings in a gale has been held to blame for not having her anchor ready to let go, and for her master and more of her crew not being on board⁷. A steamship, properly moored but dashed into by another vessel in heavy weather and broken adrift, was also held to blame for collision with a third vessel, among other reasons, for having her chains improperly unbent from her anchors, so that no anchor could be let go⁸. The master of a vessel has been held at fault for not having a sufficient crew on board in heavy weather to protect her against the ordinary incidents of peril which a competent seaman would guard against⁹.

762. Carrying and dropping anchor.

A power-driven vessel ought to have both anchors ready to let go when navigating in port past other vessels, where the existence of an exceptional current is known to be possible¹. Such a vessel² or a sailing vessel³ may, however, be excused for not dropping her anchor in time to prevent a collision. In a river, a vessel should carry her anchor as far as possible so as not to expose other vessels to damage by it⁴. Whether she is underway or moored, her owners will be liable for damage done by the improper projection of the anchor at night⁵ although not in daytime, if the other vessel could with ordinary care have avoided it⁶.

763. Coming to anchor and foul berth.

A vessel intending to come to anchor ought to make preparations¹, choosing her time² and easing her speed³, and ought to see carefully that all is clear around her⁴. If the vessel is anchoring in a river, she should round to against the strength of the tide⁵, and give any necessary warning before putting herself across the line of navigation⁶.

When one vessel anchors near another, there should be sufficient space left for swinging to the anchor, so that in ordinary circumstances the two vessels cannot come together. A berth such that sufficient space is not left is a foul berth⁷. It is improper to anchor directly ahead or directly astern of another vessel, in the direction of the tides or prevailing winds, unless at so great a distance as will allow time for either vessel to take measures to avoid collision in the event of either driving from her anchors⁸. When a vessel has given another a foul berth, she has no right to demand that the other should take extraordinary precautions⁹, and, when the difficulty calls for instant decision, the other may not be to blame for an error of judgment¹⁰.

764. Precautions while vessel at anchor or moored alongside etc.

A vessel at anchor¹ ought to have a competent person on watch to see that the anchor light² is duly exhibited, and also do everything in his power to avert or minimise a collision³. While a ship at anchor is not entirely free from duties towards a ship underway, the ship at anchor ought not to alter her position or heading until it is apparent to her that the ship underway cannot by her own unaided action avoid a collision⁴. She must take proper precautions to prevent driving in heavy weather⁵, or in a tideway⁶. It may be her duty to shift her berth⁷, or to slip and put to sea⁸. A vessel coming last to a tier has been held in fault for not hauling out from it in bad weather, that being the only means of avoiding damage to a vessel alongside⁹. Moreover, when one vessel is lying on shore or in dock, and a second vessel is voluntarily placed where damage will occur if some probable event arises which it is not possible to control, the owners of the second vessel will be responsible¹⁰. The owners will be liable if a vessel moors where she will take the ground and heel over and damage another vessel¹¹. A vessel in dock with mooring ropes across the dock must keep a vigilant look-out for ships moving in the dock at tide time so that the obstruction may be readily removed¹².

765. Keeping clear of vessel at anchor.

It is the duty of every vessel seeing another at anchor¹, whether in a proper or improper place, and whether properly or improperly anchored², to take reasonable care to avoid a collision if practicable and consistent with her own safety³. A ship brought up in an exposed position has been held not to contribute to a collision with a ship driving into her⁴. It appears, however, that a vessel may be so lying at anchor as to require more than ordinary care to avoid her⁵. There is a similar duty to keep clear of a sailing vessel which is compelled at the moment to go about⁶, or of a vessel engaged in fishing, or of other disabled vessels⁷. There is a statutory duty not to run foul of any lightship, buoy or beacon⁸.

767. Tug assistance.

A vessel may be held to blame for manoeuvring without taking tug assistance when it is available and reasonably necessary. For example, a power-driven vessel getting up her anchors off Dover in a gale without tug assistance was liable for damage caused when she was driven ashore¹, and a sailing vessel was liable for damage caused when trying to bring up ahead of another vessel in the Downs after losing one anchor and without using available tug assistance².

768. Officers and watch on look-out.

It is a lack of due care for a senior officer on watch to give up charge to a junior officer and go below while his vessel is actually manoeuvring for another vessel which is drawing near to her¹. To constitute a good look-out² on a ship, there must be a sufficient number of persons stationed for the purpose, who must know and be able to discharge that duty³. As a rule, except doubtless in the case of very small vessels, there ought to be a lookout forward⁴ besides the officer on the bridge, even on a fine day⁵. Sometimes the proper place for the look-out is, not forward, but on the bridge⁶. The crow's nest may be a proper place for a look-out⁷.

In deciding what is a proper look-out, the state of the weather and the proximity of vessels must be considered. The greater the necessity for the look-out owing to thick weather or otherwise, the more vigilant it should be. It is no excuse for a bad look-out to urge that no vigilance could have prevented the collision⁸. It has been held that a power-driven vessel proceeding at high speed in a crowded thoroughfare, or in fog, ought to have a double look-out forward⁹. It is a lack of due care for the look-out forward to be engaged on other duties, for example clearing the anchor¹⁰. There is no necessity as a rule for a vessel at sea at night, if she has a fixed stern light, to look out for vessels astern¹¹, but there may be if there is reason to suppose that a vessel so approaching does not see her¹². Failure to have any look-out is a breach of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972¹³, and it is no excuse that it was immaterial because the vessel had to keep her course¹⁴.

It is the duty of a vessel towing another to keep a look-out for both¹⁵, but this does not relieve the tow from keeping a good look-out, and even a pilot cutter being towed alongside a ship in tow of a tug has been held liable for not doing so¹⁶.

In a river, the duty of a look-out as to reporting lights is different from the duty in the open sea, because to report every light in a river would mean confusion. The duty is to report every material light¹⁷.

The look-out is stationed to see what vessels or obstacles are in the channel, and his attention is properly directed to this, and not elsewhere, for example to the Blue Peter of a vessel in a basin and just coming out¹⁸. If visibility is deceptive, it may be proper for the person in charge of the navigation of a vessel to make use of binoculars¹⁹.

Failure to appreciate that the vessel is dragging her anchor constitutes a bad look-out²⁰.

769. Speed.

No particular speed by power-driven vessels or other vessels can be said absolutely to be dangerous, and whether any given speed is dangerous or not must depend on the weather, locality, sea room and other facts¹. Fog or clear, light or dark, no power-driven vessel has a right to navigate at such a speed that it is impossible for her to prevent damage by taking all precautions at the moment she sees damage to be possible or probable². When a vessel's lights are obscured by her own smoke so as to prevent her from seeing or being seen by ships approaching, it is negligence for her to proceed at full speed³.

770. Standing close and speaking.

A vessel ought not to stand so close to another in bad weather that, if she is struck by a squall, there will be a collision¹. Thus, if a vessel tries to pass in a narrow space between vessels unnecessarily, she will be to blame for a collision which results from her doing so². A ship which approaches another to speak to her does so at her own risk³, and a sailing vessel ought not to run alongside another for this purpose while running before the wind⁴.

In the case of a fishing ground, even a sailing vessel has been held to blame for crossing the ground at excessive speed⁵, and power-driven vessels which choose to pass through a fleet of fishing vessels ought to regulate their speed so as to be able to keep out of the way of incumbered fishing vessels⁶.

In a river⁷, power-driven vessels must proceed only at a speed compatible with the safety of other vessels, and they have been held to blame for swamping other vessels by their wash⁸.

It is the duty of a power-driven vessel under the Collision Regulations 1972 and generally as a matter of good seamanship to slacken speed, or stop, or reverse, in order to avoid collision⁹.

(iii) Particular Classes of Vessels

771. Tug and tow.

When one vessel is in tow of another¹, the tug and tow owe certain duties towards each other and other vessels to prevent a collision. When, as is usual when a tug is towing barges² in a river, the tug controls the navigation and her master and crew are not the employees of the owners of the tow³, the duty of those on board the tow towards the tug appears to be substantially confined to following her manoeuvres⁴, and the tow is entitled to act on the belief that the tug will be reasonably well navigated⁵.

In the case of a ship in tow of a tug at sea or in a river⁶, it seems that, in the absence of special provisions in the contract of towage, the tow normally⁷ controls the navigation in order to avoid a divided command, and also because the pilot, if there is one, takes his station on the tow and the officers of the tow are usually of a higher class and better able to direct the navigation than those of the tug⁸.

The question of the relation between the tow and the tug is, however, one of fact, not law⁹. Even where the general direction is to be given by those on the tow, they are not constantly to interfere, and those in charge of the tug must use their judgment and not constantly expect orders from the tow¹⁰. When, however, there is a pilot on the tow, he is bound to give the tug proper directions and the tug is bound to obey them¹¹. If the tug does not get orders, she is responsible for the direction of the course¹². It is the duty of those on the tow¹³ to check the tug, and of those on the tug¹⁴ to warn the tow, if they know that the course which is set is dangerous. It is, in general, the duty of the tow to follow all the tug's manoeuvres¹⁵, and, when other vessels are likely to be met, to have the means ready of slipping or cutting the tow rope¹⁶.

772. Tug and tow manoeuvring for other vessels.

Many of the ordinary obligations of a power-driven vessel as regards manoeuvring for other vessels are shared by a tug and her tow, because to a great extent they partake of the nature of such a vessel¹. However, when it would have been the duty of an ordinary vessel, on approaching another vessel so as to involve risk of collision, to stop her engines, a tug with a ship in tow has been held excused for not stopping them when she was going extremely slowly². A tug with a vessel in tow may be subject to the general duty, applicable to power driven vessels underway, to keep out of the way of a sailing vessel³.

773. Sailing vessels.

One general rule as regards sailing vessels¹ is that, when a vessel is in stays or in the act of going about, she becomes for the time being unmanageable, and in this case it is the duty of another vessel which ought otherwise to have kept her course to execute any practical manoeuvre which would prevent collision². However, when a vessel goes about very near to another, and without giving any indication from which that other can be warned in time to prepare to give room, the damage may arise from the fault of those in charge of the vessel going about at such an improper time or place³.

When a vessel which ought to keep out of the way of another has thrown herself into stays, she ought still to take any reasonable steps to avoid collision⁴. When a sailing vessel beating up a river has gone as near one shore as she can safely go so as to avoid collision with vessels at anchor, she is entitled to go about without warning to other vessels; and it is the duty of a power-driven vessel coming up astern to know, from her position and the state of her sails, that she is going about, and to keep out of her way⁵. It is the duty of a sailing vessel following another to go about when the leading vessel is compelled to go about⁶.

A sailing vessel is entitled to wear instead of staying, but ought not to resort to the extraordinary operation of wearing unless she is sure that she has room to do so safely⁷.

A vessel hove-to⁸ should exercise more than ordinary care not to obstruct navigation⁹. Heaving-to in the track of ships and lying with helm lashed alee may be negligence¹⁰.

In manoeuvring for other vessels, it is the duty of a sailing vessel to use her sails to assist her helm when necessary¹¹.

774. Dangerous vessels.

If a ship is fitted with a latent instrument of danger, for example a ram on a warship, those who have control of it are bound to take all reasonable precautions to ensure that it shall not cause damage to other vessels, for example by giving notice of it. The obligation to give notice is, however, dependent on having a reasonable opportunity to do so; and there is no obligation to give it unless there is a reasonable probability of danger to the other vessel from want of it¹. Vessels carrying explosives or petroleum are subject to special byelaws while in most harbours or canals².

775. Dumb barges.

A dumb barge¹ in a river, in the absence of any rule of the road, regulation or custom to prevent it, may navigate on either side of the river², and in the deep water, even though she thereby obstructs larger vessels, having as much right as they to the advantage of a swift stream³. There is no duty imposed by statute on a dumb barge to get out of the way of a steamer; on the contrary, it is the steamer's duty to keep out of her way⁴.

In fog, a dumb barge which has no duty to carry an anchor and no means of bringing up is entitled to keep going until she comes into contact with something to which she can make fast⁵.

Whether a barge when not underway ought to have a man in charge of her depends on the circumstances. One important factor is whether it is usual in the circumstances to have a man in charge, but this is not conclusive⁶. The principle of the cases as regards barges, even when in dock, has been that it is negligence not to have a man in charge if there are dangers likely to be incurred which he could prevent, and which are so obvious that they ought to be prevented. The same principle applies wherever a barge is situated, whenever a man should be present on account of the run of the river or exposure of the barge⁷.

1 A dumb barge is a barge without sails or helm: The Barge T-429 [1957] 1 Lloyd's Rep 135 at 137. It is a barge which, with the exception of two small cabins at the ends, is altogether undecked and open for the reception of cargo: Helios A/S v Ekman & Co [1897] 2 QB 83 at 87, CA.

When a barge was fast by her head rope in dock, with her stern swinging out as an obstacle, but there was plenty of light, and a tug coming down the dock struck her, the absence of a bargeman was held to have nothing to do with the collision: The Hornet [1892] P 361, 7 Asp MLC 262, PC. (iv) Navigation in Rivers and Narrow Waters

776. Tide and current.

When an exceptional current or tide occurs at a place at distant intervals, but may occur at any time, a cautious seaman is bound to keep in view its possibility and be prepared for it; and, if those in charge of a vessel are caught unprepared by such a current because they think that there is no possibility of it, they will be at fault¹. Where an eddy noted in the charts prevented a vessel's rudder from acting, so that a collision occurred, but the necessity for using the wheel arose from the other vessel proceeding along the wrong side of a channel and suddenly coming out, the first vessel had a right to expect that the coast would be clear and was held not to blame².

Those who allege an unusual eddy as excusing them should give positive evidence of it; it is not enough to say that a strong eddy must have caught the vessel, otherwise she would have come round: The Polynésien [1910] P 28 at 31, 11 Asp MLC 354 at 357.

777. Waiting at a bend.

In a tidal river where there is a sharp bend, a power-driven vessel having the tide against her should ease her engines and wait under the point until another vessel coming with the tide has cleared her¹. Where a power-driven vessel coming up with the tide failed to answer her wheel at a sharp and dangerous bend in the river owing to the eddy, another such vessel coming down against the tide was held to blame for the collision, owing to her not having waited for the first vessel to clear the bend². A power-driven vessel proceeding down a difficult reach in a river against the flood tide in darkness and poor visibility ought to navigate with great care and great caution, because on a flood tide vessels will probably be met, and she has a special duty to keep a good look-out³.

778. Dredging up stern first.

A power-driven vessel proceeding up river with a strong tide and approaching a bend may be held to blame for not swinging round and dredging up stern first, according to local practice, in order to avoid excessive speed¹. Any vessel proceeding up river stern first at night should exhibit a stern light to down-coming vessels² and should keep a look-out up river³, and, if a power-driven vessel, should give some signal⁴ to prevent a mistake by down-coming vessels⁵. When a keel with her mast lowered, lashed to another keel, was driving up the deep water channel of a river on the flood tide, it was held that both keels should have dredged up, so that, by keeping the anchor on the ground, they could practically steer themselves and by letting the anchor hold could bring themselves to a standstill⁶.

779. Warping; smelling the ground.

If a vessel chooses to use a particular mode of going down river at a time which makes it difficult for her to escape collision, she must bear the consequences of a contingency to which she has exposed herself. Accordingly, when a steamship was warping down river against the flood, it was held to be no excuse that she was incapable of getting out of the way¹.

When those in charge of a vessel are navigating a river where they know there is a risk of her smelling the ground, they ought, if necessary by occasionally stopping their engines, to keep her so well under control as to be able to avoid collision with other vessels in case she smells the ground and fails to answer her wheel².

780. Crossing or turning in a river.

It is not uncommon to have a byelaw in a river to the effect that a vessel crossing must keep out of the way of other traffic¹. Such a rule does not mean that, if two vessels come into collision, the one which is crossing is necessarily to blame². The whole river belongs to everybody and nobody has an exclusive occupation of the road. If a vessel is properly endeavouring to get to the other side of the river as soon as practicable, and is doing that in a proper way, she is merely making a legitimate use of the river³. The crossing vessel may cross if there is the time and opportunity to do so without hampering another vessel, and the other vessel which sees a vessel about to cross must act reasonably with regard to her, and, if the crossing vessel wants a little more room to assist her in crossing, must give it.

The weight of responsibility for the operation at the outset is, however, principally on the vessel crossing, in that she must see whether she has room to cross⁴. Where one vessel about to cross is near a second vessel which must act for her if she crosses, those on the first vessel ought to make up their minds at once whether to cross or not and indicate their intention in an unmistakable way⁵. Similarly, a burden is sometimes placed on a vessel turning in a river either not to cause damage to other vessels⁶ but to complete her turn in a proper manner, using no more water than is necessary⁷, or, if a power-driven vessel, to give certain sound signals⁸. A vessel has been found at fault for trying to turn around too sharply across the course of another vessel in the Bosphorus⁹.

781. Anchoring in fairway.

A vessel is justified in anchoring¹ in the fairway² of a river if overtaken by a dense fog, but those in charge ought to move her as soon as they reasonably can³. It is improper for a vessel to anchor so that she lies athwart the fairway⁴, but, when a vessel is compelled by damage from a collision occasioned by no fault of hers to drop her anchor, it is not negligent to drop it in the fairway in what would otherwise have been an improper place⁵. It is not necessarily unlawful in fine weather to anchor in a river in the track of a ferry boat⁶. A vessel which lays out her anchor in the fairway of a navigable river, and thereby creates danger for other craft, is under a duty to mark the anchor by a buoy or otherwise⁷.

783. Incoming vessel to wait for outgoing.

When an incoming and an outgoing vessel are approaching the entrance to a dock or harbour¹ so as to reach it at about the same time, and there is not room for them to pass each other there, it is the ordinary rule that the incoming vessel should wait to enter until the outgoing vessel has got clear². Where a vessel is coming out of dock to turn up or down river, another vessel is entitled to take for granted that she will resort to all the means proper for the purpose; and, if a vessel, for example by not running up her jib, fails to take such means, and so causes a collision, she is to blame for it³.

784. Obeying orders of dock master or harbour master.

It is the duty of a harbour master or dock master¹ to consider the interests of all the shipping under his care, and he is entitled to order a vessel to move from her berth if a second vessel, which is disabled, absolutely requires the protection of this berth, while the first vessel can with care do without it, even if in the interests of the first vessel alone to move would be injudicious². The harbour master is under a duty to give warning to those in charge of a vessel of a concealed danger, the existence of which they cannot reasonably be expected to know³. A dock master has authority to give directions to a vessel which is coming into dock⁴, and to order a ship to leave the premises of the dock authority⁵. The primary duty of those in charge of a vessel is obedience to the orders of the harbour master or dock master; it is not their duty in any doubtful case to consider whether the order is right or wrong. If however, it is certain that a disaster will happen by obeying an order, then, and then only, ought it to be disobeyed⁶.

(5) NEGLIGENCE CAUSING DAMAGE; FAULT

(i) Negligence Causing Damage

785. Cause of action.

The ordinary case of negligence causing damage by collision is that of one vessel coming into collision with another vessel. In these circumstances, in order to establish a right of action against the owner of a vessel, the court must decide that:

- 1021 (1) there was a collision;
- 1022 (2) damage was done by it; and
- 1023 (3) the collision or damage was caused wholly or in part by the fault of the owner or a person for whose act or omission he is responsible¹.

Impact of two vessels without damage gives no right of action², but, if the defendant's negligence has caused the damage, although not the collision, he will be at least partly at fault³. Impact and damage without fault on the part of those in charge of a vessel give no right of action in rem against the vessel⁴, and the damage is then either an inevitable accident or is due to the fault of the other party or some other person⁵.

Special arrangements have been made⁶ as regards the settlement of claims in respect of death or personal injury in connection with the operation of vessels of visiting forces in the United Kingdom or its territorial waters⁷.

786. Burden of proof.

In the case of collision between vessels, the burden of proof usually at first rests on the claimant¹, even if the defendant has broken one of the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972², or even if he alleges inevitable accident³ or admits that he is partly at fault⁴.

Where the evidence on both sides is nicely balanced and conflicting, the court will be guided by the probabilities of the cases set up⁵. The reasonable way to do so is to analyse the facts in order to ascertain the principal subject of inquiry on which the case hinges, and to endeavour to arrive at a satisfactory conclusion as to the testimony upon that matter⁶.

The claimant cannot succeed, however, if the case is left in doubt⁷, and it is for him to adduce preponderating evidence⁸. By proving certain circumstances, the claimant may shift the burden of proof on to the defendant⁹.

Thus, where a vessel underway in daylight and clear weather runs down a vessel at anchor, the burden, when those facts are admitted or proved, is on the owners of the vessel underway to prove they were not at fault¹⁰.

In a similar case at night, the owner of the vessel at anchor establishes a prima facie case when he has shown that his vessel had a proper light¹¹.

It is prima facie evidence of negligence for a vessel to drag her anchor or break adrift from her moorings¹² and for a barge to sink and get into such a position that a steamer alongside her sits on her¹³. Where, on the undisputed evidence of the circumstances leading up to a collision, a prima facie case of negligence is made out against a ship, it is not sufficient rebuttal to show that her steering gear jammed. It must be shown that the jamming could not have been avoided by the exercise of reasonable care and skill, or at any rate that all reasonable care and skill was used to prevent the jamming and that the gear might reasonably have jammed from a cause which could not have been prevented by such care and skill¹⁴.

The defendant in a collision case is usually bound to prove those facts which are peculiarly or exclusively within his knowledge¹⁵.

The court generally follows ascertained lines in drawing conclusions as to testimony in collision cases. When the certain facts of a case, for example weather, description of vessels, courses, time, and place, which are admitted or indisputably proved, are ascertained, the doubtful facts are to be fitted in with them as far as possible¹. It is a rule in collision cases not to attribute perjury, if it is possible to avoid doing so². Although on nautical points the court is assisted by the opinion and advice of nautical assessors³ whose duty it is to be guided in matters of nautical experience by their own knowledge⁴, the court is not bound to take the advice of its nautical assessors but must make up its own mind on questions of nautical skill and seamanship⁵.

788. Negligence in construction, equipment or manning.

The simplest case of negligence on the part of an owner of a vessel causing damage by collision is negligence in constructing or equipping or manning her¹. Vessels have been held to blame for a collision owing to their not being built or equipped or loaded with reasonable care². As regards the officers of a ship, certificates are required in some cases for the master, mates, engineers and radio officers³. The number of hands required depends on circumstances. There ought to be a sufficient crew on board even in harbour to protect a ship against the ordinary incidents of peril which a competent seaman would foresee⁴.

1 As to the incidence of liability see PARA 808 et seq.

2 Eg in the case of a vessel not safely navigable owing to her improper trim (The Argo (1859) Sw 462), or not having a proper mast to carry her light (The Hironnelle (1905) 22 TLR 146, CA) or having defective steering gear (see PARA 766), although this will be excused if the defect was consistent with the exercise of all reasonable care and skill to prevent defects (see PARA 817). Where breakdowns have occurred, it is negligent to omit regular checks on equipment: The Louis Sheid [1958] 1 Lloyd's Rep 606 at 615. A vessel may be to blame for having too light an anchor (The Massachusetts (1842) 1 Wm Rob 371) or no mechanical foghorn (The Love Bird (1881) 6 PD 80, 4 Asp MLC 427). 789. Negligence in navigation.

Negligence in navigation, as regards other vessels, is failure to exercise that attention and vigilance which is needed for their security¹, and which, if neglected so as to become, however unintentionally, the cause of damage to a vessel, amounts to a breach of duty, giving a right of action². In such circumstances negligence is failure to exercise reasonable care and reasonable skill³, reasonable care being sometimes more than ordinary care, and reasonable skill being possibly in an emergency less than ordinary skill⁴. Negligence in navigation includes not only failure to exercise reasonable care and reasonable skill in the usual sense, but also failure to exercise reasonable foresight⁵ and ordinary nerve⁶.

790. Meaning of 'reasonable care' and 'reasonable skill'.

'Reasonable care' and 'reasonable skill' mean as a rule ordinary care and ordinary skill¹. Where the circumstances of the case are such as often occur, it is important to see whether it is or is not usual to do the thing alleged to have been neglected, for example to have a man in charge of a barge in dock². The degree of care required, however, varies according to the circumstances, and more than ordinary care is sometimes required. For example, there is a duty to take special precautions when using a delicate instrument³.

'Ordinary skill' means the skill which would ordinarily be shown by a seaman of competent skill and experience in the circumstances⁴. Failure to do the very best thing, or to show extraordinary skill or presence of mind, does not create a right of action⁵.

1 Negligence is thus usually described as failure to exercise ordinary care and skill. As to the standard of care in negligence generally see NEGLIGENCE vol 78 (2010) PARAS 21-23.

791. Degree of skill required in sudden difficulty.

When one vessel by a wrongful act suddenly puts another in a difficulty, the same amount of skill is not to be expected from the other vessel as in other circumstances¹. In such a case, a mistake by the other vessel in the agony of collision is not to be held to have in any way caused it². It is not enough in such circumstances to show an act or omission by the officer in charge of the other vessel by reason of which the collision actually occurred³. His conduct is entitled to favourable consideration⁴.

A person may not do the right thing, and may even do the wrong thing, and yet not be guilty of neglect of his duty, which is not absolutely to do right at all events, but only to take reasonable care and use reasonable skill⁵. When a person is suddenly and without warning thrown into a critical position, due allowance must be made for this, but not too much⁶.

So, when a sudden change of circumstances takes place which brings one of the rules contained in the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972⁷ into operation, even though the thing prescribed is not done by the person in charge, yet the rule can hardly be said to be infringed by him until he knows or ought to have known of the change of circumstances⁸. The officer in charge of a vessel placed suddenly in a difficulty by the fault of another vessel must have time (although it may be a very short time) for thought⁹. When vessels have to manoeuvre for one another, and one hails the other to alter her wheel, it appears that she cannot complain of the alteration¹⁰; or, if the hail is not to alter the wheel, it becomes the duty of the hailing vessel, even if not so before, to take action to avoid the other vessel¹¹.

792. Collateral negligence immaterial.

It is not necessarily negligent to risk doing damage to another vessel intentionally. Thus, persons have been held justified in risking damage to one vessel by launching another, in order to avoid the more serious risk to life and property by postponement¹. Moreover, the breach of duty must be connected with the damage as cause and effect to afford the right of action². For example, even though a vessel lying at a pontoon is a trespasser, her owners will not be liable for damage done by her to the pontoon owing to another vessel wrongly striking her³. The nature of the accident and what the neglect is should be looked at, and it must be proved⁴ that the actual transgression was to some extent the cause of the accident, for, even if blame is attributable to an act, one must guard against assuming that it was, therefore, the cause of the accident⁵, and not merely collateral negligence. The defendant is, however, responsible for the reasonably foreseeable consequences of his negligence⁶, both on the navigation of his own vessel and of other vessels⁷.

There is no difference between the rules of the Court of Admiralty and the rules of courts of common law as to what amounts to negligence causing damage by collision¹, but there are differences in the application of the rules because of the distinction between ships and land vehicles in their power to stop and manoeuvre and the distance over which a look-out must be kept².

In addition to the ordinary case of collision between two vessels¹, there are cases of negligence or fault on the part of an owner of a vessel or his employees² causing damage by the vessel colliding with, or some part of it striking, property other than a vessel, for example a pier³, or a person who is not on board a vessel⁴.

795. Damage to another vessel without collision.

There are cases where, by the fault of those in charge of a vessel, damage is done to another vessel without coming into collision with her, as, for example by causing a collision between her and a third vessel¹, or compelling her to go out of the fairway and run aground², or negligently dragging down on her so as to compel her to slip her anchor and chain and put to sea to avoid collision³.

(ii) Determination of Liability when Both Parties at Fault

796. Principles of liability.

When there is fault or negligence attributable to the owners of both vessels concerned in a collision¹:

- 1024 (1) if one party's fault has not even partly caused the damage² by collision, then, if he is the claimant, he can recover in full for the damage to his vessel caused by the other party, and, if he is the defendant, he is not liable for the damage to the other vessel³;
- 1025 (2) if the fault of each party has partly caused⁴ the damage by the collision, both vessels are to blame, and each party is liable to make good the damage of the other party in proportion to the degree in which his vessel was in fault⁵;
- 1026 (3) if one party's fault has solely caused the damage by collision, then, if he is the claimant, he cannot recover for the damage to his vessel and, if he is the defendant, he is liable for the whole of the damage to the other vessel⁶.

1 The principles stated in the text apply mutatis mutandis where more than two vessels are concerned: cf PARA 803. As to the incidence of liability see PARA 808 et seq.

2 Negligence which renders a party liable as defendant (or affects his right to recover in full if claimant) is sometimes referred to as negligence which 'directly causes' or 'directly contributes' to the damage: see eg Tuff v Warman (1857) 2 CBNS 740 at 743; The Bernina (2) (1887) 12 PD 58 at 61-63, 6 Asp MLC 75 at 77, 78, CA. As to the measure of damages see PARA 822 et seq.

4 It is possible that each party may be negligent, and yet that the acts of negligence may be too trivial or indirect to be held to be a cause of the damage, which will then, so far as these parties are concerned, be an inevitable accident: see PARAS 817, 818.

797. Negligence causing damage.

Whether one or more negligent acts have caused or partly caused certain damage by collision is generally not a question of law but a question of fact¹. Thus, when the particular events have been ascertained, the conclusion that the act was or was not the cause or part cause of the damage should be drawn according to the general good sense of ordinary persons².

798. Simultaneous negligence.

Where both vessels have been simultaneously negligent at or up to the last moment before the collision, the usual question is whether the act of negligence on each side was in itself so substantial¹ and so related² to the damage by the collision as to amount to a cause of it³. When both vessels have thus been simultaneously negligent at or up to the last moment, and when the negligent act of each is substantial and directly related to the collision damage, each vessel is held to have partly caused the damage, and the judgment is that both are to blame⁴.

AVOIDANCE OF COLLISIONS/(5) NEGLIGENCE CAUSING DAMAGE; FAULT/(ii) Determination of Liability when Both Parties at Fault/799. Antecedent and subsequent negligence.

799. Antecedent and subsequent negligence.

Where, as in a large number of collisions at sea¹, one vessel has been negligent at the last moment before collision and the other vessel's negligence has taken place before that, the decision as to whether each act was or was not a cause of the collision is more difficult².

It must be considered how far the subsequent act should be treated as connected with or independent of the antecedent act, and the importance of each has to be contrasted in connection with the resulting damage³. Where a clear line can be drawn, the subsequent negligence is the only one to look to⁴. If one party has actually observed the negligence of the other party or could by reasonable care have become aware of it, and could by reasonable care⁵ have avoided causing damage, he is solely responsible for the damage⁶. It is a question of fact in each case whether the negligence of the initial wrongdoer could have been avoided by the other party⁷.

There may, however, be cases where the two acts of negligence come so closely together, and the second act is so much mixed up with the state of things brought about by the first act, that the party secondly negligent, while not held free from blame, may invoke the prior negligence as being part of the cause of the collision so as to make it a case of contribution⁸; and there may be cases where the collision was caused wholly by the antecedent negligence, the subsequent negligence being then too slight a factor to be reckoned as a cause⁹.

2 As to the burden of proof in collision cases see PARA 786.

3 When there has been antecedent and subsequent negligence, it will not be sufficient, in order to prove that the other party partly caused the damage, to show that, if he in some earlier stage of navigation had done something which he ought to have done, a different situation would have resulted: see Spaight v Tedcastle (1881) 6 App Cas 217 at 219, 4 Asp MLC 406 at 407, HL, per Lord Selborne LC.

(iii) Rule of Division of Loss in Proportion to Fault

800. Rule as to division of loss.

Where, by the fault¹ of two or more ships², damage or loss is caused to one or more of those ships, to their cargoes or freight³ or to any property on board, the liability⁴ to make good the damage or loss is in proportion to the degree in which each ship was in fault⁵. If, in any such case, having regard to all the circumstances, it is not possible to establish different degrees of fault, the liability must be apportioned equally⁶.

Nothing in the above provisions:

- 1027 (1) operates so as to render any ship liable for any loss or damage to which the fault of the ship has not contributed⁷;
- 1028 (2) affects the liability of any person under a contract of carriage⁸ or any contract, or is to be construed as imposing any liability upon any person from which he is exempted by any contract or any provision of law, or as affecting the right of any person to limit his liability in the manner provided by law⁹.

1 The fact that the owners of one ship do not allege any fault against the other is immaterial if the court finds on the evidence that the fault existed: The Mimosa [1944] WN 74. As to the determination of liability see PARAS 796-799.

2 As to the meaning of 'ship' see PARA 229.

3 For these purposes, 'freight' includes passage money and hire: Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 187(6).

4 The Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 187 applies to persons other than the owners of a ship who are responsible for the fault of the ships, as well as to the owners of a ship; and, where, by virtue of any charter or demise, or for any other reason, the owners are not responsible for the navigation and management of the ship, s 187 applies to the charterers or other persons for the time being so responsible instead of the owners: s 187(3).

5 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 187(1).

'Damage' and 'loss' include the plural, and liability for different heads of damage arising from the same event may be apportioned on different bases: Carlsholm (Owners) v Calliope (Owners), The Calliope [1970] P 172 at 182, [1970] 1 All ER 624 at 638, [1970] 1 Lloyd's Rep 84 at 99 per Brandon J. References to damage or loss caused by the fault of a ship include references to any salvage or other expenses, consequent upon that fault, recoverable at law by way of damages: Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 187(7). As to other expenses which are recoverable see The Napier Star [1939] P 330, 64 Ll L Rep 197 (costs in defending claims for loss of life and personal injuries); and see PARA 828 et seq. The Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 187 is not confined to damage by collision: cf The Batavier III (1925) 134 LT 155, 16 Asp MLC 563 (damage by swell caused by excessive speed). The Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 187 has, however, no application to a case in which a vessel strikes and damages a structure on land: cf Gartland Steamship Co and Lablanc v R [1960] 1 Lloyd's Rep 388 (Can SC); and see The Rockabill [1937] P 93, [1937] 1 All ER 191, 56 Ll L Rep 149, CA. As to rights of cargo owners and passengers see PARA 805. As to liability for damage done to harbours see PORTS AND HARBOURS vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 754.

The words 'in which each ship was in fault' must be construed as meaning 'in which each ship was at fault, causing or contributing to the collision': The Peter Benoit (1915) 84 LJP 87, CA (affd 13 Asp MLC 203, 114 LT 147, HL); SS Haugland (Owners) v SS Karamea (Owners) [1922] 1 AC 68 at 71, 15 Asp MLC 430 at 431, HL; Miraflores (Owners) v George Livanos (Owners) [1967] 1 AC 826, [1967] 1 All ER 672, [1967] 1 Lloyd's Rep 191, HL (where a collision between two ships partly caused the grounding of a third, and the liability of each vessel had to be assessed by comparison of her fault with the fault of each of the other vessels considered separately); The Eglantine, Credo and Inez [1990] 2 Lloyd's Rep 390, CA.

There is, however, no rule or principle, applicable to collision cases or analogous types of case in the Admiralty Court where there was no counterclaim (see PARA 204 note 16), that a claimant who was at fault under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 187(1), (2) should recover its costs in proportion to the liability to the defendant: Krysia Maritime Inc v Intership Ltd [2008] EWHC 1880 (Admlty), [2008] All ER (D) 12 (Aug). As to costs in Admiralty proceedings generally see PARA 204; and as to the time limit for proceedings to enforce a claim or lien against a ship or her owners in respect of damage or loss caused see PARA 841.

AVOIDANCE OF COLLISIONS/(5) NEGLIGENCE CAUSING DAMAGE; FAULT/(iii) Rule of Division of Loss in Proportion to Fault/801. Working out of division of loss between shipowners.

801. Working out of division of loss between shipowners.

In working out the division of loss under the statutory provision regarding apportionment of liability¹, all the damages caused to the owner² of each ship which he has to share with the owner of the other ship have first to be ascertained³.

When the divisible damages of the first owner have been thus ascertained, the liability of the second owner to make good his proportion of these first damages is only a provisional liability according to established principles, and it is not a debt due from him to the first owner⁴. The divisible damages of the second owner must also be ascertained. Then the proportion of the first damages due from the second owner has to be set against the proportion of the second damages due from the first owner, and the smaller sum has to be deducted from the larger, and the balance is a debt due from one owner to the other. There is only one liability, and there can be only one payment⁵. Thus, in the simple case of both ships being found equally to blame, the owner who has suffered the greater damages is entitled to receive from the second owner half those damages, less half the damages which the second owner has sustained⁶.

1 le the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 187 (see PARA 800). As to the determination of liability see PARA 796 et seq.

2 As to the meaning of 'owner' for these purposes see PARA 800 note 4.

3 As to the mode of ascertainment see PARA 110 et seq. The divisible damages include damages or loss caused to his vessel or her cargo or freight, passage money or hire and also any salvage or other expenses consequent on the fault of his vessel recoverable from him by way of damages: see PARA 800.

4 So the second owner could not recover this sum from his insurers under a 'running down clause' not providing for settlement on the principle of cross-liabilities: see London Steamship Owners' Insurance Co v Grampian Steamship Co (1890) 24 QBD 663, 6 Asp MLC 506, CA.

802. Limitation of liability.

Either owner can proceed to limit¹ his liability², and pay into court the sum due from him in case of such limitation. In such a case the owner of the ship who is entitled to receive the larger payment towards his damages, and to whom, therefore, a balance is due, can prove against the fund for the amount of the balance³.

803. More than two ships in fault.

Under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995, where more than two ships have been in collision, and they have all been in fault, the liability to make good the damage or loss will be distributed among them in proportion to the degree in which each ship was in fault¹. Thus, when a tug, tow and third vessel are all in fault for a collision between any two of them, each vessel must normally be allotted its own proportion of the damages². It may be a great disadvantage to one vessel in such a case to allow judgment to go by default in an action by one of the others³.

804. Third innocent vessel.

Where, by the fault of two vessels, a collision is caused between one of them and a third innocent vessel, the statutory provision as to division of liability¹ does not directly² apply to an action by the owners of the innocent vessel against either or both of the wrong-doing vessels for the full amount of their damages³.

The same rule existed before the Maritime Conventions Act 1911 (repealed): see Devonshire (Owners) v Barge Leslie (Owners) [1912] AC 634, 12 Asp MLC 210. It appears that, according to the International Convention for the Unification of Certain Rules of Law respecting Collisions (Brussels, 23 September 1910; TS 4 (1913); Cd 6677) art 4, it was provided that even to innocent third parties a vessel was only to be liable in proportion to the degree in which she was in fault: see Roscoe and Robertson's Maritime Conventions Act 1911 p 8. The Maritime Conventions Act 1911 (repealed) was passed to enable this Convention to be carried into effect, but in the above respect it appears not to have done so. In The Cairnbahn, the only collision was between the innocent vessel and one of the wrongdoing vessels, but the same rule applies if the collision was the result of a collision between the two wrong-doing vessels. As to the law on this point before the Maritime Conventions Act 1911 (repealed) see The Frankland [1901] P 161, 9 Asp MLC 196. See further The Umona [1914] P 141, 12 Asp MLC 527 (where in an action by a tow which had been damaged owing to the joint negligence of the tug and a third vessel, both of which were found to blame, it was held that the tow was not an innocent tow, as the owners of the tug were at the time of the collision, as bailees for hire, the owners of the tow). AVOIDANCE OF COLLISIONS/(5) NEGLIGENCE CAUSING DAMAGE; FAULT/(iii) Rule of Division of Loss in Proportion to Fault/805. Rights of cargo owners and others.

805. Rights of cargo owners and others.

Where cargo in one vessel is damaged by a collision with another vessel by the fault of both of them¹, the cargo owner is by statute only entitled to recover in tort from each vessel a proportion of his loss corresponding to the degree to which that vessel was to blame for the collision². It would seem that he is entitled to recover in full in contract against the owner of the vessel carrying his cargo, but any right of recovery against that owner may be qualified by the contract of carriage contained, for example, in the charterparty or bill of lading³.

It seems that in similar circumstances the right of the master or a member of the crew to recover damages for lost effects⁴ or the right of a passenger to recover his passage money⁵ or to recover for damage or loss of luggage⁶ against the owner of the other vessel is similarly limited by the statutory provision as to division of loss⁷ where the claim is in tort. The right of a passenger to recover from the owner of the vessel by which he is sailing may be qualified by his contract⁸.

Where loss of life or personal injuries are suffered by any person on board a ship¹ owing to the fault of that ship and of any other ship or ships, the liability of the owners² of the ships is joint and several³.

However, nothing in these provisions is to be construed as depriving any person of any right of defence on which he might otherwise have relied in an action brought against him by the person injured, or any person or persons entitled to sue in respect of such loss of life, or affects the right of any person to limit his liability in the manner provided by law⁴.

AVOIDANCE OF COLLISIONS/(5) NEGLIGENCE CAUSING DAMAGE; FAULT/(iii) Rule of Division of Loss in Proportion to Fault/807. Loss of life or personal injuries; right of contribution.

807. Loss of life or personal injuries; right of contribution.

Where loss of life or personal injuries are suffered by any person on board a ship¹ owing to the fault of that ship and any other ship or ships, and a proportion of the damages is recovered against the owners² of one of the ships which exceeds the proportion in which the ship was in fault, they may recover by way of contribution the amount of the excess from the owners of the other ship or ships to the extent to which those ships were respectively in fault³.

In addition to any other remedy provided by law, the persons entitled to any contribution recoverable under these provisions have, for the purposes of recovering it, the same rights and powers as the persons entitled to sue for damages in the first instance⁴.

Nothing in these provisions authorises the recovery of any amount which could not, by reason of any statutory or contractual limitation of, or exemption from, liability, or which could not for any other reason, have been recovered in the first instance as damages by the persons entitled to sue therefor⁵.

When by the fault of two vessels a collision is caused between one of them and a third innocent vessel, the owner of one of the two vessels in fault who has been compelled to pay damages in full to the innocent vessel can recover against the owner of the other vessel in fault a proportion, not only of the damage to his own vessel, but also of the damages which he has paid to the owner of the innocent vessel⁶, but he cannot recover any proportion of the costs of unsuccessfully disputing his liability to the owner of the innocent vessel⁷.

2 The Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 189 applies to persons other than the owners of a ship who are responsible for the fault of the ships, as well as to the owners of a ship; and, where, by virtue of any charter or demise, or for any other reason, the owners are not responsible for the navigation and management of the ship, s 189 applies to the charterers or other persons for the time being so responsible instead of the owners: see s 187(3), applied by s 189(2).

809. Vicarious liability of owner.

In accordance with the general principles of employment law, the owner of a ship is liable for damage caused by the negligence of his employees¹ on board the ship when they are acting within the scope of their employment². If there is no evidence as to who is the employer of the person in charge of a ship, it seems that the burden is on the owner to show that the person in charge was not his employee³.

The liability of the owner as a rule, in Admiralty as at common law, rests on his responsibility for the acts of his employees and agents, and does not depend on the ownership of the vessel⁴. In some cases, however, the legislature has imposed a liability on the owner of a ship as owner for damage done by her⁵.

1 As to the liability of an owner for the negligence of a compulsory pilot see PARA 579.

2 As to the liability of an employer to third persons for the torts of his employee see TORT vol 45(2) (Reissue) PARA 802. Owners were not liable for acts held to have been committed outside the course of their employee's employment in The Druid (1842) 1 Wm Rob 391 (where a tug master, authorised to demand dues for towing, maliciously detained and damaged a ship whose master refused to pay dues); The Ida (1860) Lush 6 (where a master cast off the moorings of another vessel in order to move his own vessel, the actual decision turning on questions of jurisdiction); cf M'Gee v Anderson (1895) 22 R 274; Currie v M'Knight [1897] AC 97, 8 Asp MLC 193, HL (where the master of one vessel cut the moorings of another in order to save his own vessel in gale, and the House of Lords, without considering the correctness of the decision of the Scottish court that the owners of the first-mentioned vessel were liable for the master's act, held that no maritime lien attached to that vessel as she was not the instrument of mischief) (see PARA 1017). A question may arise whether the general or temporary employer of an employee is liable for the employee's act: see eg Martin v Temperley (1843) 4 QB 298 (where the owner was liable for the act of a hired waterman); The Louise (1901) 18 TLR 19, DC (where a gang moving a ship in a dock were held to be the employees of the dock company). 810. Liability of master.

The master is liable for damage arising from his own negligence¹ or breach of contract made with the owner of cargo shipped on his vessel². 811. Chartered ship.

If a vessel while on charter¹ collides with another vessel and causes damage, the question whether the charterer or the owner is liable depends on whether the person guilty of the negligence which caused the collision² was, when so guilty, the employee or agent of the charterer or of the owner³.

The ratio decidendi in cases in which vessels in the hands of charterers have been held liable in actions in rem is that the charterers are considered as 'pro hac vice' owners⁴.

812. Collision between tug and tow.

In case of a collision between a tug and her tow causing damage¹, a liability arises in favour of the one and against the other if the collision is due to the other not fulfilling her duties under the contract of towage².

In the absence of agreement to the contrary³, there is in a contract of towage an implied warranty by the owners of the tug that she is fit for her service⁴. It is also implied that her crew, tackle and equipment will be equal to the work to be accomplished in the weather and other circumstances reasonably to be expected, and that reasonable skill, care and energy will be shown in accomplishing the work⁵.

Further, it is implied that neither party will negligently create unnecessary risk to the other or increase any risk incidental to the service⁶. The tug owners are not responsible if the towing becomes impossible through no fault of theirs⁷; nor can they recover compensation from the owners of the tow for damage incurred by the tug owing to dangerous circumstances without misconduct of the tow⁸. The owners of the tow are liable for damage arising to the tug from improper orders of the tow, for example to get connection⁹.

813. Collision of tug or tow with a third vessel.

In case of a collision with a third vessel, the owners of the tug and the tow are normally responsible for damage caused by their own negligence or the negligent navigation of their respective vessels¹. Where there have been defects in equipping or planning the operation, both the persons responsible for the care of the tow and the owners of the tug may share responsibility². The owners of the tow are responsible, to the exclusion of the tug owners, for injury caused to third persons by the negligence of the tug only if the relation of employer and employee in fact exists between the owners of the tow and those in charge of the tug in relation to the negligent act or omission complained of³.

As against third persons, the question whether those in charge of the tug are the employees of the owners of the tow is not concluded by the terms of the contract of towage, but depends⁴ on who has control of the manner in which the work of the tug is done in relation to the relevant act or omission⁵.

Where the general control of navigation is in the tow, although the motive power is in the tug, the owners of the tow are liable for an act or omission by the tug within the scope of the general control of the pilot or officer in charge of the tow⁶, but are not normally liable for negligence by the tug in a matter falling outside such control and within the discretion of the tug master, such as the detail of a manoeuvre of the tug⁷. Where the control of navigation is in the tug⁸, the owners of the tow are not normally liable to third persons for the negligence of the tug⁹ unless the tug and tow are in the same ownership¹⁰.

Certain cases in which it was suggested that the owners of the tow were liable for the negligence of the tug in all cases (see eg The Ticonderoga (1857) Sw 215) or that the owners of the tow and the owners of the tug might both be liable for the tug's negligence merely on the ground that the relationship of employer and employee existed between tow and tug (see The Englishman and The Australia [1894] P 239, 7 Asp MLC 603), can no longer be considered authoritative.

814. Vessel acting under orders of harbour or dock master.

When a collision is caused by those on board a vessel following the orders of a harbour master or dock master, given within the limits of his jurisdiction¹, the owner of the ship is not normally liable for the damage caused by the collision². The orders of such an official have, however, to be executed with care, and, whether the order is properly given or not, the shipowner will be liable in the event of negligence on the part of the master or crew³. An official who has given a negligent order is personally liable for the damage resulting from it. The harbour or dock authority is also in general liable if the harbour master or dock master giving the order gave it within the scope of his authority⁴. Harbour authorities are entitled in certain circumstances to limit their liability⁵.

When one of Her Majesty's ships by the negligence of the person in charge of her collides with another vessel, causing damage¹, the person whose negligence caused the collision is liable for the damage resulting from his negligence, but his superior officers are not liable unless they were privy to the negligence².

An action in personam generally lies against the Crown for damage caused by the negligence of those in charge of a Crown ship³, but proceedings in rem do not lie against a Crown ship⁴.

Foreign and Commonwealth states are immune from proceedings in rem against their ships⁵, unless they are in use for commercial purposes⁶. Vessels, other than commercial vessels⁷, owned by a foreign state are also immune from arrest⁸.

816. Collision with wreck.

Where a wreck is a danger to navigation, the owner or person in charge of it is under a duty¹ to mark or light the wreck for the protection of other shipping and may be liable in negligence² for damage consequent on his failure to take reasonable care to do so³.

If, however, a conservancy or harbour or other authority having power to light the wreck has been sufficiently notified of the wreck, and has undertaken the duty of marking and lighting it, the fact that the owner does not ensure that it is lighted is not negligence on his part⁴. It seems that, if an owner of a wreck properly abandons it or transfers possession and control of it to another person, any subsequent failure to mark or light the wreck is not negligence on his part⁵.

If the wreck is not abandoned either to the harbour authority or otherwise, and the owner himself employs a contractor to mark the position of the wreck or raise it, and the contractor acts negligently in marking or in raising it so as to cause damage, the owner is liable for the damage⁶.

1 See White v Crisp (1854) 10 Exch 312 (vessel foundered in Bristol Channel).

2 Negligence after the sinking of the wreck, with which the text is concerned, must be distinguished from negligence causing the sinking which may lead to responsibility to a harbour or other authority for damage or for expenses of removal of the wreck: see PARAS 1008-1009; and PORTS AND HARBOURS vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 691.

(ii) Inevitable Accident

817. Defence of inevitable accident.

A collision is said to be the result of an inevitable accident if it could not have been prevented by the exercise of reasonable care and ordinary skill¹.

Where the defendant has prima facie caused the collision, the burden is on him to prove that the collision was an inevitable accident². To prove it, he must show that the occurrence of the accident was consistent with the exercise on his part of reasonable care and skill, and that he exercised reasonable care and skill³. It is no excuse for a master that he could not prevent the accident when it occurred, if he neglected to use precautionary measures which would have rendered the accident less probable⁴.

The beneficial or registered owners of the damaged ship may sue for the damage done to her¹, and so also may the bailees of a ship². The owners of the damaged ship may also sue for damage done to the cargo, as they are bailees of her³. If there is any doubt as to who is entitled to receive the damages, they should be paid into the Admiralty Registry, and the parties rightly claiming them can then establish their right⁴.

820. Owners of cargo or other property in ship.

Owners of cargo and other property are entitled to sue the owners of the vessel carrying it for breach of contract to carry it safely¹, or for damage caused to it by negligence², although their right to do so is subject to any valid term in the contract of carriage or statutory provision which abrogates or qualifies the right³. Cargo owners and others can also as a rule recover against the owners of a vessel whose negligent navigation has caused a collision between her and the vessel carrying the cargo⁴, although their right to recover where both vessels were at fault is limited⁵.

821. Personal injuries or death.

Persons on board a vessel may at common law sue the owners of the vessel carrying them or another vessel for personal injuries arising from a collision caused by the negligence of those for whom the owners were responsible¹.

By statute, the personal representatives of an innocent person on board a vessel whose death was caused by a collision due to the fault of that vessel or another vessel may sue the owner of the vessel at fault to recover damages². The right of action against a vessel other than that which carried the person who suffered injury or death exists even though the vessel which carried him was also at fault³, and in such a case the liability of the owners of the vessels is joint and several⁴. In the case of passengers, however, the rights of action against the owners of the vessel which carried them may depend on the terms of their contract⁵.

(ii) Measure of Damages

822. General principles.

Subject to the statutory provisions as to limitation of liability¹ and certain other exceptions², the fundamental principle governing the measure of damages is the payment of full compensation³. The injured party is entitled to be put, as far as practicable, into the same condition as if the injury had not been suffered. He is to have the full value of the property lost⁴. The wrongdoer is, however, it seems, liable only for such damage as a reasonable person should have foreseen as the consequence of the wrongful act⁵. The injured party is bound to prove that he has sustained the loss which he alleges, and he must supply the means for ascertaining its amount⁶. If the injured party can reasonably mitigate the damage done by the collision, he is bound ordinarily to do so⁷.

1 As to which see PARA 1042 et seq.

2 Eg the rule that, where two ships are each to blame for the collision, the innocent owner of cargo on one vessel can recover from the owner of the other vessel only in proportion to the fault of that vessel: see PARA 805.

823. Nature of indemnity.

If the settlement of the indemnification is attended with any difficulty, the party at fault must, in certain circumstances, bear the inconvenience¹. The injured party may derive a greater benefit than indemnification; for example, in case of repairs and supply of new articles, the wrongdoer, unlike the insurer, is not entitled to a deduction of one-third new for old².

824. Burden of proof.

The burden is always on the claimant who claims damages to prove that the damage was caused by the negligence of the defendant¹. When the claimant has made out a prima facie case that the damage claimed is occasioned by the collision, the burden of proof then shifts to the defendant to show that the damage was not so occasioned, for example by showing that it is to be attributable to another or a concurrent cause for which the claimant is responsible².

825. Damages in case of total loss.

If a vessel is totally lost by the collision, the measure of damages is the value of the vessel to her owners as a going concern at the time and place of the loss, and, in assessing that value, regard must be had to her pending engagements, whether profitable or unprofitable¹. If the vessel was not under a profitable contract, the shipowner is normally entitled to the market value of the vessel at the time when and at the place where she was sunk², and interest on this until payment³. If the vessel was earning freight, the owner is entitled to the probable value of the ship at the end of her voyage, and of the freight which she would have earned on that voyage and under any further engagements contracted for, subject to proper allowances⁴. When a vessel is lost while proceeding in ballast to a loading port under a charterparty, the damages are measured in the same way⁵. If she was not a freight-earning vessel but was under other profitable contract, the owner is entitled to her value as a profit-earning vessel at the time and place of her loss⁶.

826. Valuation in absence of market value.

In the absence of a market value for a vessel, the test is what she was fairly worth to her owners as a going concern at the time and place of the loss¹. The opinion of competent persons who knew the vessel is the best evidence of her value, but the evidence of professional valuers is also of weight. Elements to be considered in such a valuation are the original cost of the vessel, her age, her condition, the profits she earned² and the market price of similar vessels.

827. Loss after collision.

There is no presumption of law that damage suffered by a vessel after a collision must be deemed to be the result of the collision unless the owner of the vessel whose negligence caused the collision proves the contrary¹.

However, in particular circumstances, damage, for example the stranding of the damaged vessel, may be of such a kind and follow so immediately on the collision that it is to be assumed that the damage was caused by the collision unless it is proved that there was some other cause². The cost of raising a vessel sunk in a harbour or river is recoverable as damages in a collision action if the authority has the power to charge the owners with the cost and if the charges are reasonable³. Although the principle of constructive total loss⁴ has no direct relation to collision liabilities, there may be cases where the proper mode of measuring the damages would be to assess them on the same basis as for a constructive total loss and then the defendant is entitled to the wreck⁵.

828. Vessel damaged but not lost.

When the ship is damaged but not lost¹, the damages recoverable generally consist of salvage² or towage³, repairs (including dock dues)⁴, crew's wages and other expenses of the vessel during repair, and loss of profit⁵. Where a ship has been temporarily repaired, and it is proved with reasonable certainty that, although permanent repairs have not been effected, they will be effected, her owners are entitled to recover a sum in respect of the prospective permanent repairs and of the prospective loss of time occupied in effecting them⁶.

Salvage expenses incurred by reason of a collision are recoverable from the wrongdoer⁷, as is towage⁸.

829. Cost of repairs.

The owner is entitled to a complete repair of all the damage done, even though the result may be to render the vessel worth more than she was before the collision¹. The cost of the repairs recoverable is the cost at the nearest convenient port at which the repairs could have been executed². The owner is entitled to recover the cost of the repairs even though he does not actually repair the vessel³, or even though he sells her unrepaired to the shipbreakers⁴. The estimated cost of repairs is often the simplest way of calculating the loss which has to be made good⁵. The owner is not, however, entitled to the renewal of rotten parts discovered by the opening up for collision repairs, even though such parts might otherwise have lasted for years⁶.

830. Dry-docking.

Dues paid for dry-docking a vessel for collision repairs are recoverable¹. Even where her owners take the opportunity to do other work on the vessel when the collision repairs are being done, the whole of the dock dues are recoverable from the wrongdoer, if the amount paid for the hire of the dock is not increased by the owners' work². If there are two collisions and the vessel would have had to be dry-docked for the damage caused by the first collision, and the repairs of the damage caused by the two collisions are carried out concurrently so that no extra dues become payable, it seems that the first wrongdoer only is liable for the dock dues³. Where neither the collision repairs nor the owners' repairs are immediately necessary, the cost of dry-docking must be apportioned⁴.

831. Detention of ship.

The shipowner is entitled to the expenses of detention of his vessel¹, and the amount of profit lost². Both these heads of damages depend on time, and the shipowner is only entitled to such period of time as is shown to have been necessary allowing for reasonable dispatch³. Where there have been two collisions, and the second collision has caused no extra detention beyond what would have been caused by the first, the second wrongdoer is not liable for any part of the loss caused by the detention⁴. The wrongdoer is not liable if the detention would in any case have been necessary owing to weather damage suffered by the claimant's vessel after the collision⁵.

832. Expenses of detention.

The burden of proving that there has been any loss by detention rests on the claimant¹. Two things are necessary, namely loss and reasonable proof of the amount². The ordinary expenses of a vessel in port are allowed, including the master's and crew's wages and maintenance where necessarily incurred, fuel and stores consumed, and other matters³. It may, however, be that the insurance premium, if the vessel is long in port, will be subject to a deduction⁴.

833. Loss of profits by detention.

A ship is a thing by the use of which money may ordinarily be earned, and, for the purpose of determining what profits, if any, were lost by detention, the question is what use the shipowner would, but for the collision, have had of his ship, and what profits would have been earned by such use, excluding elements of uncertain or speculative or special character¹. Where the ship is under a charterparty² which is lost in consequence of the collision, the charterparty is admissible evidence to prove that the ship has been thrown out of employment, but, in the absence of any charterparty, other evidence may equally establish the loss of employment³.

Where there is a charterparty for the voyage, this may afford a measure of the profits lost, although there is no rigid rule that the calculation is to be based on the charterparty current at the date of the collision; where there is no charterparty but a reasonable certainty of employment⁴, the matter is more at large⁵. The usual evidence given is as to the two or three previous voyages of the vessel⁶, and sometimes as to a subsequent voyage.

Damages are not necessarily confined to loss of profits during the actual period during which the ship is laid up for repairs but may include loss of earnings under any engagement for a future voyage which she had secured at the time of the collision⁷.

The loss of profit may consist of a loss of profit on the sale of goods which the owner would have carried in his vessel⁸. A fishing vessel has been allowed damages for loss due to interruption of fishing, as proved by the catches made by other vessels⁹; and a whaling vessel which loses her season is as much entitled to recover for her loss of employment as a vessel carrying cargo¹⁰. Loss of fishing in general, however, has been held to be too problematical¹¹. In all cases of loss of employment proper deductions must be made from the gross amount which would have been earned, for the expenses which would have been incurred in earning it¹², and the saving of wear and tear to the vessel¹³.

834. Use of another vessel.

Where, in order to carry out a charterparty, the shipowner hires another vessel to take the place of the vessel detained, the amount paid for the hire of the substituted vessel generally constitutes the measure of his loss¹. Where the shipowner substitutes another vessel of his own for the vessel detained, he is entitled to be paid for reasonable losses thus incurred, but no compensation will be due for time during which the substituted vessel would have been unemployed².

As to the right of shipowners not engaged in trading for profit to claim the cost of hiring see PARA 835. Even though there may be no sufficient positive evidence of any chartering effected for the purpose of supplying the loss of a particular ship, it seems that the circumstances proved may be such that a court may be justified in drawing the inference that a proportion of the chartered tonnage did in fact supply that loss: Strathfillan (Owners) v Ikala (Owners), The Ikala [1929] AC 196 at 211, 17 Asp MLC 555 at 561, HL. AVOIDANCE OF COLLISIONS/(7) RIGHTS AND REMEDIES OF INJURED PARTIES/(ii) Measure of Damages/835. Damages recoverable by foreign state or public authority.

835. Damages recoverable by foreign state or public authority.

General damages are recoverable for loss of use of a vessel, although the owners are a foreign state, or a public authority which is not authorised to use it for profit like a private individual¹. There is no absolute rule as to the method of assessing such damages, which must depend on the facts of the case². In some cases, damages have been assessed on a percentage of the capital value of the ship³; in other cases, damages have been held to be assessable on the operating cost or the cost of maintaining a spare ship⁴. Where another vessel has been hired to do the work of the damaged vessel, the owners of the damaged vessel may claim as special damages the cost of hiring, even though they are not engaged in trading for profit⁵.

836. Other expenses.

It seems that the shipowner can recover from the wrongdoer the whole of any general average expenses¹, notwithstanding the liability of the cargo owners for their share, although, if a cargo owner has an independent claim and exerts it in time in competition with the shipowner's claim, his claim will prevail². He can recover expenses which he has had to pay for repatriation of seamen if the law of the flag puts that burden on him³, and any special expenses which he has properly incurred to mitigate his loss⁴.

837. Cargo owner's loss.

A cargo owner who has lost his goods carried in one vessel in consequence of a collision due to the negligent navigation of another vessel¹ is, as a rule², entitled to recover from the owner of the other vessel the value of the goods at the place and time and in the state at and in which they ought to have been delivered to the cargo owner³. This value is the market price of the goods, if there is a market at that place. If not, such value has to be calculated, taking into account among other matters the cost price, the expenses of transit, and the importer's profit⁴. Wherever circumstances admit of calculations as to the time of arrival being made with reasonable certainty, damages for loss of market due to late delivery are recoverable⁵. Where general average expenses⁶ are incurred by the carrying vessel, a cargo owner has a direct right of action in respect of his contribution to such expenses against the owner of another vessel whose negligent navigation has caused or contributed to the collision⁷.

838. Interest.

Interest until payment is usually allowed on all claims proved, as being a part of the damages¹. If the ship is totally lost and is in ballast, interest generally runs from the date of her loss². If, however, she is without cargo but under charter and a sum in respect of freight is allowed, interest runs from the date at which she might be expected to receive the freight³, and, if she is loaded, interest runs from the date on which she would probably have ended her voyage and earned freight⁴. If the ship is damaged but not lost, interest is usually allowed from the date on which the repair bill is paid⁵.

(iii) Rights in rem and Rights in personam; Limitation of Time

839. Admiralty jurisdiction in rem and in personam.

The Admiralty jurisdiction of the High Court¹ extends to any claim for damage done by or received by a ship, any claim for loss of life or personal injury² in consequence of a defect in a ship or the wrongful act, neglect or default of her owners, charterers etc or of any persons for whom they are responsible, in her navigation or management, and any claim for loss of or damage to goods carried in a ship³.

An action in rem⁴ lies where there is a maritime lien or other charge on a ship⁵. Irrespective of the existence of such lien, if the claim arises in connection with a ship, and if the person who would be liable on the claim in an action in personam was, when the cause of action arose, the owner or charterer of, or in possession or control of, the ship, an action in rem lies against that ship, or any other ship, if in either case at the time when the action is brought the ship is beneficially owned as respects all the shares in her by that person⁶.

An action in personam in respect of a claim for damage, loss of life or personal injury arising out of a collision between ships, or out of the carrying out or failure to carry out a manoeuvre by one or more of two or more ships, or out of non-compliance with the International Regulations for Preventing Collisions at Sea 1972⁷ by one or more of two or more ships, lies in a court in England or Wales only if the defendant has his habitual residence or place of business in England or Wales, or the cause of action arose within inland waters of England or Wales or the limits of a port there, or an action arising out of the same incident or series of incidents is proceeding, or has been determined, in the court⁸.

840. Maritime lien.

There is a maritime lien¹ against a ship and her freight for all damage by collision done by that ship which is caused by the negligence of the employees, either of the owners² or of those in whom the control of the ship is vested with the consent of the owners, within the scope of their employment³. Every such lien may be carried into effect, when opportunity offers, by the arrest of the ship in an action in rem⁴.

The object is the satisfaction of the claim of the injured party out of the property seized, and, if the owners do not acknowledge service, the proceedings only enforce the lien against the property that is the subject of the claim (the res); but, if they do acknowledge service, the proceedings are a means of enforcing against them the complete claim⁵.

The maritime lien against the freight may be enforced by arrest of the cargo to make the owners pay the amount into court⁶.

A maritime lien exists against any vessel doing damage by collision⁷, and whether the collision was on the high seas or within the limits of a port⁸.

841. Limitation of time for proceedings.

An action to enforce any claim or lien against a ship¹ or her owners in respect of damage or loss caused by the fault of that ship to another ship, her cargo or freight or any property on board her, or for damages for loss of life or personal injury caused by the fault of that ship to any person on board another ship, must normally be begun within two years of the date when the damage or loss was caused or the loss of life or injury was suffered².

(8) COLLISION AS AFFECTING SALVAGE

842. Assistance after collision.

If salvage services¹ were rendered necessary by the faulty navigation of the salving vessel, it seems that neither the owner nor the crew can obtain a salvage reward². When two vessels have been in collision and are in danger from one another, and one of them is towed away from the other, salvage may be payable by both to the salvor³.

843. Damage received during salvage.

When a vessel is damaged by collision without her own fault, while rendering salvage services¹, it is necessary to ascertain the amount of the damages sustained and to award this as part of the salvage remuneration, but, where this cannot be ascertained, the salvage award must be assessed on a liberal scale taking the damages sustained into account².

If the salving vessel negligently collides with and damages the vessel which she is salving, her owners do not necessarily forfeit their right to a salvage award, but they have to pay for the damage by the collision³. The owners of the salving vessel are liable for the damage caused, as the master was acting within the scope of his authority in attempting to save⁴.

The salvage expenses of a vessel damaged by collision through the negligence of another vessel, although ordinarily recoverable from the owners of the wrongdoing vessel⁵ cannot be recovered if the salvage is chargeable to improper abandonment⁶.

Where another vessel negligently collides with a wreck whilst salvors are in possession, the salvors are entitled to sue for damages done to it; the owners and salvors of the wreck between them are entitled to recover the whole value, such value being dependent on whether the salvage operations would have been successful⁷. A claim may be made for loss of salvage where a vessel engaged in performing salvage services is sunk by the negligence of another vessel⁸.

The Secretary of State¹ must, for the purpose of the investigation of any such accidents² as are mentioned in heads (1) and (2) below, namely³:

- 1029 (1) any accident involving a ship or ship's boat⁴ where, at the time of the accident, the ship is a United Kingdom ship⁵ or the ship (or, in a case of an accident involving a ship's boat, that boat) is within United Kingdom waters⁶; and
- 1030 (2) such other accidents involving ships or ships' boats as the Secretary of State may determine⁷, appoint such number of persons as he may determine to be inspectors of marine accidents; and he must appoint one of those persons to be Chief Inspector of Marine Accidents⁸.

1 As to the Secretary of State see PARA 38.

4 For these purposes, references to an accident involving a ship or ship's boat include references to an accident occurring on board a ship or ship's boat (and any reference to a ship or ship's boat involved in an accident is to be construed accordingly): Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 267(10)(a). 'Ship's boat' includes a life-raft: s 267(10)(b). As to the meaning of 'ship' see PARA 229.

Any inspector of marine accidents has, for the purpose of discharging any functions conferred on him by or under s 267, the powers conferred on an inspector by s 259 (see PARA 49): s 267(8). Nothing in s 267 limits the powers of any authority under s 252 (see PARA 1008), s 253 (see PARA 1009) and s 254 (see PARA 1009): s 267(9). The Chief Inspector of Marine Accidents or, as the case may be, inspectors of marine accidents generally, must discharge such functions in addition to those conferred by or under s 267(1), (2) (see also the text and notes 1-7) and by or under s 267(3)-(6) (see PARA 845) as the Secretary of State may determine: s 267(7).

The Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 267, and the regulations made thereunder, provide the foundation of the work conducted by the Marine Accident Investigation Branch, which is a branch within the Department for Transport, and whose structure and organisation follows the pattern of the Air Accident Investigation Branch (see AIR LAW vol 2 (2008) PARA 605) and the Rail Accident Investigation Branch (see RAILWAYS, INLAND WATERWAYS AND CROSS-COUNTRY PIPELINES vol 39(1A) (Reissue) PARA 275 et seq).

ACCIDENT INVESTIGATIONS AND INQUIRIES/(1) MARINE ACCIDENT INVESTIGATIONS/(i) In general/845. Secretary of State's power to make regulations with respect to the investigation of marine accidents.

845. Secretary of State's power to make regulations with respect to the investigation of marine accidents.

The Secretary of State¹ may by regulations² make such provision as he considers appropriate with respect to the investigation of any accidents³ involving a ship⁴ or ship's boat⁵ where, at the time of the accident, the ship is a United Kingdom ship⁶ or the ship (or, in a case of an accident involving a ship's boat, that boat) is within United Kingdom waters⁷ or such other accidents involving ships or ships' boats as the Secretary of State may determine⁸. Any such regulations may in particular make provision⁹:

- 1031 (1) with respect to the definition of 'accident' for the purposes of the provisions relating to the investigation of marine accidents¹⁰ and the regulations¹¹;
- 1032 (2) imposing requirements as to the reporting of accidents¹²;
- 1033 (3) prohibiting, pending investigation, access to or interference with any ship or ship's boat involved in an accident¹³;

- 1035 (5) specifying, with respect to the investigation of accidents, the functions of the Chief Inspector of Marine Accidents¹⁵ (which may include the function of determining whether, and if so by whom, particular accidents should be investigated), the functions of other inspectors of marine accidents, and the manner in which any such functions are to be discharged¹⁶;
- 1036 (6) for the appointment by the Chief Inspector of Marine Accidents, in such circumstances as may be specified in the regulations, of persons to carry out investigations under the provisions relating to the investigation of marine accidents¹⁷ who are not inspectors of marine accidents¹⁸;
- 1037 (7) for the appointment by any Minister of the Crown of persons to review any findings or conclusions of a person carrying out an investigation under the provisions relating to the investigation of marine accidents¹⁹;
- 1038 (8) for the procedure to be followed in connection with investigations or reviews under the provisions relating to the investigation of marine accidents²⁰;
- 1039 (9) for conferring on persons discharging functions under the regulations who are not inspectors of marine accidents all or any of the powers conferred on an inspector²¹;
- 1040 (10) for the submission to the Secretary of State, and the publication by him, of reports of investigations or reviews under the provisions relating to the investigation of marine accidents²²;
- 1041 (11) for the publication by the Chief Inspector of Marine Accidents of reports and other information relating to accidents²³.

Such regulations²⁴ may provide for any provisions of the regulations to apply to any specified class or description of incidents or situations which involve, or occur on board, ships or ships' boats but are not accidents for the purposes of the regulations, being a class or description framed by reference to any of the following, namely²⁵:

- 1042 (a) the loss or destruction of or serious damage to any ship or structure²⁶;
- 1043 (b) the death of or serious injury to any person²⁷; or 846. Meaning of 'accident'.

For the purposes of those provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995¹, and the regulations made thereunder², which govern the reporting and investigation of marine accidents, 'accident' means any occurrence on board a ship or involving a ship whereby³:

1045 (1) there is loss of life or major injury⁴ to any person on board, or any person is lost or falls overboard from, the ship or one of its ship's boats⁵;

1046 (2) the ship:

108. (a) causes any loss of life, major injury or material damage⁶;

109. (b) is lost or is presumed to be lost⁷;

110. (c) is abandoned⁸;

111. (d) is materially damaged by fire, explosion, weather or other cause⁹;

112. (e) grounds¹⁰;

113. (f) is in collision¹¹;

114. (g) is disabled¹²; or

115. (h) causes significant harm to the environment¹³;

52

1047 (3) any of the following occur:

53

116. (a) a collapse or bursting of any pressure vessel, pipeline or valve¹⁴;

117. (b) a collapse or failure of any lifting equipment, access equipment, hatch-cover, staging or boatswain's chair or any associated load-bearing parts¹⁵;

118. (c) a collapse of cargo, unintended movement of cargo or ballast sufficient to cause a list, or loss of cargo overboard¹⁶;

119. (d) a snagging of fishing gear which results in the vessel heeling to a dangerous angle¹⁷;

120. (e) a contact by a person with loose asbestos fibre except when full protective clothing is worn¹⁸; or

121. (f) an escape of any harmful substance or agent¹⁹,

1048 if the occurrence might have caused serious injury or damage to the health of any person²⁰.

For these purposes, 'major injury' means: (i) any fracture (other than to a finger, thumb or toe); (ii) any loss of a limb or part of a limb; (iii) dislocation of the shoulder, hip, knee or spine; (iv) loss of sight (whether temporary or permanent); (v) penetrating injury to the eye; or (vi) any other injury leading to hypothermia or to unconsciousness, or requiring resuscitation, or requiring admittance to a hospital or other medical facility as an in-patient for more than 24 hours²¹. 'Serious injury' means any injury, other than a major injury, to a person employed or carried in a ship which occurs on board or during access which results in incapacity²² for more than three consecutive days excluding the day of the accident, or as a result of which the person concerned is put ashore and the ship sails without that person, unless the incapacity is known or advised to be of three consecutive days or less, excluding the day of the accident²³.

ACCIDENT INVESTIGATIONS AND INQUIRIES/(1) MARINE ACCIDENT INVESTIGATIONS/(ii) Procedure/847. Application of provisions relating to the reporting and investigation of marine accidents.

(ii) Procedure

847. Application of provisions relating to the reporting and investigation of marine accidents.

The provisions relating to the reporting and investigation of marine accidents¹ apply to accidents involving or occurring on board²:

- 1049 (1) any United Kingdom ship³; and
- 1050 (2) any other ship within the United Kingdom or United Kingdom waters⁴.

The provisions relating to the reporting and investigation of marine accidents⁵ apply to serious injuries⁶ and hazardous incidents⁷ as they apply to accidents⁸.

However, an investigation may also be held⁹ into an accident involving or occurring on board a ship which is not a United Kingdom ship and which at the time of the accident was not within the United Kingdom or United Kingdom waters, if the Secretary of State¹⁰ so determines¹¹.

¹ I.e. the Merchant Shipping (Accident Reporting and Investigation) Regulations 2005, SI 2005/881 (see also PARA 846 et seq): see reg 4(1). As to the meaning of 'accident' for these purposes see PARA 846.

² Merchant Shipping (Accident Reporting and Investigation) Regulations 2005, SI 2005/881, reg 4(1).

Although head (1) in the text applies generally, the Merchant Shipping (Accident Reporting and Investigation) Regulations 2005, SI 2005/881, reg 6 (see PARA 849) does not apply in relation to:

983 (1) a pleasure vessel (reg 4(1)(a)(i));

984 (2) a recreational craft which is hired on a bareboat basis (reg 4(1)(a)(ii)); or

985 (3) any other craft or boat, other than one carrying passengers, which is in commercial use in a harbour or on an inland waterway and is less than eight metres overall in length (reg 4(1)(a)(iii)), unless, in the case of a craft or boat mentioned in head (2) or head (3) above, the accident involves any of the following: explosion, fire, death, major injury, capsizing of a power-driven craft or boat, or pollution causing significant harm to the environment (see reg 4(1)(a)). As to the meaning of 'major injury' see PARA 846. For these purposes, 'hired on a bareboat basis' means hired without a professional master, skipper or crew: see reg 4(4). 'Pleasure vessel' means:

986 (a) any vessel which is wholly owned by an individual or individuals and used only for the sport or pleasure of the owner or the immediate family or friends of the owner, or is owned by a body corporate and used only for the sport or pleasure of employees or officers of the body corporate, or their immediate family or friends; and is on a voyage or excursion which is one for which the owner is not paid for or in connection with operating the vessel or carrying any person, other than as a contribution to the direct expenses of the operation of the vessel incurred during the voyage or excursion; or

987 (b) any vessel wholly owned by or on behalf of a members' club formed for the purpose of sport or pleasure which, at the time it is being used, is used only for the sport or pleasure of members of the club or their immediate family; and for the use of which any charges levied are paid into club funds and applied for the general use of the club; and

988 (c) in the case of any vessel referred to in head (a) or head (b) above, no payments other than those mentioned are made by or on behalf of the users of the vessel, other than by the owner;

and, for these purposes, 'immediate family' means, in relation to an individual, the spouse or civil partner of the individual, and a brother, sister, ancestor or lineal descendant of that individual or that individual's spouse or civil partner: reg 2(1).

4 Merchant Shipping (Accident Reporting and Investigation) Regulations 2005, SI 2005/881, reg 4(1)(b). For these purposes, 'United Kingdom waters' means the sea or other waters within the seaward limits of the territorial sea of the United Kingdom: reg 2(1). As to the territorial sea generally see INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS LAW vol 61 (2010) PARA 123.

Although head (2) in the text applies generally, reg 6 (see PARA 849) and reg 9(1)-(3) (see PARA 851) only apply in relation to such a ship as is mentioned in head (2) in the text if:

989 (1) the ship is within the jurisdiction of a harbour master or Queen's harbour master appointed, or required to be appointed, under any enactment (reg 4(1)(b)(i));

990 (2) the ship is employed in carrying passengers to or from a port in the United Kingdom or a place mentioned in head (1) above (reg 4(1)(b)(ii)); or 991 (3) an inspector, or other person acting on behalf of the Chief Inspector, requires that any of the evidence mentioned in reg 9(1), (2) be preserved (reg 4(1)(b)(iii)).

For these purposes, 'inspector' means an inspector of marine accidents appointed by the Secretary of State under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 267(1) (see PARA 844) and in the context of the investigation or a particular accident includes any person appointed to investigate that accident under the Merchant Shipping (Accident Reporting and Investigation) Regulations 2005, SI 2005/881, reg 10(2) (see PARA 852): reg 2(1). 'Chief Inspector' means the Chief Inspector of Marine Accidents appointed by the Secretary of State under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 267(1) (see PARA 844), and any Deputy Chief Inspector: Merchant Shipping (Accident Reporting and Investigation) Regulations 2005, SI 2005/881, reg 2(1).

5 I.e the Merchant Shipping (Accident Reporting and Investigation) Regulations 2005, SI 2005/881 (see also PARA 846 et seq): see reg 4(2).

6 I.e except that the Merchant Shipping (Accident Reporting and Investigation) Regulations 2005, SI 2005/881, reg 6 (see PARA 849), with the exception of reg 6(5), and reg 9 (see PARA 851), do not apply to serious injuries: see reg 4(2)(a). As to the meaning of 'serious injury' see PARA 846.

7 I.e except that the Merchant Shipping (Accident Reporting and Investigation) Regulations 2005, SI 2005/881, reg 6 (see PARA 849) and reg 9 (see PARA 851), do not apply to hazardous incidents: see reg 4(2)(b). For these purposes, 'hazardous incident' means any event, other than an accident, associated with the operation of a ship which involves circumstances indicating that an accident nearly occurred: reg 2(1).

848. Objective of a marine investigation.

The sole objective of the investigation of an accident¹, under the provisions which govern the reporting and investigation of marine accidents², is the prevention of future accidents through the ascertainment of its causes and circumstances³. It is not the purpose of such an investigation to determine liability nor, except so far as is necessary to achieve the objective, to apportion blame⁴.

When an accident¹ occurs, the following persons associated with the ship must send a report to the Chief Inspector² as soon as is practicable following the accident and by the quickest means available³:

- 1051 (1) the master or, if he has not survived, the senior surviving officer⁴; and
- 1052 (2) the ship's owner⁵, unless he has ascertained to his satisfaction that the master or senior surviving officer has reported the accident in accordance with head (1) above⁶.

In addition to any report so made⁷, the following persons must report to the Chief Inspector as soon as is practicable and by the quickest means available any accident of which they are aware⁸:

- 1053 (a) in the case of an accident within or adjacent to the limits of any harbour, the harbour authority for that harbour⁹;
- 1054 (b) in the case of an accident on any inland waterway in the United Kingdom, the person, authority or body having responsibility for that waterway¹⁰; or
- 1055 (c) an official of the Maritime and Coastguard Agency¹¹ in respect of an accident within United Kingdom waters¹².

Any person making such a report to the Chief Inspector¹³ must, in so far as is practicable, include the following information¹⁴:

- 1056 (i) name of ship and its International Maritime Organisation¹⁵, official or fishing vessel number¹⁶;
- 1057 (ii) name and address of owner¹⁷;
- 1058 (iii) name of the master, skipper or person in charge¹⁸;
- 1059 (iv) date and time of the accident¹⁹;
- 1060 (v) where from and where bound²⁰;
- 1061 (vi) latitude and longitude or geographical position in which the accident occurred²¹;
- 1062 (vii) part of ship where accident occurred if on board²²;
- 1063 (viii) weather conditions²³;
- 1064 (ix) name and port of registry of any other ship involved²⁴;
- 1065 (x) number of people killed or injured, together with their names, addresses and gender²⁵;
- 1066 (xi) brief details of the accident (including, where known, the sequence of events leading to the accident, extent of damage and whether the accident caused pollution or a hazard to navigation)²⁶;
- 1067 (xii) if the ship is fitted with a voyage data recorder²⁷, the make and model of the recorder²⁸.

In addition to making any such report²⁹, the persons specified in heads (1) and (2) above, must, so far as is reasonably practicable, ensure that the circumstances of every accident are examined and that a report giving the findings of such examination, stating any measures taken or proposed to prevent a recurrence, must be provided to the Chief Inspector as soon as is practicable³⁰.

The master and ship's owner must, so far as is reasonably practicable, ensure also that the circumstances of every serious injury³¹ are examined and one of them must, within 14 days, provide the Chief Inspector with a report giving the findings of such examination and stating any measures taken or proposed to prevent a recurrence³².

ACCIDENT INVESTIGATIONS AND INQUIRIES/(1) MARINE ACCIDENT INVESTIGATIONS/(ii) Procedure/850. Ordering of investigations and reopening of investigations into marine accidents.

850. Ordering of investigations and reopening of investigations into marine accidents.

The Chief Inspector¹ may cause any accident² to be investigated³.

Where a report has been duly received, pursuant to the duty imposed on certain persons to report accidents and serious injuries⁴, the Chief Inspector must decide whether or not an investigation, including any preliminary examination⁵, should be carried out and must notify the parties to the accident of his decision within 28 days following receipt by him of the report⁶.

Before deciding whether an investigation should be carried out (and, if so, what form it should take), the Chief Inspector may cause to be obtained such information as he considers necessary concerning the accident and any remedial action taken as a result⁷; and any person on whom the duty to report has been imposed⁸ (as well as any other person who is in possession of it and has been requested to do so by an inspector⁹) must provide such information to the best of their ability and knowledge¹⁰.

In the case of an accident where there is loss of life or major injury¹¹ to any person on board, or where any person is lost or falls overboard from, the ship or one of its ship's boats¹², the Chief Inspector may decide not to carry out an investigation if he is satisfied, or it is otherwise established to his satisfaction, that¹³: (1) any loss of life resulted from suicide or natural causes¹⁴; or (2) any major injury resulted from attempted suicide¹⁵. In such circumstances, he may discontinue any investigation which has already been commenced¹⁶.

Public notice that an investigation has been commenced may be given in such manner as the Chief Inspector may think fit, and he may invite any persons who so desire to present relevant evidence to the inspector in such a manner and within such a time as is specified in the notice¹⁷.

The Secretary of State¹⁸ may require the Chief Inspector to investigate any accident or to expand the scope of an investigation to include any further consequences of an accident¹⁹, including: (a) salvage and pollution aspects²⁰; or (b) the conduct of search and rescue operations²¹. In such circumstances, the Chief Inspector may conduct an investigation into the further consequences of an accident which may be separate and distinct from the investigation into the initial accident²².

Notwithstanding a decision by the Chief Inspector²³ not to investigate, he may at any subsequent time cause an investigation to be carried out if he is then satisfied there is good reason in the interests of future safety to do so²⁴.

The Chief Inspector may cause any investigation to be re-opened if, following its completion, in his opinion new and important evidence is discovered which could have a material effect on any safety recommendations made²⁵.

Any investigation may be re-opened either in whole or as to any part of it and a re-opened investigation is subject to, and must be conducted in accordance with, the standard provisions governing such investigations²⁶.

ACCIDENT INVESTIGATIONS AND INQUIRIES/(1) MARINE ACCIDENT INVESTIGATIONS/(ii) Procedure/851. Preservation of evidence relevant to investigation of marine accidents.

851. Preservation of evidence relevant to investigation of marine accidents.

Following an accident¹ involving a United Kingdom ship² which is reportable³, the following persons⁴, namely: (1) the master (or, if he has not survived, the senior surviving officer)⁵; and (2) the ship's owner⁶ (unless he has ascertained to his satisfaction that the master or senior surviving officer has duly reported the accident)⁷, must so far as is practicable ensure that all⁸:

- 1068 (a) charts⁹;
- 1069 (b) log books¹⁰;
- 1070 (c) electronic and magnetic recording and video tapes, including information from a voyage data recorder¹¹ or recording system relating to the period preceding, during and after the accident¹²; and
- 1071 (d) all documents or other records which might reasonably be considered pertinent to the accident¹³, are kept and that no alteration is made to any recordings or entries in them¹⁴.

In the case of an accident involving a United Kingdom ship, the persons specified in heads (1) and (2) above must also ensure that¹⁵:

- 1072 (i) all information from a voyage data recorder or recording system relating to the circumstances of an accident is saved and preserved, in particular by taking steps, where necessary, to prevent such information from being overwritten¹⁶; and
- 1073 (ii) any other equipment which might reasonably be considered pertinent to the investigation of the accident is so far as practicable left undisturbed¹⁷.

The duty to ensure that documents, information or records are kept and not altered¹⁸ and to ensure that information is saved and preserved, or that equipment is left undisturbed¹⁹, continues until²⁰:

- 1074 (A) notification is received from the Chief Inspector²¹ that no investigation is to take place or that the investigation has been completed²²;
- 1075 (B) 28 days have passed since the Chief Inspector received an accident report²³ and no notice has been sent by the Chief Inspector that he has decided to investigate the matter²⁴; or
- 1076 (C) the Chief Inspector or an inspector²⁵ carrying out the investigation gives written notification that he no longer requires them²⁶.

Following an accident in United Kingdom waters²⁷ involving a ship which is not a United Kingdom ship, the persons mentioned in heads (1) and (2) above must comply with the duty to ensure that documents, information or records are kept and not altered²⁸, or to ensure that information is saved and preserved, or that equipment is left undisturbed²⁹, if requested to do so by or on behalf of the Chief Inspector³⁰.

An inspector may, pending investigation, prohibit persons from gaining access to, or interfering with, any ship, ship's boat³¹ or other equipment involved in an accident³². Following an accident, the Chief Inspector may, if he considers it reasonably necessary for the collection or preservation of evidence in connection with any investigation (including preliminary examination³³) relating to the accident, require any of the master (or, if he has not survived, the senior surviving officer) and the ship's owner to ensure that a ship is accessible within United Kingdom waters to any inspector engaged in the investigation of such accident, until the process of collecting or preserving the evidence has been completed to the inspector's satisfaction³⁴. However, the Chief Inspector must not require a ship to remain in United Kingdom waters any longer than is necessary for the collection or preservation, as the case may be, of such evidence and must take all reasonable steps to ensure that such evidence is collected or preserved expeditiously³⁵; and no such requirement is to be made unless the Chief Inspector has reasonable grounds for concern that if the ship leaves United Kingdom waters, access to it, to any member of the crew, or to any evidence on board relating to the investigation, may subsequently be denied to him or any inspector conducting such investigation³⁶.

852. Conduct of investigations into marine accidents.

If the Chief Inspector¹ decides² that an investigation must be carried out, it must be undertaken by one or more inspectors³ at such times and places and in such manner as appear to them most conducive to achieving the sole objective⁴ of the investigation⁵. The Chief Inspector may also appoint one or more persons who are not inspectors appointed under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995⁶ for the purpose of carrying out an investigation in circumstances where such appointed inspectors are not conveniently available or where the persons appointed have special qualifications or experience⁷. Where an investigation involves a ro-ro ferry or high speed passenger craft which has been subject to a mandatory survey for its safe operation⁸, the Chief Inspector must enable a substantially interested state⁹ which is an EEA state¹⁰ to participate or co-operate in the investigation in accordance with the International Maritime Organisation Code¹¹.

An investigation may extend to cover all events and circumstances preceding the accident together with subsequent events and circumstances which in the opinion of an inspector may have been relevant to its cause or outcome¹².

Every person required to attend before an inspector must be allowed the reasonable expenses of attending, payable by the Secretary of State¹³.

Any person (not being a solicitor or other professional legal adviser acting solely on behalf of the person required to attend)¹⁴ who has been allowed by an inspector to be present¹⁵, or who has been nominated to be present by a person required to attend¹⁶, at an oral examination before an inspector, may at any time be excluded from being present by the inspector with the agreement of the Chief Inspector¹⁷, if:

- 1077 (1) both the inspector and Chief Inspector have substantial reason to believe that his presence would hamper the investigation with the result that the sole objective is likely to be hindered and future safety thereby endangered¹⁸; and
- 1078 (2) the Chief Inspector is satisfied, having regard to all the circumstances, that it is proper to exclude that person¹⁹.

Where a person nominated to be present has been excluded in this way, the person required to attend is entitled to nominate another person to be present at the oral examination in place of the excluded person and the same conditions as to their continued presence then apply to that other person²⁰.

Any document, record or information that is required to be preserved²¹, properly required by an inspector to be produced for the purposes of an investigation (whether on board the ship involved or otherwise), may be retained by him until the investigation is completed²².

In relation to any investigation:

- 1079 (a) where a preliminary examination²³ has been conducted, the Chief Inspector must decide (having regard to the sole objective) whether it is appropriate in all the circumstances to conduct further investigation leading to publication of a report²⁴;
- 1080 (b) the Chief Inspector may subsequently decide to discontinue the investigation at any time and must make his reasons for doing so publicly available²⁵.

ACCIDENT INVESTIGATIONS AND INQUIRIES/(1) MARINE ACCIDENT INVESTIGATIONS/(ii) Procedure/853. Reports of investigations of marine accidents and other publications.

853. Reports of investigations of marine accidents and other publications.

The Chief Inspector¹ must cause any report of an investigation of an accident² (other than an accident the investigation of which is being undertaken on behalf of a state other than the United Kingdom³) to be submitted to the Secretary of State⁴ and made publicly available in the shortest time possible and in such manner as he thinks fit⁵. Such a report must set out:

- 1081 (1) conclusions relating to the facts of the accident⁶;
- 1082 (2) where the facts cannot be clearly established, analysis and professional judgement to determine the probable facts⁷; and
- 1083 (3) recommendations for future safety⁸.

However, the Chief Inspector must not make the report publicly available until he has:

- 1084 (a) served a notice on any person who, or organisation which, could be adversely affected by the report or, if that person is deceased, upon such person or persons as appear to the Chief Inspector, at the time he proposes to serve notice, as best to represent the interests and reputation of the deceased in the matter⁹; and
- 1085 (b) considered the representations relating to the facts or analysis contained in the report which may be made to him¹⁰ by or on behalf of the persons served with such notice, and amended the report in such manner as he thinks fit¹¹.

The notice referred to in head (a) above must be accompanied by a draft copy of the report¹²; and any representation made under head (b) above, must be in writing and must be served on the Chief Inspector within 28 days of service of the notice referred to in head (a) above, or within such further period as may be allowed¹³.

Subject to any court order¹⁴, no person may disclose any information which has been furnished to him through receipt of a draft copy of the report¹⁵, or which has otherwise been furnished to him by or on behalf of the Chief Inspector in advance of the publication of a report and whose confidentiality is protected¹⁶, or permit such information to be disclosed, save with the prior consent in writing of the Chief Inspector, to any other person, except to such advisers as are necessary in order to make the representations to the Chief Inspector referred to in head (b) above, and those advisers must similarly be subject to the duty not to disclose the information or permit it to be disclosed¹⁷.

A copy of the report when made publicly available must be given by the Chief Inspector to:

- 1086 (i) any person who has been served with a notice given under head (a) above¹⁸;
- 1087 (ii) those persons or bodies to whom recommendations have been addressed in that report¹⁹;
- 1088 (iii) the Secretary of State²⁰;
- 1089 (iv) the International Maritime Organisation²¹;
- 1090 (v) where an investigation involves a ro-ro ferry or high speed passenger craft which has been subject to a mandatory survey for its safe operation²², to the European Commission²³; and

- 1091 (vi) any person or organisation whom the Chief Inspector considers may find the report useful or of interest²⁴.

Where an inquest or fatal accident inquiry is to be held following an accident which has been subject to investigation, a draft report may be made available in confidence to the coroner by the Chief Inspector²⁵. If any part of the report or analysis is based on information obtained pursuant to an inspector's conferred powers²⁶, the report is inadmissible in any judicial proceedings²⁷ whose purpose or one of whose purposes is to attribute or apportion liability or blame unless a court or tribunal, having regard to any future accident investigation undertaken in the United Kingdom²⁸, or relations between the United Kingdom and any other state or international organisation²⁹, determines otherwise³⁰.

The Chief Inspector may, at his discretion and to promulgate any lessons learned, from time to time publish collective short reports of accidents which have not been the subject of such a report³¹. The Chief Inspector may, at his discretion, submit a report to the Secretary of State on any matter arising from his analysis of marine accident investigations³².

ACCIDENT INVESTIGATIONS AND INQUIRIES/(1) MARINE ACCIDENT INVESTIGATIONS/(ii) Procedure/854. Disclosure of records relating to the investigation of marine accidents.

854. Disclosure of records relating to the investigation of marine accidents.

In general¹, the names, addresses or any other details of anyone who has given evidence to an inspector² must not be disclosed³; and, unless a court⁴ orders otherwise, the following documents or records must not be made available for purposes other than the investigation⁵:

- 1092 (1) all declarations or statements taken from persons by an inspector or supplied to him in the course of his investigation, together with any notes or voice recordings of interviews⁶;
- 1093 (2) medical or confidential information regarding persons involved in an accident⁷;
- 1094 (3) any report⁸ concerning the circumstances of an accident or serious injury⁹;
- 1095 (4) copies of the report other than the final report¹⁰.

Nevertheless, no order for disclosure of the documents or records listed in heads (1) to (4) above may be made by the court unless it is satisfied, having regard to the views of the Chief Inspector¹¹, that the interests of justice in disclosure outweigh any prejudice, or likely prejudice, to¹²:

- 1096 (a) the investigation into the accident to which the document or record relates¹³;
- 1097 (b) any future accident investigation undertaken in the United Kingdom¹⁴; or
- 1098 (c) relations between the United Kingdom and any other state, or international organisation¹⁵.

However, a person who has given a declaration or statement to an inspector in the course of an investigation may make available a copy of his declaration or statement to another person as he sees fit¹⁶; and any independent technical analysis commissioned by the Chief Inspector, and opinions expressed in such analysis, may be made publicly available if he considers it appropriate to do so¹⁷.

Copies of information obtained from a voyage data recorder¹⁸ or from other recording systems, pertinent to the accident, including voice recordings (other than any recordings mentioned in head (1) above), video recordings and other electronic or magnetic recordings and any transcripts made from such information or recordings, may be provided at the discretion of the Chief Inspector to the police or other official authorities¹⁹.

The general provisions relating to the disclosure of records²⁰ are without prejudice to any rule of law which authorises or requires the withholding of any document or record or part thereof on the ground that disclosure of it would be injurious to the public interest²¹.

855. Recommendations as to how future marine accidents may be prevented.

The Chief Inspector¹ may as a result of one or more investigations, whether or not completed, at any time make recommendations as to how future accidents² may be prevented³. The actions recommended must be addressed to those persons or bodies who, in the opinion of the Chief Inspector, are most fitted to implement them⁴; and recommendations must be made publicly available if the Chief Inspector considers that to do so is in the interests of safety or preventing pollution⁵.

Any person to whom a recommendation is addressed must without delay⁶:

- 1099 (1) take that recommendation into consideration⁷;
- 1100 (2) send to the Chief Inspector:
55
 - 122. (a) details of the measures, if any, he has taken or proposes to take to implement the recommendation and, in a case where he proposes to implement measures, the timetable for securing that implementation⁸; or
 - 123. (b) an explanation as to why the recommendation is not to be the subject of measures to be taken to implement it⁹,
- 56
 - 1101 and any details or timetable pursuant to head (2)(a) above or explanation pursuant to head (2)(b) above must be provided to the Chief Inspector within 28 days following receipt of the recommendation¹⁰; and
 - 1102 (3) give notice to the Chief Inspector if at any time any information provided to the Chief Inspector in pursuance of head (2)(a) above concerning the measures he proposes to take or the timetable for securing their implementation is rendered inaccurate by any change of circumstances¹¹.

The Chief Inspector must, annually or at such other intervals as he sees fit, make information publicly available in respect of the matters, including any explanation mentioned in heads (2) and (3) above, which have been communicated to him, and he must inform the Secretary of State of those matters¹². However, the Chief Inspector must not publish such information unless he has first notified any person mentioned in the information and considered any representations relating to the information which may be made to him by or on behalf of any person so notified, and amended the information in such manner as he thinks fit¹³. Any such representations must be in writing and must be served on the Chief Inspector within 28 days of receipt of the notification or within such further period as may be allowed¹⁴.

ACCIDENT INVESTIGATIONS AND INQUIRIES/(2) FORMAL INVESTIGATIONS BY WRECK COMMISSIONER/(i) In general/856. Provision for formal investigation into accident to be held by a wreck commissioner.

(2) FORMAL INVESTIGATIONS BY WRECK COMMISSIONER

(i) In general

856. Provision for formal investigation into accident to be held by a wreck commissioner.

Where any accident¹ has occurred, the Secretary of State² may, whether or not an investigation into it has been carried out by marine inspectors³, cause a formal investigation into the accident to be held by a wreck commissioner⁴.

A wreck commissioner holding a formal investigation must conduct it in accordance with the rules⁵; and those rules must require the assistance of one or more assessors⁶ and, if any question as to the cancellation or suspension of an officer's certificate is likely, the assistance of not less than two assessors⁷.

If, as a result of the investigation, the wreck commissioner is satisfied, with respect to any officer, of any of the following matters⁸, that is say:

- 1103 (1) that the officer is unfit to discharge his duties, whether by reason of incompetence or misconduct or for any other reason⁹;
- 1104 (2) that the officer has been seriously negligent in the discharge of his duties¹⁰;
or
- 1105 (3) that the officer has failed to comply with his duty¹¹ to assist in case of collision¹², and, if it is a matter mentioned in heads (1) or (2) above, is further satisfied that it caused or contributed to the accident, he may cancel or suspend any certificate issued to the officer¹³ or censure him; and, if he cancels or suspends the certificate, the officer must deliver it forthwith to him or to the Secretary of State¹⁴. If a person fails to deliver a cancelled or suspended certificate as so required, he is guilty of an offence¹⁵.

Where a certificate has been so cancelled or suspended, the Secretary of State, if of the opinion that the justice of the case requires it, may reissue the certificate or, as the case may be, reduce the period of suspension and return the certificate, or may grant a new certificate of the same or a lower grade in place of the cancelled or suspended certificate¹⁶.

The wreck commissioner may make such awards as he thinks just with regard to the costs of the investigation and of any parties at the investigation, and with regard to the parties by whom those costs are to be paid; and any such award of the wreck commissioner may, on the application of any party named in it, be made an order of the High Court¹⁷. Any costs directed by an award to be paid are to be assessed in the High Court¹⁸.

The wreck commissioner must make a report on the investigation to the Secretary of State¹⁹.

1 For these purposes, 'accident' means any accident to which regulations under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 267 (see PARA 845) apply or any incident or situation to which any such regulations apply by virtue of s 267(5) (see PARA 845): see s 268(1).

857. Power to make rules for the conduct of formal investigations.

The Secretary of State¹ may make rules for the conduct of formal investigations² and for the conduct of any rehearing³ which is not held by the High Court⁴.

Such rules may provide⁵ for the appointment and summoning of assessors⁶, the manner in which any facts may be proved, the persons allowed to appear, and the notices to be given to persons affected⁷.

Rules of court made for the purpose of rehearings⁸ which are held by the High Court, or of appeals to the High Court, may require the court, subject to such exceptions, if any, as may be allowed by the rules, to hold such a rehearing or hear such an appeal with the assistance of one or more assessors⁹.

4 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 270(1). At the date at which this volume states the law, no such rules had been made but, by virtue of the Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b), the Merchant Shipping (Formal Investigations) Rules 1985, SI 1985/1001 (see PARA 858 et seq) have effect as if so made. The Merchant Shipping (Formal Investigations) Rules 1985, SI 1985/1001, apply to any formal investigation and to any rehearing of such a formal investigation under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 269 (see PARA 871) which is not held by the High Court: Merchant Shipping (Formal Investigations) Rules 1985, SI 1985/1001, r 3; Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b).

858. Wreck commissioners and assessors.

Where it appears to the Secretary of State¹ that a formal investigation² should be held into the circumstances or causes of, or into any particular matter relating to, an accident, he may direct that a formal investigation be held and conducted in accordance with the rules which govern such investigations³ by a wreck commissioner⁴. The wreck commissioner must be assisted by one or more assessors appointed by the Lord Chancellor⁵.

The Lord Chancellor must maintain a list of assessors who have the required qualifications⁶ and may at any time add or withdraw the name of any person to or from the list⁷.

If any question as to the cancellation or suspension of an officer's⁸ certificate is likely to arise, the wreck commissioner must be assisted by not less than two assessors⁹:

- 1106 (1) two of whom must be, in the case of a master or deck officer, mercantile marine masters¹⁰;
- 1107 (2) one of whom must be, in the case of a marine engineer officer, a mercantile marine engineer, and one a mercantile marine master¹¹;
- 1108 (3) one of whom must be, in the case of a fishing vessel officer, a mercantile marine master and one a fishing vessel skipper¹²; and in any such case where a question as to the cancellation or suspension of an officer's certificate is likely to arise, wherever possible at least one of the assessors appointed must have had experience in the same capacity and in the same type of ship as the officer concerned¹³.

860. Notice of investigation; parties to the investigation.

When the Secretary of State¹ causes a formal investigation² to be held, the Attorney General³ must cause a notice (a 'notice of investigation') to be served on any persons, including the Department of Transport⁴, who in the opinion of the Attorney General ought to be made a party⁵; and any such person upon whom a notice of investigation has been served is a party to the formal investigation⁶. The Attorney General must be a party to the formal investigation⁷.

The notice of investigation must contain a statement of the facts giving rise to the formal investigation and a statement of the questions which the Attorney General intends to raise at the formal investigation⁸. At any time before or during the hearing of the formal investigation the Attorney General may amend, add to or omit any of the questions contained in the notice of investigation⁹.

The Attorney General must, as far as practicable, cause every party to the formal investigation to be given not less than 30 days' notice of the time of and the date when and the place where the hearing of the formal investigation will commence, provided that such notice is not required to be given to any person who is made a party¹⁰ after the date of the hearing has been fixed¹¹.

If at any time during the preparation for the formal investigation it appears likely to the Attorney General that the conduct of any person will be in issue, the Attorney General must cause that person to be notified to that effect¹².

Service of any notice or other document so issued¹³ may be effected either personally or by registered post or by the recorded delivery service to the person's last known address¹⁴.

Any person who is not already a party to a formal investigation may, with the leave of the wreck commissioner¹⁵, become a party to the formal investigation¹⁶. Application for such leave may be made to the wreck commissioner at any time before or during the formal investigation¹⁷.

A party may give to any other party notice in writing to admit any documents, saving all just exceptions, and in case of neglect or refusal to admit after such notice, the party so neglecting or refusing is liable for all the costs of proving the documents, whatever may be the result, unless the wreck commissioner is of opinion that the refusal to admit was reasonable⁶; and no costs of proving any document may be allowed unless such notice has been given, except where the omission to give the notice has, in the opinion of an officer by whom the costs are assessed, caused a saving of expense⁷.

Every formal investigation¹ must be conducted in such manner that, if substantial criticism² is made against any person, that person has an opportunity of making his defence either in person or otherwise³.

1 As to the meaning of 'formal investigation' see PARA 858 note 2.

2 For these purposes, 'substantial criticism' means criticism which in the opinion of the wreck commissioner is substantial criticism: Merchant Shipping (Formal Investigations) Rules 1985, SI 1985/1001, r 2(1).

866. Addresses to the wreck commissioner after taking of evidence.

Any of the parties who desires so to do may, after completion of the taking of evidence, address the wreck commissioner¹ upon the evidence; and the Attorney General² may address the wreck commissioner in reply upon the whole case³. After this address in reply upon the whole case, at the discretion of the wreck commissioner, an officer⁴ of whose conduct substantial criticism⁵ has been made during the formal investigation⁶ may be permitted or invited to make a final statement as to why, in the event of a finding that his conduct caused or contributed to the accident, his certificate of competency should not be cancelled or suspended, or as to why he should not be censured⁷.

At the end of the formal investigation¹ the wreck commissioner² must:

- 1109 (1) in any case where an officer's³ certificate is in issue, give his decision concerning the certificate in public⁴;
- 1110 (2) whether or not a certificate is in issue, make a report on the case to the Secretary of State⁵ including his and the assessor's, or assessors', findings as to the reasons for the accident⁶ or as to any particular matter relating thereto, or as to the conduct or any person implicated therein, and the reason for suspending or cancelling any officer's certificate⁷.

Each assessor¹ must either sign the report with or without reservations, or state in writing his dissent therefrom and his reasons for such dissent; and such dissent and reasons, if any, must be forwarded to the Secretary of State² with the report³. The Secretary of State must, unless in the interests of justice or otherwise in the public interest there are good reasons to the contrary, cause each party to the formal investigation⁴ to be given a copy of the whole or, where appropriate, the relevant part of the report⁵.

Further copies of the report must not be released until the Secretary of State is satisfied that the parties have had reasonable time to receive and read their copies⁶.

(iii) Rehearings and Appeals

871. Rehearing of and appeal from investigations.

Where a formal investigation has been held¹, the Secretary of State² may order the whole or part of the case to be reheard³; and he must do so:

- 1111 (1) if new and important evidence which could not be produced at the investigation has been discovered⁴; or
- 1112 (2) if there appear to the Secretary of State to be other grounds for suspecting that a miscarriage of justice may have occurred⁵.

Such an order may provide for the rehearing to be by a wreck commissioner⁶ or by the High Court⁷; and any such rehearing which is not held by the High Court must be conducted in accordance with rules made⁸ by the Secretary of State in relation to marine investigations and appeals⁹.

Where the wreck commissioner holding the investigation has decided to cancel or suspend the certificate of any person or has found any person at fault, then, if no application for an order to rehear the formal investigation¹⁰ has been made, or if such an application has been refused, that person or any other person who, having an interest in the investigation, has appeared at the hearing and is affected by the decision or finding, may appeal to the High Court¹¹. Also, where a certificate has been so cancelled or suspended, the Secretary of State, if of the opinion that the justice of the case requires it, may reissue the certificate or, as the case may be, reduce the period of suspension and return the certificate, or may grant a new certificate of the same or a lower grade in place of the cancelled or suspended certificate¹².

The discretion to be exercised in relation to the incidence of the costs of participation of a party to a formal investigation or rehearing of the formal investigation must have regard to the application of relevant public policy factors¹³.

872. Procedure.

Any rehearing of a formal investigation¹ which is not held by the High Court must be conducted in accordance with the provisions of rules governing formal investigations².

Where:

- 1113 (1) any person dies in a United Kingdom ship¹ or in a boat or life-raft from such a ship²; or
- 1114 (2) the master³ of, or a seaman⁴ employed in, such a ship dies in a country outside the United Kingdom⁵, an inquiry into the cause of the death must be held by a superintendent⁶ or proper officer⁷ at the next port⁸ where the ship calls after the death and where there is a superintendent or proper officer, or at such other place as the Secretary of State⁹ may direct¹⁰.

Where it appears to the Secretary of State that:

- 1115 (a) in consequence of an injury sustained or a disease contracted by a person when he was the master of or a seaman employed in a United Kingdom ship, he ceased to be employed in the ship and subsequently died¹¹; and
- 1116 (b) the death occurred in a country outside the United Kingdom during the period of one year beginning with the day on which he so ceased¹², the Secretary of State may arrange for an inquiry into the cause of the death to be held by a superintendent or proper officer¹³.

Where it appears to the Secretary of State that a person may:

- 1117 (i) have died in a United Kingdom ship or in a boat or life-raft from such a ship¹⁴; or
- 1118 (ii) have been lost from such a ship, boat or life-raft and have died in consequence of being so lost¹⁵, the Secretary of State may arrange for an inquiry to be held by a superintendent or proper officer into whether the person died as mentioned above and, if the superintendent or officer finds that he did, into the cause of the death¹⁶.

The superintendent or proper officer holding the inquiry has, for the purpose of the inquiry, the powers conferred¹⁷ on an inspector¹⁸.

The person holding the inquiry must make a report of his findings to the Secretary of State who must make the report available¹⁹:

- 1119 (A) if the person to whom the report relates was employed in the ship and a person was named as his next of kin in the crew agreement²⁰ or list of the crew in which the name of the person to whom the report relates last appeared, to the person so named²¹;

1120 (B) in any case, to any person requesting it who appears to the Secretary of State to be interested²².

The main body of English common law relating to civil salvage was decided during the nineteenth century, to a large extent through the judgments of Dr Lushington¹, and subsequently developed during the twentieth century². Apart from augmentation by a few statutory provisions³, English common law has hitherto⁴ formed the sole basis for the interpretation of English salvage law⁵.

It seems to have been well recognised that the 1910 Convention reflected the general principles of English salvage law already being applied by the Admiralty courts in England³.

1 I.e. the International Convention for the Unification of Certain Rules of Law respecting Assistance and Salvage at Sea 1910 (Brussels, 23 September 1910; TS 4 (1913); Cd 6677) (the 'Salvage Convention 1910').

2 I.e. the Salvage Convention 1910 art 6 (apportionment of salvage remuneration between (inter alios) owner, master and crew), art 10 (two-year time limit for bringing salvage actions) and art 11 (duty of master to render assistance to persons found at sea in danger of being lost) were enacted in the Maritime Conventions Act 1911 ss 6-8 (repealed).

878. The International Convention on Salvage 1989.

The International Convention on Salvage 1989¹ was open for signature at the headquarters of the International Maritime Organisation² from 1 July 1989 to 30 June 1990 and thereafter remains open for accession³.

States may express their consent to be bound by the 1989 Convention by⁴:

- 1001 (1) signature without reservation as to ratification, acceptance or approval⁵;
- 1002 (2) signature subject to ratification, acceptance or approval, followed by acceptance or approval⁶; or
- 1003 (3) accession⁷.

Ratification, acceptance, approval or accession is effected by the deposit of an instrument to that effect with the Secretary General of the International Maritime Organisation⁸.

The International Convention on Salvage 1989 entered into force on 1 July 1996, one year after the date on which 15 states had expressed their consent to be bound by it⁹. For a state which expresses its consent to be so bound after the conditions for entry into force thereof have been met, such consent takes effect one year after the date of expression of such consent¹⁰.

Any state may, at the time of signature, ratification, acceptance, approval or accession, reserve the right not to apply certain provisions of the International Convention on Salvage 1989¹¹.

The International Convention on Salvage 1989 may be denounced by any state party at any time after the expiry of one year from the date on which that Convention enters into force for that state¹². Denunciation is effected by the deposit of an instrument of denunciation with the Secretary General of the International Maritime Organisation¹³. A denunciation takes effect one year, or such longer period as may be specified in the instrument of denunciation, after the receipt of the instrument of denunciation by the Secretary General¹⁴.

A conference for the purpose of revising or amending the International Convention on Salvage 1989 may be convened by the International Maritime Organisation¹⁵. The Secretary General of the International Maritime Organisation must convene a conference of states parties for revising or amending that Convention, at the request of eight states parties, or one-fourth of the states parties, whichever is the higher figure¹⁶. Any consent to be bound by the International Convention on Salvage 1989 after the date of entry into force of an amendment to that Convention is deemed to apply to that Convention as amended¹⁷.

The International Convention on Salvage 1989 must be deposited with the Secretary General of the International Maritime Organisation¹⁸; and he must inform all states which have signed that Convention or acceded thereto, and all members of the International Maritime Organisation, of:

- 1004 (a) each new signature or deposit of an instrument of ratification, acceptance, approval or accession together with the date thereof¹⁹;
- 1005 (b) the date of the entry into force of that Convention²⁰;
- 1006 (c) the deposit of any instrument of denunciation of that Convention together with the date on which it is received and the date on which the denunciation takes effect²¹;
- 1007 (d) any amendment duly adopted²²;

1008 (e) the receipt of any reservation, declaration or notification made under that Convention²⁴.

The Secretary General must also transmit certified true copies of the International Convention on Salvage 1989 to all states which have signed that Convention or acceded thereto²⁵.

As soon as the International Convention on Salvage 1989 entered into force, a certified true copy thereof had to be transmitted by the Depositary to the Secretary General of the United Nations for registration and publication in accordance with²⁶ the Charter of the United Nations²⁷.

The International Convention on Salvage 1989 is established in a single original in the Arabic, Chinese, English, French, Russian and Spanish languages, each text being equally authentic²⁸.

880. Relationship between the International Convention on Salvage 1989 and the pre-existing common law.

There is no authority in point as to whether the common law of salvage¹ has been superseded in its entirety by the International Convention on Salvage 1989², and there is no statement in the Convention to suggest that its provisions are intended to be exhaustive of salvage law³.

It is apprehended that it would still be correct for English courts to refer to the pre-existing principles of salvage law in interpreting and applying the 1989 Convention⁴, provided that, in doing so, the courts proceed on the basis that the 1989 Convention now represents the law and that pre-existing common law principles are to be considered in relation to the 1989 Convention and not vice versa⁵. It is submitted also that domestic laws may supplement Convention rights to the extent that the former do not conflict with the latter⁶.

(ii) Jurisdiction

881. Admiralty jurisdiction regarding salvage claims.

The Admiralty jurisdiction of the High Court¹ includes jurisdiction to hear and determine any claim:

- 1011 (1) under the Salvage Convention 1989²;
- 1012 (2) under any contract for or in relation to salvage services³; or
- 1013 (3) in the nature of salvage not falling within head (1) or head (2) above⁴, or any corresponding claim in connection with an aircraft⁵. The jurisdiction extends to all ships, whether British or not and whether registered or not and wherever the residence or domicile of their owners may be, and to all claims wherever arising (including, in the case of cargo or wreck salvage, claims in respect of cargo or wreck found on land)⁶.

The High Court originally acquired jurisdiction in respect of claims for salvage of property from the inherent jurisdiction of the Admiralty Court⁷. The jurisdiction to award salvage for services in the preservation of life is, except where some property is also salvaged, entirely statutory⁸.

1 As to the Admiralty jurisdiction of the High Court of Justice generally see PARA 85 et seq. As to the mode of exercise of this jurisdiction see the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 21; and PARAS 93-94. The Admiralty jurisdiction of the High Court extends also to hovercraft: see PARA 87.

2 Supreme Court Act 1981 s 20(1)(a), (2)(j)(i) (s 20(2)(j) substituted by the Merchant Shipping (Salvage and Pollution) Act 1994 s 1(6), Sch 2 para 6(2)). For these purposes, the 'Salvage Convention 1989' means the International Convention on Salvage 1989 (London, 28 April 1989; Cm 1526) (as to which see PARA 8) as it has effect under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 224 (as to which see PARAS 879, 891 et seq); Supreme Court Act 1981 s 20(6)(a) (s 20(6) substituted by the Merchant Shipping (Salvage and Pollution) Act 1994 Sch 2 para 6(3); Supreme Court Act 1981 s 20(6)(a) amended by the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 314(2), Sch 13 para 59(2) (c)).

3 Supreme Court Act 1981 s 20(1)(a), (2)(j)(ii) (as substituted: see note 2). For these purposes, the reference to salvage services includes services rendered in saving life from a ship, and the reference to any claim under any contract for or in relation to salvage services includes any claim arising out of such a contract whether or not arising during the provision of the services: s 20(6)(b) (as substituted: see note 2). As to the meaning of 'ship' for these purposes see PARA 85 note 7. As to salvage generally see PARA 876 et seq.

4 Supreme Court Act 1981 s 20(1)(a), (2)(j)(iii) (as substituted: see note 2). As to whether the wording of head (3) in the text preserves the common law of salvage which predated the enactment of the International Convention on Salvage 1989 into English law see PARA 880.

5 Supreme Court Act 1981 s 20(1)(a), (2)(j) (as substituted: see note 2). The reference to a corresponding claim in connection with an aircraft is a reference to any claim corresponding to any claim in head (1) or in head (2) in the text which is available under the Civil Aviation Act 1982 s 87 (application of law of wreck and salvage to aircraft) (see AIR LAW vol 2 (2008) PARA 599); Supreme Court Act 1981 s 20(6)(c) (as substituted: see note 2). As to salvage in respect of aircraft see PARA 114.

6 See the Supreme Court Act 1981 s 20(7)(a), (b); and PARA 86.

882. Preservation of Cinque ports' jurisdiction in relation to salvage.

Nothing in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 provisions relating to salvage¹ prejudices or affects any jurisdiction or powers of Lord Warden or any officers of the Cinque ports² or of any court of those ports or of any court having concurrent jurisdiction within the boundaries of those ports; and disputes as to salvage arising without those boundaries are to be determined³ in the manner in which they have been hitherto determined⁴.

(iii) The Merchant Shipping Act 1995

A. MEANING OF 'SALVAGE'

883. Meaning of 'salvage'.

'Salvage' may signify either the service rendered by a salvor or the reward payable to him for his service¹.

For the purposes of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995², 'salvage' includes, subject to the Salvage Convention³, all expenses properly incurred by the salvor⁴ in the performance of the salvage services⁵.

Liability for death or personal injury resulting from negligence cannot be excluded or restricted in a contract of marine salvage⁶.

1 The law of salvage which is here discussed is sometimes termed 'civil salvage', to distinguish it from 'prize salvage' (or 'salvage recapture'), which is payment in respect of ships, aircraft or goods belonging to a British subject which are recaptured after having been taken as prize by the enemy: see PRIZE vol 36(2) (Reissue) PARA 842 et seq. See also Abbott's Law of Merchant Ships and Seamen (14th Edn) 960 et seq. The term 'salvage' is also applied to the salvaged property in matters relating to insurance: see eg INSURANCE vol 25 (2003 Reissue) PARA 640 et seq. As to the expenses of the salvor see PARA 957.

2 In the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Pt IX (ss 224-255) (see PARA 884 et seq): see s 255(1).

3 As to the meaning of 'Salvage Convention' see PARA 891 note 1.

4 For these purposes, 'salvor' means, in the case of salvage services rendered by the officers or crew or part of the crew of any ship belonging to Her Majesty, the person in command of the ship: Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 255(1). As to the meaning of 'ship' see PARA 229. As to government ships see PARA 20.

B. POWERS OF RECEIVER OF WRECK

884. Valuation of property by receiver.

In the absence of agreement, the value of the salvaged property is usually assessed¹ at the time and place when and where the salvage operations ended².

Where any dispute as to salvage³ arises, the receiver⁴ may, on the application of either party, appoint a valuer to value the property⁵.

When the valuation has been made, the receiver must give copies of it to both parties⁶. A copy of the valuation purporting to be signed by the valuer, and to be certified as a true copy by the receiver, is admissible as evidence in any subsequent proceedings⁷.

There must be paid in respect of the valuation by the person applying for it such fee as the Secretary of State⁸ may direct⁹.

1 In assessing the value, allowance is made for any salvage reward ordered by another court to be paid to other salvors out of the proceeds of the salvaged property: The Antelope (1873) LR 4 A & E 33, 1 Asp MLC 513.

3 As to the meaning of 'salvage' see PARA 883.

4 For these purposes, 'receiver' means a receiver of wrecks appointed under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 248 (see PARA 988): s 255(1).

5 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 225(1). Section 225 is excluded by s 230 (salvage claims against the Crown): see PARA 890.

885. Detention of property liable to salvage by receiver.

Where salvage¹ is due to any person², the receiver³ must⁴:

1014 (1) if the salvage is due in respect of services rendered in assisting a vessel⁵, or in saving life from a vessel, or in saving the cargo and equipment of a vessel, detain the vessel and cargo or equipment⁶; and

1015 (2) if the salvage is due in respect of the saving of any wreck⁷, and the wreck is not sold as unclaimed⁸, detain the wreck⁹.

The receiver must detain the vessel and the cargo and equipment, or the wreck, as the case may be, until payment is made for salvage, or process is issued for the arrest or detention of the property by the court¹⁰. However, the receiver may release any property so detained if security is given¹¹:

1016 (a) to his satisfaction¹²; or

1017 (b) where the claim for salvage exceeds £5,000, and any question is raised as to the sufficiency of the security, to the satisfaction of the court¹³.

Any security so given for salvage to an amount exceeding £5,000 may be enforced by the court in the same manner as if bail had been given in that court¹⁴.

885 Detention of property liable to salvage by receiver

NOTE 4--Supreme Court Act 1981 now cited as Senior Courts Act 1981: Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Sch 11 para 1 (in force 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604).

Halsbury's Laws of England/SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW (VOLUME 93 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-590; VOLUME 94 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 591-1254)/10. SALVAGE AND WRECK/(1) SALVAGE/(iii) The Merchant Shipping Act 1995/B. POWERS OF RECEIVER OF WRECK/886. Sale of detained property by receiver.

886. Sale of detained property by receiver.

The receiver¹ may sell any detained property² if the persons liable to pay the salvage³ in respect of which the property is detained are aware of the detention, in the following cases⁴, namely:

- 1018 (1) where the amount is not disputed, and payment of the amount due is not made within 20 days after the amount is due⁵;
- 1019 (2) where the amount is disputed, but no appeal lies from the first court to which the dispute is referred, and payment is not made within 20 days after the decision of the first court⁶;
- 1020 (3) where the amount is disputed and an appeal lies from the decision of the first court to some other court, and within 20 days of the decision of the first court neither payment of the sum due is made nor proceedings are commenced for an appeal⁷.

The proceeds of sale of detained property must, after payment of the expenses of the sale, be applied by the receiver in payment of the expenses, fees and salvage and any excess must be paid to the owners of the property or any other persons entitled to it⁸.

C. APPORTIONMENT OF SALVAGE

887. Apportionment of salvage under £5,000 by receiver.

Where:

1021 (1) the aggregate amount of salvage¹ payable in respect of salvage services rendered in United Kingdom waters² has been finally determined and does not exceed £5,000³; but

1022 (2) a dispute arises as to the apportionment of the amount among several claimants⁴, the person liable to pay the amount may apply to the receiver⁵ for leave to pay it to him⁶.

The receiver must, if he thinks fit, receive the amount and, if he does, he must give the person paying it a certificate stating the amount paid and the services in respect of which it is paid⁷. Such a certificate is a full discharge and indemnity to the person by whom it was paid, and to his vessel⁸, cargo, equipment and effects against the claims of all persons in respect of the services mentioned in the certificate⁹.

The receiver must with all convenient speed distribute any amount so received by him¹⁰ among the persons entitled to it, on such evidence, and in such shares and proportions, as he thinks fit¹¹. Any such decision by the receiver must be made on the basis of the criteria for fixing the reward contained in the Salvage Convention¹².

The receiver may retain any money which appears to him to be payable to any person who is absent¹³.

A distribution so made by a receiver¹⁴ is final and conclusive as against all persons claiming to be entitled to any part of the amount distributed¹⁵.

- 1025 (3) in either case, any delay or dispute arises as to the apportionment of the amount⁵, the court⁶ may cause the amount of salvage to be apportioned among the persons entitled to it in such manner as it thinks just⁷. Any such decision of the court must be made on the basis of the criteria for fixing the reward in the Salvage Convention⁸.

For the purpose of making that apportionment, the court may:

- 1026 (a) appoint any person to carry that apportionment into effect⁹;
- 1027 (b) compel any person in whose hands or under whose control the amount may be to distribute it or to pay it into court to be dealt with as the court directs¹⁰; and

3 The court's power to apportion the amount of salvage remuneration amongst the salvors is now derived from the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 229(1)-(3): see PARA 888. As to the Admiralty jurisdiction of the High Court in relation to salvage etc see PARAS 113-114.

Subject to the statutory provisions relating to the exclusion of proceedings in rem against the Crown¹, so far as consistent with the Salvage Convention², the law relating to civil salvage³, whether of life or property, except for the provisions relating to the sale of detained property by the receiver⁴, the apportionment of salvage under £5,000 by the receiver⁵ and the apportionment of salvage by the court⁶, apply in relation to salvage services in assisting any of Her Majesty's ships⁷, or in saving life therefrom, or in saving any cargo or equipment belonging to Her Majesty in right of Her government in the United Kingdom, in the same manner as if the ship, cargo or equipment belonged to a private person⁸.

Where salvage services are rendered by or on behalf of Her Majesty, whether in right of Her government in the United Kingdom or otherwise, Her Majesty is entitled to claim salvage in respect of those services to the same extent as any other salvor, and has the same rights and remedies in respect of those services as any other salvor⁹.

No claim for salvage services by the commander or crew, or part of the crew, of any of Her Majesty's ships may be finally adjudicated upon without the consent of the Secretary of State¹⁰ to the prosecution of the claim¹¹; and any document purporting to give the consent of the Secretary of State for those purposes and to be signed by an officer of the Ministry of Defence is evidence of that consent¹². If a claim is prosecuted without the consent so required, the claim must be dismissed with costs¹³.

A. IN GENERAL

891. The International Convention on Salvage 1989.

The provisions of the International Convention on Salvage 1989¹ have the force of law² in the United Kingdom³.

If it appears to Her Majesty in Council that the government of the United Kingdom has agreed to any revision of the Salvage Convention, She may by Order in Council make such modifications of the statutory provisions⁴ as She considers appropriate in consequence of the revision⁵; but nothing in any modification so made affects any rights or liabilities arising out of any salvage operations started or other acts done before the day on which the modification comes into force⁶. A draft of an Order in Council proposed to be so made must not be submitted to Her Majesty in Council unless the draft has been approved by a resolution of each House of Parliament⁷.

1 I.e. the International Convention on Salvage 1989 (London, 28 April 1989; Cm 1526) (as to which see PARA 8), which entered into force on 1 July 1996: see PARA 878. For the purposes of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Pt IX (ss 224-255) (see PARAS 884 et seq, 892 et seq), 'Salvage Convention' has the meaning given by s 224(1): s 255(1).

2 As to the meaning of 'having the force of law' cf The Hollandia [1983] 1 AC 565, [1982] 3 All ER 1141, sub nom The Morviken [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep 1, HL.

3 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 224(1). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 17 note 3. As to the relationship between the Salvage Convention and the pre-existing common law see PARA 880.

The relevant provisions of the Salvage Convention are set out in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 224(1), Sch 11 Pt I (arts 1-27) (see PARA 892 et seq): see s 224(1). However, not all the provisions of the Salvage Convention are set out therein; Sch 11 Pt I does not include art 28 (see PARA 878), art 29 (see PARA 878), art 30 (see PARA 919) or arts 31-34 (see PARA 878). The provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 224(2), Sch 11 Pt II (paras 1-7) (see PARA 920 et seq) have effect in connection with the Salvage Convention, and the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 224(1) has effect subject to the provisions of Sch 11 Pt II (paras 1-7): s 224(2). However, nothing in either s 224(1) or s 224(2) affects any rights or liabilities arising out of any salvage operations started or other acts done before 1 January 1995: s 224(4). The date of 1 January 1995 was the date on which the Merchant Shipping (Salvage and Pollution) Act 1994 s 1 (from which the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 224 derives) was brought into force: see the Merchant Shipping (Salvage and Pollution) Act 1994 (Commencement No 2) Order 1994, SI 1994/2971, art 2, Schedule. As respects any period before the entry into force of the Salvage Convention, any reference therein to a state party to the Salvage Convention was to be read as a reference to the United Kingdom: Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 224(6). As to the making of Orders in Council declaring which states are parties to the Salvage Convention see PARA 892 note 3. As to the meaning of 'salvage' see PARA 883.

5 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 224(3). At the date at which this volume states the law, no such Orders in Council had been made and none has effect as if so made. As to the making of Orders under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 generally see PARA 41.

892. Application of the International Convention on Salvage 1989.

The International Convention on Salvage 1989¹ applies whenever judicial or arbitral proceedings² relating to matters dealt with in the Salvage Convention are brought in a state party³.

¹ I.e. the International Convention on Salvage 1989 (London, 28 April 1989; Cm 1526): see PARA 878. This Convention is referred to in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 as the 'Salvage Convention' (see PARA 891 note 1), and the relevant provisions of the Salvage Convention which have effect in the United Kingdom are set out in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 224(1), Sch 11 Pt I (arts 1-27) (see PARA 891 note 3).

The Salvage Convention applies save to the extent that a contract otherwise provides expressly or by implication: see art 6; and PARA 897. As to salvage controlled by public authorities see PARA 896; as to apportionment between salvors, where the law of the flag of the vessel applies, see PARA 906; and as to the relationship between the Salvage Convention and the pre-existing common law see PARA 880.

² For these purposes, references to judicial proceedings are references to proceedings, in England and Wales, in the High Court or the county court; and any reference to the tribunal having jurisdiction, so far as it refers to judicial proceedings, is to be construed accordingly: Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 224(2), Sch 11 Pt II para 6. As to the meanings of 'England' and 'Wales' see PARA 17 note 2.

³ International Convention on Salvage 1989 art 2. See note 1. An Order in Council made for these purposes and declaring that any state specified in the Order is a party to the Salvage Convention in respect of a specified country is conclusive evidence, subject to the provisions of any subsequent Order made for these purposes, that the state is a party to the Salvage Convention in respect of that country: Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 11 Pt II para 7(1). For these purposes, 'country' includes territory: Sch 11 Pt II para 7(2). At the date at which this volume states the law, no such Order in Council had been made and none has effect as if so made. As to the meaning of references in the Salvage Convention to a state party as respects any period before the entry into force of the Salvage Convention see PARA 891 note 3.

Halsbury's Laws of England/SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW (VOLUME 93 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-590; VOLUME 94 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 591-1254)/10. SALVAGE AND WRECK/(1) SALVAGE/(iv) The Salvage Convention 1989/A. IN GENERAL/893. Meaning of 'salvage operation'.

893. Meaning of 'salvage operation'.

For the purposes of the International Convention on Salvage 1989¹, 'salvage operation'² means any act or activity undertaken to assist a vessel³ or any other property⁴ in danger⁵ in navigable waters or in any other waters whatsoever⁶.

1 The International Convention on Salvage 1989 (London, 28 April 1989; Cm 1526): see PARA 878. This Convention is referred to in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 as the 'Salvage Convention' (see PARA 891 note 1), and the relevant provisions of the Salvage Convention which have effect in the United Kingdom are set out in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 224(1), Sch 11 Pt I (arts 1-27) (see PARA 891 note 3).

The Salvage Convention applies save to the extent that a contract otherwise provides expressly or by implication: see art 6; and PARA 897. As to salvage controlled by public authorities see PARA 896; and as to the relationship between the Salvage Convention and the pre-existing common law see PARA 880.

2 'Salvor' is not defined in the International Convention on Salvage 1989 but presumably means any person who performs salvage operations which have had a useful result and is not precluded under the provisions of the Salvage Convention from claiming the reward. Cf the meaning of 'salvor' in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 255(1) (as to which see PARA 883 note 4).

3 For these purposes, 'vessel' means any ship or craft or any structure capable of navigation: see the International Convention on Salvage 1989 art 1(b). In this context, see also Gas Float Whitton No 2 [1895] P 301, DC; on appeal [1896] P 42, 8 Asp MLC 110, CA; affd sub nom Wells v Gas Float Whitton No 2 (Owners), The Gas Float Whitton No 2 [1897] AC 337, 8 Asp MLC 272, HL (cited in PARA 926). As to the exclusion of platforms and drilling units on location see PARA 894; as to the exclusion of state-owned vessels see PARA 895; and as to the reservation in the case of maritime cultural property of prehistoric, archaeological or historic interest situated on the sea bed see PARA 919.

4 For these purposes, 'property' means any property not permanently and intentionally attached to the shoreline and includes freight at risk: International Convention on Salvage 1989 art 1(c).

5 The traditional requirement of danger to property is thus preserved. As to danger to property at common law see PARAS 928, 929.

6 International Convention on Salvage 1989 art 1(a). See note 1. Thus, under art 1(a) salvage is not restricted to tidal waters. The provisions of the Salvage Convention do not, however, apply to a salvage operation which takes place in inland waters of the United Kingdom and in which all the vessels involved are of inland navigation, and to a salvage operation which takes place in inland waters of the United Kingdom and in which no vessel is involved: see the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 224(2), Sch 11 Pt II para 2; and PARA 920. It is submitted, therefore, that the decision in The Goring [1988] AC 831, [1988] 1 All ER 641, [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep 397, HL (salvage in non-tidal waters) still applies.

Halsbury's Laws of England/SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW (VOLUME 93 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-590; VOLUME 94 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 591-1254)/10. 894. Application of the International Convention on Salvage 1989 to platforms and drilling units.

The International Convention on Salvage 1989¹ does not apply to fixed or floating platforms or to mobile offshore drilling units when such platforms or units are on location engaged in the exploration, exploitation or production of sea-bed mineral resources².

1 The International Convention on Salvage 1989 (London, 28 April 1989; Cm 1526): see PARA 878. This Convention is referred to in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 as the 'Salvage Convention' (see PARA 891 note 1), and the relevant provisions of the Salvage Convention which have effect in the United Kingdom are set out in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 224(1), Sch 11 Pt I (arts 1-27) (see PARA 891 note 3).

The Salvage Convention applies save to the extent that a contract otherwise provides expressly or by implication: see art 6; and PARA 897. As to salvage controlled by public authorities see PARA 896; and as to the relationship between the Salvage Convention and the pre-existing common law see PARA 880.

2 International Convention on Salvage 1989 art 3. See note 1. Thus, fixed or floating platforms or mobile offshore drilling units which are not on location engaged in the exploration, exploitation or production of sea-bed mineral resources may be the subject of salvage.

Halsbury's Laws of England/SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW (VOLUME 93 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-590; VOLUME 94 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 591-1254)/10. 895. Application of the International Convention on Salvage 1989 to state-owned vessels.

The International Convention on Salvage 1989¹ does not apply² to warships or other non-commercial vessels³ owned or operated by a state and entitled, at the time of salvage operations⁴, to sovereign immunity under generally recognised principles of international law unless that state decides otherwise⁵.

Where a state party⁶ decides to apply the Salvage Convention to such warships or other vessels⁷, it must notify the Secretary General⁸ thereof specifying the terms and conditions of such application⁹.

1 I.e. the International Convention on Salvage 1989 (London, 28 April 1989; Cm 1526): see PARA 878. This Convention is referred to in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 as the 'Salvage Convention' (see PARA 891 note 1), and the relevant provisions of the Salvage Convention which have effect in the United Kingdom are set out in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 224(1), Sch 11 Pt I (arts 1-27) (see PARA 891 note 3).

The Salvage Convention applies save to the extent that a contract otherwise provides expressly or by implication: see art 6; and PARA 897. As to salvage controlled by public authorities see PARA 896; and as to the relationship between the Salvage Convention and the pre-existing common law see PARA 880.

2 I.e. without prejudice to the International Convention on Salvage 1989 art 5 (salvage operations by or under the control of public authorities) (see PARA 896): see art 4(1).

3 As to the meaning of 'vessel' see PARA 893 note 3.

4 As to the meaning of 'salvage operation' see PARA 893.

5 International Convention on Salvage 1989 art 4(1). See note 1. As to salvage claims by and against the Crown see PARA 890. State immunity is governed by the State Immunity Act 1978: see INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS LAW vol 61 (2010) PARA 242 et seq.

6 As to the making of Orders in Council declaring which states are parties to the Salvage Convention see PARA 892 note 3. As to the meaning of references in the Salvage Convention to a state party as respects any period before the entry into force of the Salvage Convention see PARA 891 note 3.

7 I.e. its warships or other vessels described in the International Convention on Salvage 1989 art 4(1) (see the text and notes 1-5): see art 4(2).

8 For these purposes, 'Secretary General' means the Secretary General of the Organisation (International Convention on Salvage 1989 art 1(f)); and 'Organisation' means the International Maritime Organisation (art 1(g)). As to the International Maritime Organisation see PARA 13.

9 International Convention on Salvage 1989 art 4(2). See note 1.

Halsbury's Laws of England/SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW (VOLUME 93 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-590; VOLUME 94 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 591-1254)/10. SALVAGE AND WRECK/(1) SALVAGE/(iv) The Salvage Convention 1989/A. IN GENERAL/896. Salvage operations by or under the control of public authorities.

896. Salvage operations by or under the control of public authorities.

The International Convention on Salvage 1989¹ does not affect any provisions of national law or any international Convention relating to salvage operations² by or under the control of public authorities³. Nevertheless, salvors⁴ carrying out such salvage operations are entitled to avail themselves of the rights and remedies provided for in the Salvage Convention in respect of salvage operations⁵.

The extent to which a public authority under a duty to perform salvage operations may avail itself of the rights and remedies provided for in the Salvage Convention is to be determined by the law of the state where such authority is situated⁶.

897. Salvage contracts.

The International Convention on Salvage 1989¹ applies to any salvage operations² save to the extent that a contract otherwise provides expressly or by implication³.

The master⁴ has the authority to conclude contracts for salvage operations on behalf of the owner of the vessel⁵; and the master or the owner of the vessel has the authority to conclude such contracts on behalf of the owner of the property⁶ on board the vessel⁷.

Nothing in these provisions relating to salvage contracts affects the application of the other Convention provisions relating to the annulment and modification of contracts⁸ nor duties to prevent or minimise damage to the environment⁹.

Any restriction on the application of the International Convention on Salvage 1989 art 6(2) concerning agents would import a practical difficulty and an area of uncertainty into a beneficial provision of an international convention, designed to encourage certainty and remove or reduce delay and haggling, and could leave salvors potentially exposed to the vagaries of ship owners' corporate structures: Ministry of Trade of the Republic of Iraq v Tsavliris Salvage (International) Ltd, The Altair [2008] EWHC 612 (Comm), [2008] 2 Lloyd's Rep 90, [2008] All ER (D) 14 (Apr).

898. Annulment and modification of contracts.

Under the International Convention on Salvage 1989¹, a contract or any terms thereof may be annulled or modified if²:

- 1029 (1) the contract has been entered into under undue influence or the influence of danger and its terms are inequitable³; or
- 1030 (2) the payment⁴ under the contract is in an excessive degree too large or too small for the services actually rendered⁵.

B. PERFORMANCE OF SALVAGE OPERATIONS

899. Duties of the salvor and of the owner and master.

Under the International Convention on Salvage 1989¹, the salvor² owes a duty to the owner of the vessel³ or other property⁴ in danger⁵:

- 1031 (1) to carry out the salvage operations⁶ with due care⁷;
- 1032 (2) in performing the duty specified in head (1) above, to exercise due care to prevent or minimise damage to the environment⁸;
- 1033 (3) whenever circumstances reasonably require, to seek assistance from other salvors⁹; and
- 1034 (4) to accept the intervention of other salvors when reasonably requested to do so by the owner or master¹⁰ of the vessel or other property in danger, provided that the amount of his reward is not prejudiced should it be found that such a request was unreasonable¹¹.

The owner and master of the vessel or the owner of other property in danger owe a duty to the salvor¹²:

- 1035 (a) to co-operate fully with him during the course of the salvage operations¹³;
- 1036 (b) in so doing, to exercise due care to prevent or minimise damage to the environment¹⁴; and
- 1037 (c) when the vessel or other property has been brought to a place of safety, to accept redelivery when reasonably requested by the salvor to do so¹⁵.

Under the International Convention on Salvage 1989¹, a state party² must, whenever regulating or deciding upon matters relating to salvage operations³ such as admittance to ports of vessels⁴ in distress or the provision of facilities to salvors⁵, take into account the need for co-operation between salvors, other interested parties and public authorities in order to ensure the efficient and successful performance of salvage operations for the purpose of saving life or property⁶ in danger as well as preventing damage to the environment⁷ in general⁸.

C. RIGHTS OF SALVORS

903. Conditions for reward under the International Convention on Salvage 1989.

Under the International Convention on Salvage 1989¹, salvage operations² which have had a useful result give right to a reward³. However, except as otherwise provided⁴, no payment⁵ is due under the Salvage Convention if the salvage operations have had no useful result⁶.

The Salvage Convention provisions relating to the rights of salvors⁷ apply, notwithstanding that the salvaged vessel⁸ and the vessel undertaking the salvage operations belong to the same owner⁹.

1 I.e. the International Convention on Salvage 1989 (London, 28 April 1989; Cm 1526): see PARA 878. This Convention is referred to in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 as the 'Salvage Convention' (see PARA 891 note 1), and the relevant provisions of the Salvage Convention which have effect in the United Kingdom are set out in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 224(1), Sch 11 Pt I (arts 1-27) (see PARA 891 note 3).

The Salvage Convention applies save to the extent that a contract otherwise provides expressly or by implication: see art 6; and PARA 897. As to salvage controlled by public authorities see PARA 896; and as to the relationship between the Salvage Convention and the pre-existing common law see PARA 880.

2 As to the meaning of 'salvage operation' see PARA 893.

3 International Convention on Salvage 1989 art 12(1). Thus, the principle known in English law as the 'requirement of success' is preserved: see PARAS 941, 942. Cf art 13(1)(c) where the expression 'success' rather than 'useful result' is used: see PARA 904. See note 1.

4 See eg where the Lloyd's Standard Form of Salvage Agreement (also known as 'Lloyd's Open Form' (LOF)) and/or the 'SCOPIC' clause apply (cited in PARA 983 et seq).

6 International Convention on Salvage 1989 art 12(2). See note 1. Quaere whether the common law principle of 'engaged services' (see eg The Undaunted (1860) Lush 90; and PARA 942) is still good law; and see note 3. See also the principle of 'No Cure, No Pay' used in the Lloyd's Standard Form of Salvage Agreement ('Lloyd's Open Form'); and PARA 983 et seq.

7 I.e. the International Convention on Salvage 1989 Ch III (arts 12-19) (see PARA 904 et seq): see art 12(3). As to references to 'salvors' see PARA 893 note 2.

8 As to the meaning of 'vessel' see PARA 893 note 3.

9 International Convention on Salvage 1989 art 12(3). See note 1. Article 12(3), which permits a claim for salvage even where the service is provided by a sister ship, constitutes a change from English common law: cf The Caroline (1861) Lush 334; The Goring [1988] AC 831, [1988] 1 All ER 641, [1988] 1 Lloyd's Rep 397, HL; and see PARA 931.

904. Criteria for fixing the reward.

The reward under the International Convention on Salvage 1989¹ must be fixed with a view to encouraging salvage operations², taking into account the following criteria without regard to the order in which they are presented below³:

- 1038 (1) the salved value of the vessel⁴ and other property⁵;
- 1039 (2) the skill and efforts of the salvors⁶ in preventing or minimising damage to the environment⁷;
- 1040 (3) the measure of success⁸ obtained by the salvor⁹;
- 1041 (4) the nature and degree of the danger¹⁰;
- 1042 (5) the skill and efforts of the salvors in salvaging the vessel, other property and life¹¹;
- 1043 (6) the time used and expenses and losses incurred by the salvors¹²;
- 1044 (7) the risk of liability and other risks run by the salvors or their equipment¹³;
- 1045 (8) the promptness of the services rendered¹⁴;
- 1046 (9) the availability and use of vessels or other equipment intended for salvage operations¹⁵;
- 1047 (10) the state of readiness and efficiency of the salvor's equipment and the value thereof¹⁶.

Payment of a reward fixed according to these provisions¹⁷ must be made by all of the vessel and other property interests in proportion to their respective salved values¹⁸. A state party¹⁹ may, however, in its national law provide that the payment of a reward has to be made by one of these interests, subject to a right of recourse of this interest against the other interests for their respective shares²⁰. Nothing in these provisions²¹ prevents any right of defence²².

The rewards, exclusive of any interest and recoverable legal costs that may be payable thereon, must not exceed the salved value of the vessel and other property²³.

904 Criteria for fixing the reward

TEXT AND NOTES 2, 4--As to the encouragement principle and the application of the moderating principle in a case involving high value cargo see Owners of the Vessel 'Ocean Crown' v Five Oceans Salvage Consultants Ltd [2009] EWHC 3040 (Admlty), [2010] 1 Lloyd's Rep 468, [2009] All ER (D) 296 (Nov).

905. Special compensation.

If the salvor¹, under the International Convention on Salvage 1989², has carried out salvage operations³ in respect of a vessel⁴ which by itself or its cargo threatened damage to the environment⁵ and has failed to earn a reward⁶ at least equivalent to the special compensation assessable in accordance with the following provisions, he is entitled to special compensation from the owner of that vessel equivalent to his expenses⁷.

If, in such circumstances, the salvor by his salvage operations has prevented or minimised damage to the environment, the special compensation so payable by the owner to the salvor may be increased up to a maximum of 30% of the expenses incurred by the salvor⁸. However, the tribunal, if it deems it fair and just to do so and bearing in mind the relevant criteria for fixing the reward⁹, may increase such special compensation further, but in no event must the total increase be more than 100% of the expenses incurred by the salvor¹⁰.

The total special compensation assessed under these provisions¹¹ must be paid only if and to the extent that such compensation is greater than any reward recoverable by the salvor¹² under the usual criteria¹³.

If the salvor has been negligent and has thereby failed to prevent or minimise damage to the environment, he may be deprived of the whole or part of any special compensation so due¹⁴.

Nothing in the special compensation provisions¹⁵ affects any right of recourse on the part of the owner of the vessel¹⁶.

For these purposes, 'salvor's expenses' means the out-of-pocket expenses reasonably incurred by the salvor in the salvage operation and a fair rate for equipment and personnel actually and reasonably used in the salvage operation, taking into consideration the criteria set out in art 13(1)(h)-(j) (see PARA 904): art 14(3). See note 2. As to special compensation see further PARA 922.

For the purposes of art 14(3), 'expenses . . . incurred' by a salvor denotes amounts either disbursed or borne, not earned as profits. Accordingly, an award of special compensation under art 14(2) is intended to recompense or reimburse a salvor for his expenses in the event that his direct and standby costs exceed his salvage reward under art 13 (see PARA 904) and is not intended to yield or be a source of profit. It follows that salvors entitled to special compensation for protecting the environment are entitled to a fair rate of expense which is comprehensive of indirect or overhead expenses, including the additional cost of having resources on standby

This Convention is referred to in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 as the 'Salvage Convention' (see PARA 891 note 1), and the relevant provisions of the Salvage Convention which have effect in the United Kingdom are set out in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 224(1), Sch 11 Pt I (arts 1-27) (see PARA 891 note 3).

The Salvage Convention applies save to the extent that a contract otherwise provides expressly or by implication: see art 6; and PARA 897. As to salvage controlled by public authorities see PARA 896; and as to the relationship between the Salvage Convention and the pre-existing common law see PARA 880.

2 As to the making of Orders in Council declaring which states are parties to the Salvage Convention see PARA 892 note 3. As to the meaning of references in the Salvage Convention to a state party as respects any period before the entry into force of the Salvage Convention see PARA 891 note 3.

E. RESERVATIONS

919. In general.

Any state may, at the time of signature, ratification, acceptance, approval or accession, reserve the right not to apply the provisions of the International Convention on Salvage 1989¹, in circumstances when²:

- 1048 (1) the salvage operation³ takes place in inland waters and all vessels⁴ involved are of inland navigation⁵;
- 1049 (2) the salvage operations take place in inland waters and no vessel is involved⁶;
- 1050 (3) all interested parties are nationals of that state⁷;
- 1051 (4) the property⁸ involved is maritime cultural property of prehistoric, archaeological or historic interest and is situated on the sea bed⁹.

Reservations made at the time of signature are subject to confirmation upon ratification, acceptance or approval¹⁰.

Any state which has made a reservation to the Salvage Convention may withdraw it at any time by means of a notification addressed to the Secretary General of the International Maritime Organisation¹¹. Such withdrawal takes effect on the date the notification is received¹². If the notification states that the withdrawal of a reservation is to take effect on a date specified therein, and such date is later than the date the notification is received by the Secretary General, the withdrawal takes effect on such later date¹³.

925. The right to salvage reward.

Maritime law¹ differs from common law in that at common law work and labour voluntarily done or money voluntarily expended by one person to preserve or benefit property which he knows to be that of another does not create any lien on the property saved or benefited, or create any obligation to repay the expenditure².

The common law courts would not entertain an action for salvage unless the salvor could prove a contract of employment, express or implied³, under which reward was due and on which, accordingly, the salvor could recover quantum meruit in the absence of an agreement as to the amount of reward⁴. The right of the salvor in maritime law to salvage reward does not depend on contract, but on the obligation which that law imposes on the owner of property saved, or on persons who have had a benefit arising out of the saving of the property, to remunerate the salvor⁵, although the right often does arise out of, or is accompanied by, contract⁶.

A salvage service rendered to property so circumstanced that a prudent owner of the property would accept the service creates of itself a title to salvage reward⁷; and the fact that an express contract for the performance of salvage services has been entered into by the salvor, who has failed to carry it out, does not preclude him from obtaining salvage reward, if the service rendered by him contributed to some extent to the ultimate safety of the property in danger⁸.

To maintain a claim for salvage reward it is not sufficient that services in the nature of salvage services have been rendered. It is necessary to show that the property in danger, or some part of it, has been ultimately saved, whether the result has been achieved with the aid of the salvage service or by other means⁹; for, if no part of the property in danger is ultimately saved, no salvage reward is recoverable unless by special agreement salvage reward is to be paid independently of the ultimate safety of the property in danger¹⁰.

926. Property the subject of salvage service.

No property other than maritime property¹ can be the subject of a salvage service. 'Maritime property' consists of a vessel², her equipment, cargo or wreck. 'Cargo' includes all merchandise on board the salvaged vessel³. It does not include, so far as regards the liability to arrest and contribution to salvage reward, the personal effects of the master or crew⁴, or the clothes or personal effects of passengers, whether on the person, or taken on board by them for their daily use⁵, or, it would seem, ship's provisions⁶.

Freight in the course of being earned by the carriage of the cargo, that is to say freight at risk, is the subject of salvage if it is earned in consequence of salvage service⁷.

(B) LIFE SALVAGE

927. In general.

Where no property had been saved and life alone had been preserved from destruction, no suit for a salvage reward could be maintained in the Admiralty Court, one reason being that there could be no proceedings in rem, which was the ancient foundation of the salvage suit¹. Where, however, both life and property had been saved it was the practice to give an enhanced award, the enhancement being a reflection of the value of the services rendered in the saving of life².

Statutory provisions were introduced to protect persons who could not be justly compensated because they had saved life only³.

3 See the Merchant Shipping Act 1894 ss 544-546 (repealed). In certain circumstances, a salvor might obtain a true life salvage award under s 544 (repealed) where, even though he himself had rendered no salvage services to ships and cargo (The Bosworth (No 3) [1962] 1 Lloyd's Rep 483), some property was preserved (Nourse v Liverpool Sailing Ship Owners Mutual Protection and Indemnity Association [1896] 2 QB 16, CA; The Bosworth (No 2) [1960] 1 All ER 729, [1961] 1 WLR 319, [1960] 1 Lloyd's Rep 173, CA). See also The Schiller (Cargo ex) (1877) 2 PD 145, CA (where the property salvaged was recovered by divers long after the life services were rendered).

It is apprehended that the former practice of the Admiralty Court is now good law and that there can be no claim for life salvage unless some property is also saved: see the International Convention on Salvage 1989 (London, 28 April 1989; Cm 1526) art 16(2); and PARA 907. (C) DANGER TO PROPERTY OR LIFE

928. Danger requisite.

The essence of a salvage service is that it is a service rendered to property or life in danger¹. The requisite degree of danger is a real and appreciable danger. It must not be merely fanciful, but it need not be immediate or absolute². It is sufficient if at the time of the service the situation of the subject of the service is such as to cause reasonable apprehension on the part of the person in charge of it³. The danger may arise from the condition of the salvaged vessel⁴, or of her crew⁵, from her position, or from the master's want of skill or his ignorance of the locality or of local conditions⁶.

A service which begins as salvage is not necessarily transformed into towage⁷ because on the voyage the ship is towed past, or into, ports at which she could be in safety⁸.

929. Evidence of danger.

The burden of proving the presence of danger rests upon those who claim as salvors¹. The conduct of those on board the salved ship in giving signals of distress or in accepting help may be evidence of the presence of danger². However, the views of experienced personnel on board the salved vessel are relevant only in so far as they shed light on the attitude which would have been adopted by a reasonably prudent and skilful person in charge of the venture; they are not dispositive of the issue of danger which has to be decided objectively³.

Where signals of distress are wrongfully used, compensation is recoverable for any labour undertaken, or risk or loss incurred, by reason of persons accepting and acting on the prescribed signals of distress⁴, and persons who are induced by ambiguous signals to proceed to the assistance of a vessel which is damaged or in danger are entitled to claim as salvors⁵.

SALVAGE AND WRECK/(1) SALVAGE/(v) Common Law Provisions relating to Salvage/A. SALVAGE SERVICES/(D) Personal Service/930. Requirement of personal services.

(D) PERSONAL SERVICE

930. Requirement of personal services.

The general rule is that all those, and only those, who render personal¹ services in the performance of a salvage service are entitled to a salvage reward². To this rule there are, however, certain exceptions.

The rule of personal service does not extend to the associates of the actual salvors or to the owners of the salving vessel. Members of the crew of a vessel³, including a vessel engaged in public service⁴, who remain on board during the performance of salvage services by other members of the crew, taking no part, but willing, if called upon, to take a part in the services, are entitled to a share in the salvage reward⁵. The owner of the salving vessel is also entitled to a salvage award for the use of his vessel⁶.

The charterer may stand in the position of the owner of the salving vessel in this respect; whether he does so or not depends on the terms of the charterparty. If the charterparty amounts to a demise of the vessel⁷, or contains an express provision entitling the charterer to a salvage reward, he is entitled to share as charterer in the reward⁸; otherwise he is not⁹.

Thus, a coastguard officer merely sending off sailors to a vessel in danger (The Vine (1825) 2 Hag Adm 1), or a person who merely hires labourers to assist in unloading a stranded vessel (The Watt (1843) 2 Wm Rob 70), is not a salvor. See also HMS Thetis (1833) 3 Hag Adm 14 at 41, 42, 61.

SALVAGE AND WRECK/(1) SALVAGE/(v) Common Law Provisions relating to Salvage/A. SALVAGE SERVICES/(D) Personal Service/931. Disqualifications from claiming salvage.

931. Disqualifications from claiming salvage.

The owner, charterer and crew of the salving vessel may be disqualified from claiming a salvage reward¹. The owner or the charterer, as the case may be, of the salving vessel is not entitled to claim a salvage reward against the salved vessel if he is also the owner of the salved vessel, or her charterer where the charterparty amounts to a demise²; but he can still claim against the cargo³ on board the salved vessel⁴, unless by the terms of his contract of carriage of the cargo on the salved vessel he is liable for loss or damage to it, and the salvage service rendered was necessary to save it from loss or damage⁵. If, however, only some of part owners of the salving vessel are interested in the salved vessel, the others are entitled to claim a salvage reward⁶. The inability of the owner or charterer of the salving vessel to claim a salvage reward, whether against the ship or against the cargo, in these circumstances, does not affect the right to a salvage reward of the master or the crew of the salving vessel⁷.

If the salvage services were rendered necessary by the faulty navigation of the salving vessel, neither the owner nor the crew can obtain a salvage reward⁸; and in that case no distinction is made between those who were and those who were not responsible for the negligent navigation⁹. Where, however, a vessel has been damaged by collision with a second vessel, caused by the negligence of the second vessel, and is salved by a third vessel, the owner as well as the crew of the salving vessel may be entitled to claim as salvors, even though the owner is also the owner of the vessel at fault for the collision¹⁰.

Where by the custom of a particular trade, or with regard to vessels of a particular port, or by special agreement, the salving and salved vessels are bound to give mutual protection¹¹, no salvage reward is recoverable.

(E) VOLUNTARY SERVICE

932. Voluntariness.

Subject to certain exceptions¹, the salvor's service must be voluntary as between the salvors and the owners of the salved vessel², but it may be the subject of special agreement³. If it is rendered under a general contractual obligation, in pursuance of official duty or solely in the interest of self-preservation, it is not a salvage service⁴. Thus, no claim as salvors may ordinarily⁵ be made by the owner, master, crew and pilot of the salved vessel, or of a tug towing the salved vessel under a contract of towage, the ship's agent, government officials acting within the scope of their duties, and passengers on board the salved vessel for services rendered by them. Insurers who incur expenses which come within the suing and labouring clause of the policy⁶ and persons who are employed under contract with third persons to do work in saving property may likewise be disqualified from obtaining a salvage reward⁷ for their services⁸.

1 Compliance with the statutory obligations as to rendering assistance (see PARA 927) is expressly declared not to prevent the assistance being voluntary for the purpose of salvage reward: see PARA 933.

935. Pilots.

There must be special circumstances of danger attending the performance of the pilot's duties¹ in order to justify a claim by him as a salvor². They may exist at the beginning of the pilotage service³ or they may supervene afterwards⁴. Whenever they occur, they must be of such a character as to make it unjust that the pilot should be paid otherwise than by a salvage reward⁵. The burden of showing that pilotage services were converted into salvage services rests strongly on the pilot⁶.

Where a pilot is called on in any emergency to perform services outside his duties as pilot, as, for example, rendering assistance to a vessel outside his pilotage district, or doing work other than pilotage, he is entitled to be treated as an ordinary salvor⁷.

A ship's agent who renders services in assisting to save the vessel or her cargo may, in spite of his contractual obligation, obtain a salvage reward¹. The admission of such claim is based on public policy². His claim may, it seems, be entertained even where he has incurred no personal risk and has made no extraordinary exertion³.

937. Passengers.

A passenger who remains on board a vessel in danger, being bound by a moral duty as well as by the interest of self-preservation to work for the safety of the vessel, is not entitled to claim as a salvor, unless he elects to remain on board and render assistance where he has the means of leaving, or unless he renders some special service, as, for example, taking command of the vessel¹.

938. Tugs under towage contract.

As regards salvage, the position of a tug under a contract¹ to tow the salved vessel is very similar to that of the pilot of the salved vessel², in that circumstances existing at the beginning of the towage service or supervening afterwards may convert a towage into a salvage service.

If, when the towage contract was entered into, material facts affecting the danger of the tow or the danger or the difficulty of the towage service such as make it unjust to expect the towage service to be undertaken at a towage rate were not disclosed to the owner of the tug or his representative making the contract, the towage contract is disregarded and the service is treated as a salvage service³.

If, also, during the towage the tow becomes in danger, through no fault of the tug, and the tug then renders services in the nature of salvage services such as could not reasonably be held to be within the intention of the parties, by means of which the ship is brought into a place of safety, the towage contract is superseded by the right to salvage reward⁴; but a slight departure from the way in which the towage contract was to be performed does not convert towage services into salvage services⁵, and the strictest proof of the circumstances which lead to such a claim is required⁶.

It used to be the law that, in no case where the danger of the tow has been created or materially contributed to by the misconduct or negligence or lack of reasonable skill or reasonable equipment on the part of the tug will the owner or crew of the tug be entitled to a salvage reward⁷, even though the tow has been guilty of contributory negligence⁸. However, the cases in which these principles were established were decided at a time when fault or contributory fault was a complete bar to any claim⁹. Article 18 of the International Convention on Salvage 1989 now provides that a salvor may be deprived of the whole or part of the payment due for salvage to the extent that the salvage operations have become necessary or more difficult because of fault or neglect on his part¹⁰. Accordingly, the extent to which a salvor may be deprived of salvage remuneration will depend upon the causative potency of his fault in causing the salvage operations to become necessary or more difficult¹¹.

It makes no difference that the tug has acted under a sub-contract, and not under a direct contract between the owner of the tug and the owner of the tow¹².

Magistrates and other persons holding a public office or appointment may only obtain a salvage reward¹ in respect of services clearly outside the scope of their official duties². Employees of a public authority having a statutory duty to remove obstructions to navigation are not thereby excluded from claiming reward in respect of services beyond their ordinary duties as employees of that authority³. Officers and men of Her Majesty's Coastguard have duties with regard to watching for vessels in distress off the coasts, to initiate search and rescue measures for ships in distress and to render life-saving assistance by mustering or informing life-saving organisations and other authorities able to help⁴. If, however, they render services of the nature of salvage services beyond the scope of their official duties, they are entitled to be treated as ordinary salvors in respect of those services⁵.

Foyboatmen performing services involving considerable risk to themselves in conditions in which they would not normally be prepared to ply their ordinary trade may be entitled to salvage reward in respect of those services⁶.

The members of lifeboat crews are paid for services rendered in saving life by the Royal National Lifeboat Institution¹. If, however, when they reach a vessel in distress, their services are required for the salvage of property alone, they are entitled to rank as salvors in respect of those services, being treated as having borrowed the lifeboat for the services, and are liable for any damage to the lifeboat occasioned by the salvage services². In that case lifeboatmen who merely assist in launching the lifeboat may be entitled to reward³.

(F) SUCCESSFUL SERVICE

941. Requirement of success.

To obtain a salvage reward¹ the salvor must, as a general rule, show that his service has been successful². Services, however meritorious, which do not contribute to the ultimate success give no right to reward³. Salvage reward is given for benefits actually conferred, not for a service attempted to be rendered⁴.

The claimant need not, however, prove that his service alone would have produced the ultimate safety of the subject of the service; it is sufficient for him to show that he materially contributed to its ultimate safety⁵, and, where there is a doubt whether a service has contributed to the ultimate safety, the court inclines to the view that the service has so contributed⁶.

No salvage reward is recoverable, however meritorious and hazardous the service may have been, and even though the property or lives in danger may have been ultimately preserved, if, at the termination of the service, the subject of the service has been left in a position not less dangerous than that in which it was at the commencement of the service, or the value at the conclusion of the service was no greater than at the commencement⁷. The mere fact that the claimant brought the ship to a spot where the ultimate salvor found her is not of itself a contribution to the ultimate success⁸.

1 As to salvage rewards see PARA 943 et seq.

2 See PARA 925. The principle known in English law as the requirement of success is preserved: see the International Convention on Salvage 1989 (London, 28 April 1989; Cm 1526) art 12(1) ('useful result'); and PARA 903. 942. Exception to requirement of success.

Where a service has been rendered at the request of the master or other person in charge of a vessel in danger in circumstances from which a promise to pay for the service can be implied, a salvage reward is payable for that service if the vessel is ultimately saved, even though the service did not contribute to its ultimate safety¹. Further, where, after such service has begun, and while those who have undertaken it are ready to complete it, the master of the vessel in danger discontinues the service, the service will be rewarded even though no material benefit has been derived from it². The court may also give some compensation for the loss suffered by reason of the act of the master in preventing the completion of the service³. The reward given in these cases is strictly a salvage reward. It is not assessed on the basis of a contract for work and labour, and, in the absence of express agreement to the contrary, it is contingent, like all other rewards for salvage proper, on the preservation of the property in danger or some part of it⁴.

(A) AGREEMENTS AS TO AMOUNT

943. Agreements in general.

An agreement may be made fixing the amount to be paid to the salvor for his services, but leaving untouched all the other conditions necessary to support a salvage reward, one of which is the preservation of some part at least of the property in peril¹, unless by a special agreement a salvage reward is to be paid independently of the ultimate safety of the property in danger². The usual agreement to render salvage services is on a 'No cure, No pay' basis³.

The agreement need not be in writing⁴, but it must be clearly proved⁵. It must state the services to be performed and the reward for them⁶. An agreement merely to refer to arbitration does not oust the jurisdiction of the court⁷. When duly proved, the agreement is prima facie binding, and the burden of proof lies on the party trying to set it aside⁸. There may be special circumstances in which the master or other person in charge of the property in danger is justified in binding the owner to pay for assistance⁹ independently of the ultimate safety of the property; such an agreement is a valid salvage agreement¹⁰.

SALVAGE AND WRECK/(1) SALVAGE/(v) Common Law Provisions relating to Salvage/B. SALVAGE REWARD/(A) Agreements as to Amount/944. Setting aside salvage agreement.

944. Setting aside salvage agreement.

An agreement as to the amount to be paid to the salvor may be set aside if it has been obtained by fraud¹, or by misstatement or non-disclosure, whether intentional or not², of a material fact, affecting, or not unlikely to affect, the danger of the property, or the risk, difficulty or duration of the salvage service³. Salvors are not held bound by an agreement where supervening circumstances, without the fault of either party, render the performance of the agreed service impossible, or where the service actually rendered was of a wholly different character from the agreed service⁴.

An agreement may also be set aside as being inequitable where the reward fixed by it is exorbitant⁵ or inadequate⁶. Where exorbitancy is the ground of a claim to set aside the agreement, the existence of circumstances showing that the master of the salvaged vessel was virtually compelled to enter into the agreement, although by no means essential⁷, is an important factor in obtaining the avoidance of the agreement⁸. The court does not, however, set aside an agreement merely because it would have awarded a rather larger or smaller sum than that fixed by the agreement, or because, in the events that happened, the services were more or less dangerous, difficult or time-consuming than was anticipated by either party at the time of the making of the agreement⁹, or because the salvaged value turns out to be less than the agreed salvage remuneration¹⁰.

A settlement made after services have been performed is not binding on the salvor if the reward to be paid is very inadequate, and either the salvor did not appreciate the value of his services¹¹ or the circumstances in which the settlement was made are not satisfactorily explained¹² or show that it was made against authority¹³.

The agreement may be cancelled by mutual consent¹⁴, evidenced by express agreement between the parties¹⁵ or by conduct from which the consent will be inferred¹⁶. The burden of proof of cancellation lies on the party setting it up¹⁷.

SALVAGE AND WRECK/(1) SALVAGE/(v) Common Law Provisions relating to Salvage/B. SALVAGE REWARD/(A) Agreements as to Amount/945. Person bound by an agreement as to amount.

945. Person bound by an agreement as to amount.

The owner of the salved ship is generally bound by an agreement as to amount entered into by the master¹, the master having an implied authority to bind his owner for all that is reasonably necessary for the successful navigation of the ship². The shipowner is not bound by it, however, where he was easily accessible and gave no authority to the master to enter into it³, or where in the circumstances the agreement was not reasonably necessary⁴, or where the terms of the agreement show that it is not for the benefit of the shipowner⁵. The implied authority to bind the owner is limited to the master or other person properly acting in command of the ship. To support such an agreement made by any other person strict proof of agency is required⁶.

The owner⁷ of the salving vessel, at least where he is not accessible and the master has no means of communicating with him⁸, and the crew⁹ are bound by a salvage agreement made by the master with regard to future services¹⁰. They are not bound by an agreement made by him after services have been performed in respect of which a right to a salvage reward has arisen¹¹. The owner of the salving vessel has the same limited power to bind the master and crew by a salvage agreement, that is to say he can bind them by agreement as to future, but not as to past services¹². If a salvage agreement is entered into by the master affecting both past and future services, that part of it which relates to the past services will be set aside, and the rest will be given effect to if it is otherwise valid¹³.

The owner of cargo on board the salved vessel is not bound by a salvage agreement made by the master, unless he is acting as the agent of the cargo owner¹⁴ and it is open to him to dispute the reasonableness of the reward fixed by it¹⁵.

Where salvage services are performed by a number of different salvors or sets of salvors, the mere accident of co-operation gives none of the salvors an implied agency to contract with the representatives of the salved vessel on behalf of his co-salvors¹⁶.

(B) AMOUNT FIXED BY THE COURT

946. General principles.

The amount of the salvage reward¹ is limited to the value of the property or the interest in property salvaged². Subject to that limitation, the amount of the reward, unless it is fixed by agreement³, is in the discretion of the court⁴, and, except in cases of absolute necessity, the court which tries the case should also assess the remuneration⁵.

As a general rule, where the owner of the salvaged property appears, the court will not award the salvor more than one-half of the value of the salvaged property, whether the property is derelict⁶ or not⁷. A variation in the exchange rate of a currency is not a relevant factor to take into account in fixing the award for salvage services⁸. The court has power to award interest on a salvage award whether the salvage services were or were not performed under a special contract⁹.

1 As to the criteria for fixing the reward see the International Convention on Salvage 1989 (London, 28 April 1989; Cm 1526) art 13; and PARA 904. As to the relationship between the Salvage Convention and the pre-existing common law see PARA 880.

947. Assessment by the court.

In assessing the reward¹, the court endeavours to combine liberality to the salvor with justice to the owner of the salvaged property². It regards not merely the work done in the performance of the salvage service³, but the general interests of navigation and commerce⁴. Thus, it looks with favour on salvage services rendered by ships built and maintained for salvage services⁵. Because one of the main reasons why salvage remuneration is high is that, unless the vessel in danger is saved, no remuneration is payable at all, salvors who have acted under an agreement which entitled them to remuneration independently of success are not rewarded on the liberal scale applicable to other salvors⁶.

1 As to the criteria for fixing the reward see the International Convention on Salvage 1989 (London, 28 April 1989; Cm 1526) art 13; and PARA 904. As to the relationship between the Salvage Convention and the pre-existing common law see PARA 880.

948. Danger to life.

Apart from the general considerations already mentioned¹, the first consideration which affects the amount of the reward is the existence of danger to life, whether on board the salving or the salvaged vessel, arising either from the position from which the salvaged property has been rescued or from the performance of the salvage service².

1 See PARA 946. As to the criteria for fixing the reward see the International Convention on Salvage 1989 (London, 28 April 1989; Cm 1526) art 13; and PARA 904. As to the relationship between the Salvage Convention and the pre-existing common law see PARA 880.

949. Danger to property.

The degree of danger¹ from which property has been salvaged has a great influence on the amount of the reward². Danger may arise from various causes, for example the character and condition of the salvaged vessel and her cargo, the number, capacity and condition of the crew, the nature of the locality, the master's knowledge of it, the risk of attack by enemy vessels³, the season of the year, the state and prospect of the weather and the absence of other means of salvage. The greatest danger generally attaches to derelict⁴ property.

In some cases of derelict⁵, as much as one-half or thereabouts⁶, and in a few cases of exceptional character more than one-half, of the value of the salvaged property has been awarded⁷, and the award is often one-third of the salvaged value, unless the salvaged value is very large⁸.

1 The nature and degree of the danger is one of the criteria to be taken into account when fixing the reward: see the International Convention on Salvage 1989 (London, 28 April 1989; Cm 1526) art 13(1)(d); and PARA 904. As to the relationship between the Salvage Convention and the pre-existing common law see PARA 880.

4 As to the meaning of 'derelict' see PARA 987.

5 The former practice was to award one-half (see The Blenden Hall (1814) 1 Dods 414 at 421; The Effort (1834) 3 Hag Adm 165 at 167), but now the fact of the salvaged property being derelict is merely an ingredient to be considered in assessing the reward (see Papayanni v Hocquard, The True Blue (1866) LR 1 PC 250 at 256; The Anna Helena (1883) 5 Asp MLC 142; The Janet Court [1897] P 59 at 62, 63, 8 Asp MLC 223 at 224 (three special elements usually present in the case of a derelict are the high degree of danger to property salvaged special difficulty of approaching and aiding her and necessity of supplying part of salvor's crew to work her)).

950. Value of property salvaged.

The value of the salvaged property¹ is an important consideration in the assessment of reward², but it will not raise the reward out of due proportion to the services rendered³. If the value is large, the amount of the reward is usually a smaller proportion to the value than if the value is small⁴. As, however, the small value of salvaged property often renders it impossible to give an adequate reward⁵, when the value is large, a liberal reward is generally given in order to encourage the performance of salvage services⁶.

1 The salvaged value of the vessel and other property is one of the criteria to be taken into account when fixing the reward: see the International Convention on Salvage 1989 (London, 28 April 1989; Cm 1526) art 13(1) (a); and PARA 904. 951. Care, skill and knowledge of salvors.

The salvor is required to show the reasonable degree of care, skill and knowledge to be expected in the circumstances¹ from a person in his position²; and, if through the absence of it the owner of the salvaged property suffers loss, the reward is less than it otherwise would be³. Where, however, there are any mitigating circumstances such as a sudden emergency, allowance may be made for them in measuring the degree of care, skill and knowledge required, and the fact that resulting damage arose in rendering assistance which was invited by the salvor may be taken into consideration⁴.

Misconduct on the part of salvors¹ diminishes the reward and may cause forfeiture of all claim to reward², but criminal misconduct by the master and crew does not affect the owners, if they have not been privy to it³. The burden of proof of misconduct lies upon those who allege it, and strict proof of it is required⁴. In order to affect the reward, the misconduct need not have occasioned actual damage⁵.

953. Negligence of salvors.

Where actual loss or damage results from want of the requisite care, skill or knowledge¹, or misconduct, the reward, if it is not reduced by the amount of such loss or damage², will be diminished by an amount proportionate to the degree of negligence, unskilfulness, ignorance or misconduct proved³.

The court takes a lenient view of the conduct of salvors, and is slow to find them guilty of negligence, as the policy of the law is to encourage the rendering of salvage services, but the court will make such a finding in a proper case⁴. The owners may bring a claim or counterclaim for negligence against the salvors for damage caused to the vessel during the salvage operation even where this has achieved more good than harm⁵.

954. Value of salving property.

The value of the property employed in the salvage service¹ is an important element in the assessment of the reward². It is not, however, the measure of limit of the reward³. Where the value is small, it has little influence. The value of the cargo on board affects the reward only in so far as it increases the risk and responsibilities of the owner of the salving vessel⁴.

1 The state of readiness and efficiency of the salvor's equipment and the value thereof are among the criteria to be taken into account when fixing the reward: see the International Convention on Salvage 1989 (London, 28 April 1989; Cm 1526) art 13(1)(j); and PARA 904. SALVAGE AND WRECK/(1) SALVAGE/(v) Common Law Provisions relating to Salvage/B. SALVAGE REWARD/(B) Amount fixed by the Court/955. Risk to salving property.

955. Risk to salving property.

Intimately connected with the value of the salving property and its influence on the reward is the risk to which the salving property is exposed by the performance of the salvage service¹; and this is an important consideration².

Apart from the actual danger to the salving property, there are certain risks and responsibilities incurred by the salvor which are considered in the assessment of the reward. They may include the risk of forfeiture of a policy of insurance, contractual liability to the owners of cargo on board the salving vessel through deviation to save property³, and the responsibility involved in the use of Her Majesty's ships and passenger ships for salvage service⁴.

Where any serious risk or responsibility is found to have been involved in the performance of the salvage service, special consideration is shown to the claim of the master of the salving vessel as well as to that of the owner⁵.

1 The risk of liability and other risks run by the salvors or their equipment are among the criteria to be taken into account when fixing the reward: see the International Convention on Salvage 1989 (London, 28 April 1989; Cm 1526) art 13(1)(g); and PARA 904. 956. Duration of services.

The length of the salvage operations¹ has not, in general, been a very important element for consideration, unless the services were dangerous or invoked protracted exertion². The additional loss or expense incurred by salvors by reason of the duration of their services has, however, been taken into consideration in the assessment of the reward³.

The labour involved in the salvage service is an important element only so far as it is accompanied by the exercise of skill, or by danger or responsibility⁴.

1 The time used and expenses and losses incurred by the salvors are among the criteria to be taken into account when fixing the reward: see the International Convention on Salvage 1989 (London, 28 April 1989; Cm 1526) art 13(1)(f); and PARA 904. 957. Salvor's losses or expenses.

In assessing the amount of the salvage reward the expenses and losses incurred by the salvor are usually taken into account¹. Those losses and expenses may be given in the form of a separate award, but the common practice is to include them in the general award². The losses and expenses which are dealt with in this manner include expenses reasonably incurred in bringing the salvaged property into a place of safety³, and expenses such as the cost of repairing damage⁴, loss by detention during repairs⁵, depreciation in value of the salvaging vessel⁶, penalties under contract⁷, and loss of profits⁸, caused by the performance of the salvage service⁹. If the damage which necessitated repairs occurred during the salvage service, the inference is that the damage resulted directly from the service, and the burden of proof lies on those who dispute it¹⁰.

1 The time used and expenses and losses incurred by the salvors are among the criteria to be taken into account when fixing the reward: see the International Convention on Salvage 1989 (London, 28 April 1989; Cm 1526) art 13(1)(f); and PARA 904. 958. Grounds of appeal.

If the reward fixed by the court is made the subject of appeal, whether on the ground of excess or inadequacy, as a general rule it will be disturbed only where it is shown that the court below has erred in principle or has misapprehended the facts¹. An award may, however, be altered on appeal on the ground of exorbitancy or inadequacy if it is clearly shown to be so greatly in excess as to be unjust to the owners of the salvaged property or so inadequate as to be unfair to the salvors². If an unsuccessful appeal to the Court of Appeal is followed by an appeal to the House of Lords, the case must be very exceptional to induce the House of Lords to interfere³.

Where a salvage action has been wrongly dismissed, the Court of Appeal, reversing that decision, may, if the facts are before it, itself award the amount of the salvage reward⁴.

(C) RECOVERY

959. Rights in rem.

The salvor has a possessory lien on the salvaged property which will be recognised in a court of common law¹, and he also has in Admiralty, independently of possession, a maritime lien on the salvaged property². No proceedings in rem may, however, be instituted against any of Her Majesty's ships or aircraft, or cargo or other property belonging to the Crown³.

The remedy in rem is so complete that any attempt on the salvor's part to retain exclusive possession of the salvaged property, except where the property is derelict⁴, or he can show that otherwise he would lose the security for his reward⁵, or that he is justified by special circumstances⁶, may be visited by the court with a diminution of the reward⁷ or the loss of the costs of his action⁸ or, in an extreme case, the forfeiture of all title to reward⁹.

In the case of derelict property, the first salvor in possession has ordinarily an exclusive right to possession until his claim has been satisfied; he is also entitled to a declaration as to possession, an injunction restraining naval salvors from interfering with the property, and damages¹⁰, but he may prejudice and even forfeit his claim if he insists on retaining possession and in the circumstances of the case the court is of opinion that he has no right to do so¹¹.

(D) APPORTIONMENT

961. Agreements for apportionment.

An agreement between salvors as to the apportionment of the salvage reward amongst themselves, whether made before¹ or after² the services have begun, is binding on them if it has been made fairly and honestly³, and the court will not set aside such an agreement merely because it would not have made the same apportionment⁴. At the same time, the court is careful to protect seamen from improvident arrangements⁵, and sets aside those agreements whenever they are shown to be inequitable⁶.

A seaman is prevented by statute from abandoning by agreement any right he may have or obtain in the nature of salvage⁷, whether the agreement is made before or after the performance of the salvage service⁸. This does not, however, affect such of the terms of any agreement⁹ made with the seamen belonging to a ship which is to be employed on salvage service, with regard to the salvage remuneration to be paid to them¹⁰; such an agreement, if it is equitable and honestly made, will be binding upon them¹¹, but must be strictly proved¹².

An agreement for the division of salvage rewards may be implied from the usage of a particular locality or occupation¹³. Such an agreement will be upheld only if it is equitable¹⁴.

962. Apportionment to owners.

Where the principal means of effecting the salvage service has been the salving vessel, her owners receive the largest share of the salvage reward, and their share is even larger where the salving vessel and her cargo were valuable and were exposed to great risk by the performance of the services¹. Where the salvage service has been effected chiefly by the services of the crew, and the salving vessel and her cargo have not been exposed to any serious risk, the crew are entitled to the larger share in the reward². Where the salving vessel is the chief instrument in effecting the salvage, the share of the owners in a salvage reward has been generally approximate to three-quarters of the whole award³, but there is no rule of practice on the point⁴. The apportionment depends on the particular circumstances of each case⁵, and there are many examples of variation in apportionment to owners⁶.

The master of the salving ship usually receives a special apportionment by reason of the special responsibility which he undertakes in the performance of a salvage service¹. The share given to him varies according to the degree of responsibility cast on him. It has often been from one-half to one-third of the balance of the award after deducting the sum apportioned to the owners. There is, however, no rule of practice governing his share².

Officers and crew generally share in the sum for salvage awarded to them collectively according to their ratings subject to an exception in favour of navigating officers with ratings lower than that of engineers, who are allowed to rank for the purpose of salvage as of the same ratings as engineers¹. Special rewards may be given to officers or members of the crew who have rendered special services².

Officers and men of the Royal Navy can obtain an apportionment from the court, but, if an apportionment is not made by the court, the distribution of salvage is regulated by the naval prize proclamation in force at the time¹. Similarly, officers and men of Her Majesty's Coastguard and of revenue boats may either obtain an apportionment by the court or rely on rules laid down by the Secretary of State for the distribution of salvage among them². Lifeboat crews who become entitled to rank as salvors may obtain an apportionment from the court³.

967. Independent salvors.

Where persons who perform salvage services are independent salvors, as distinguished from members of a crew or others who act in association, the apportionment to them is determined by consideration of the risk, labour, skill, responsibility and value of their respective services¹.

968. Separate sets of salvors.

Where salvage services have been performed by several independent sets of salvors, then, if their services have been contemporaneous, their shares of a salvage award are determined by the principles applicable to the assessment of the whole award. Where a tender is made and the circumstances are within the knowledge of the salvaged vessel, independent salvors may require the defendant to apportion the sum tendered¹. Accordingly, a set of salvors who save both life and property usually receive a higher apportionment than a set of salvors who have salvaged property only².

969. First and second sets of salvors.

Where the salvage services have not been contemporaneous, but subsequently to the inception of the services another set of salvors, with the consent of the first set, have joined in the services or have succeeded the first set, who, after rendering some assistance, have been compelled by circumstances, through no fault of their own, to abandon the services, special favour is usually shown to the first set of salvors.

The object of so doing is to encourage promptitude in the rendering of salvage services and willingness to accept additional assistance where such assistance is advisable¹. If a second set of salvors dispossesses the original salvors against the will of the original salvors and while they are willing to continue their services, the second set of salvors are entitled to no reward unless they can prove that there was no reasonable probability that the services of the first salvors would have met with success²; in default of such proof the whole reward is given to the first salvors³. If however, the second set of salvors in dispossessing the first set acted under an honest and not unreasonable, although mistaken, belief that their interference was necessary, they may receive some reward, and in that case the original salvors are entitled to the same reward which they would have been awarded if they had completed the salvage service⁴.

Where the services of the original salvors have been intermittent, and during an interval in the performance of them a second set of salvors have intervened against their wishes and rendered beneficial services, the second set of salvors receive a reward, although, if the interference of the second salvors is accompanied by the exercise of force, the reward is very much reduced⁵.

970. Intervention.

If the property in danger was not derelict¹ and was in charge of the owner or the master or other representative of the owner, and that person accepted the services of salvors, a second set of salvors intervening without any invitation or necessity receive no reward². Original salvors have no right, however, to insist on the continuance of their services or to refuse additional assistance in defiance of the wishes of the owner of the property in danger or his representative or of the interests in the property³.

Unless the property in danger is strictly derelict, the salvors are bound to submit to the orders of the owner of the property or his representative⁴. If they fail to do so, the reward is diminished or perhaps forfeited altogether⁵. Even in the case of derelict property, where the salvor has a vested interest and a right of exclusive possession⁶, the first salvors may not refuse further assistance if the interests of the property demand it⁷. If they are dispossessed or superseded by the orders of the owner of the property in peril or his representative while they are able and willing to complete the salvage service, they receive a liberal reward⁸, and the court is not very careful to inquire whether the dispossession or supersession was necessary and proper⁹. If the intervention of the second salvors was necessary for the safety of the property, the first salvors are liberally rewarded for any beneficial services rendered by them¹⁰.

972. Liability to contribute.

All property which has benefited by the salvage services, generally the ship, freight, and cargo¹, except the wearing apparel and personal effects of the crew and passengers on board the salvaged vessel², contributes to the salvage reward³. Each part of the salvaged property contributes rateably according to its value, without regard to the degree of risk from which or difficulty with which that part has been salvaged as compared with the rest of the salvaged property⁴, although, where the various interests in the salvaged property have been exposed to different degrees of risk, the court in its discretion may make a separate award in respect of each portion of the salvaged property⁵. The liability to contribute is not limited to the legal ownership of the salvaged property. It falls also on persons who have merely an interest in the salvaged property and whose interest has been saved by means of the salvage service⁶. Contribution is enforceable by or against the Crown as if the Crown were a private person⁷.

976. Value of ship.

The value of the ship is her value in her damaged condition on the completion of the salvage service¹. In assessing it, deduction may be made for charges and expenses which have been incurred by the owners in connection with the ship subsequently to the inception of the salvor's interest and which have proved beneficial to that interest².

In assessing the value of cargo¹ an allowance may be made for reasonable and proper expenses of the discharge, storage and sale of the cargo², but not for prepaid freight³, primage⁴ or insurance⁵ or a gratuity to the master of the carrying vessel⁶.

978. Freight.

Freight which was at risk at the time of the salvage service may be included in the value of the cargo or assessed separately. If the cargo owner has paid a salvage reward in respect of both cargo and freight at risk assessed together and has not paid the freight, he may deduct from the freight when it is payable to the shipowner the amount which he has paid in respect of salvage of freight. If he has paid the freight, he can recover the amount which he has paid in respect of salvage of freight from the shipowner¹.

979. Service ending at port other than port of destination.

Where the salvage service ends at a place which is not the port of destination and where there is no market for the cargo, and the cargo is carried on to its destination and sold there, the value may be assessed by allowing a pro rata freight to the place where the salvage service ended and deducting from the proceeds of sale a percentage of freight and other charges in respect of the voyage from that place to the port of destination¹. Where under similar circumstances the cargo has not been carried on from the place where the service ended, its value may be assessed at the nearest convenient market, deducting the estimated cost of carriage to that point and the expenses reasonably incident to its sale there².

SALVAGE AND WRECK/(1) SALVAGE/(v) Common Law Provisions relating to Salvage/B. SALVAGE REWARD/(E) Contribution/980. Service ending at port of destination.

980. Service ending at port of destination.

Where the salvage service continues until the salvaged vessel reaches the port of destination, the whole net freight unpaid and at risk when the salvage service commenced, and preserved to the shipowner by the service, contributes to the salvage reward¹. Where the salvage service ends at a place other than the port of destination, and the cargo is not carried on to its destination, the following rules govern contribution:

- 1056 (1) if the cargo owner has prevented the shipowner from carrying it on, the whole freight is earned and, therefore, contributes²;
- 1057 (2) if the cargo owner, having a choice, elects to take delivery of the cargo where it is³, the whole⁴ or a pro rata freight⁵, according to the express or implied agreement on delivery, is due to the shipowner and has to be brought into contribution; and
- 1058 (3) if the failure to carry the cargo on is not due to the intervention or election of the cargo owner, no freight is due, and there is, therefore, no freight to contribute.

Where the cargo is carried on to the port of destination from the place where the salvage service ended, the contributory value of the freight is the estimated proportion of the freight in respect of the voyage up to the point where the service ended⁶, less an allowance in respect of the shipowner's expenses incurred in the further transit⁷.

981. Derelict.

In the case of a derelict¹, if the vessel is not taken by the salvors to her port of destination, and her owners have taken no steps to carry the cargo² on, the cargo owner is entitled to delivery of the cargo without payment of any freight³, and in that case there is no freight to contribute.

Recovery of the derelict by the shipowner at the port of discharge, after the cargo owner has exercised his right of treating the abandonment of the ship as a determination of the contract of carriage, does not revive the contract of carriage, and no freight is due from the cargo owner⁴.

(vi) Lloyd's Standard Form of Salvage Agreement

983. Purpose of the Lloyd's Standard Form of Salvage Agreement.

The Lloyd's Standard Form of Salvage Agreement, also known as 'Lloyd's Open Form' ('LOF')¹, is a widely used salvage contract, which allows all parties to sign up to terms while a vessel is in jeopardy so that salvage services can be rendered promptly². The contract for the performance of salvage services undertaken on these terms incorporates Lloyd's Standard Salvage and Arbitration Clauses (the 'LSSA Clauses')³, providing a framework for the collection of security to protect a salvor's claim and arbitration machinery to determine the contractors' remuneration or special compensation (or both) in the event that salvors and the owners of the salvaged vessel cannot agree on the payment for successful services⁴. LOF 2000 makes special provision allowing parties to decide whether the 'Scopic clause'⁵ forms part of the agreement, thereby providing an alternative regime for the determination of claims for special compensation under the International Salvage Convention 1989⁶ that would otherwise be dealt with under Lloyd's Open Form arbitration⁷.

1 The latest version of LOF, which is approved and published by the Council of Lloyd's, is dated 1 September 2000 ('LOF 2000'). At the date at which this volume states the law, this version was available at: http://www.lloyds.com/Lloyds_Worldwide/Lloyds_Agents/Salvage_Arbitration_Branch/Lloyds_Open_Form_LOF.htm. Predecessor versions of the form were dated 15 January 1908, 3 December 1924, 13 October 1926, 12 April 1950, 10 June 1953, 20 December 1967, 23 February 1972, 21 May 1980, 5 September 1990 and 1 January 1995. An authoritative commentary on LOF 2000 is published in John Reeder (ed) Brice on Maritime Law of Salvage (4th Edn, 2003) Ch 8 (see pp 539-614).

2 As to whether the Lloyd's Standard Form of Salvage Agreement is a contract of the utmost good faith (ie uberrimae fidei) requiring a full pre-contract disclosure of facts see the LOF Digest-Update Issue Number 7 (July 2004) p 4 (referring to LOF 2000). As to the LOF Digest-Update see note 4.

3 See PARA 985. At the date at which this volume states the law, the latest version of the LSSA Clauses, which are approved and published by the Council of Lloyd's, was dated 1 September 2000 and was available at: http://www.lloyds.com/Lloyds_Worldwide/Lloyds_Agents/Salvage_Arbitration_Branch/Lloyds_Open_Form_LOF.htm.

4 Procedural Rules for the arbitration process described in the text are approved and published by the Council of Lloyd's pursuant to LOF 2000 Clause I (as to which see PARA 984): see PARA 985. At the date at which this volume states the law, the latest version of the Procedural Rules was dated 1 September 2000 and was available at: http://www.lloyds.com/Lloyds_Worldwide/Lloyds_Agents/Salvage_Arbitration_Branch/Lloyds_Open_Form_LOF.htm. Lloyd's plays no part in the arbitration that arises under LOF but it retains the services of a panel of experienced arbitrators to hear cases arising thereunder. Lloyd's also records the cumulative effect of notable arbitral decisions made under LOF, in the form of the LOF Digest (4th Edn, 2001), and at regular intervals it publishes loose-leaf updates to the LOF Digest (the 'LOF Digest-Update'). The current edition of the LOF Digest refers only to those predecessor versions of LOF dated 21 May 1980 ('LOF 1980'), 5 September 1990 ('LOF 1990') and 1 January 1995 ('LOF 1995'), so the effect of arbitral decisions arising out of LOF 2000 is recorded currently in the LOF Digest-Update only.

7 See PARA 986. Accordingly, remuneration under the Scopic clause is outside the ambit of the Lloyd's Open Form arbitration process, although any dispute arising out of the Scopic clause or the operations thereunder is referred to arbitration as provided for under the Lloyd's Open Form agreement: see PARA 986.

984. Lloyd's Open Form (LOF) 2000.

LOF 2000¹ is a standard form of salvage agreement which requires the following details to be supplied:

- 1059 (1) the name of the salvage contractors²;
- 1060 (2) the property to be salvaged³;
- 1061 (3) an agreed place of safety⁴;
- 1062 (4) the agreed currency of any arbitral award and security (if other than United States dollars)⁵;
- 1063 (5) the date of the agreement⁶;
- 1064 (6) the place of agreement⁷;
- 1065 (7) whether the 'Scopic clause'⁸ is incorporated into the agreement⁹;
- 1066 (8) the name of the person signing for and on behalf of the contractors (and his signature)¹⁰;
- 1067 (9) the name of the captain or other person signing for and on behalf of the property (and his signature)¹¹.

The contractors' basic obligation arising from a duly completed LOF 2000 form is stated to be that the contractors identified in head (1) above thereby agree to use their best endeavours¹² to save the property specified in head (2) above and to take the property to the place stated in head (3) above (or to such other place as may thereafter be agreed)¹³. While performing the salvage services the contractors must also use their best endeavours to prevent or minimise damage to the environment¹⁴.

Subject to the provisions of the International Salvage Convention 1989¹⁵ relating to special compensation¹⁶, and to the Scopic clause if incorporated, the contractors' services must be rendered and accepted as salvage services upon the principle of 'No Cure, No Pay'¹⁷. The contractors' services are deemed to have been performed when the property is in a safe condition in the place of safety stated in head (3) above (or as otherwise agreed or determined)¹⁸.

The contractors' remuneration or special compensation (or both) is determined by arbitration in London in the manner prescribed by Lloyds Standard Salvage and Arbitration Clauses¹⁹ and Lloyds Procedural Rules²⁰. LOF arbitrators will apply the criteria for fixing the salvage reward provided by the International Salvage Convention 1989²¹ when assessing the quantum of the award together with principles of the English law of salvage which are not inconsistent with that Convention²². Factors affecting quantum include the value of the ship (including proper deductions that may be made to that value), the value of any cargo (including proper deductions that may be made to that value), and the value of any freight at risk²³. 'Out of pocket' expenses properly incurred by the salvor may be recognised in quantum²⁴, along with post-termination services²⁵.

Both the agreement and any arbitration thereunder are governed by English law²⁶.

If the contractors are successful, the owners of other property which is on board the vessel (see note 3) should note that it will become necessary to provide the contractors with salvage security promptly in accordance with LSSA Clause 4 (referred to in LOF 2000 Clause I); and the provision of general average security does not relieve the salvaged interests of their separate obligation to provide salvage security to the contractors: see LOF 2000 Important Notice 1.

22 As to the law that applies to salvage generally see PARA 876 et seq. As to the application of the 'disparity principle' in appeal awards (which states that in salvage cases where there is only immobilisation, there exists no great urgency and only straightforward towage is required to effect a cure, it is important that the sum awarded should not be wholly out of line with commercial towage rates, the 'disparity' being discerned between these commercial terms on offer and the recognition in the award under LOF of the services performed) see the LOF Digest-Update Issue Number 4 (October 2003) pp 3-4, Issue Number 8 (October 2004) pp 3-4 (referring to LOF 2000). As to whether the 'disparity principle' is seriously flawed see the LOF Digest-Update Issue Number 19 (April 2008) pp 1-2; and Owners of the vessel 'Voutakos' v Tsavlis Salvage (International) Ltd [2008] EWHC 1581 (Admlty), [2008] All ER (D) 143 (Jul) (the 'disparity principle' is not realistic: it was not possible to identify precisely 'straightforward' rescue towage cases; and commercial rates were admissible and relevant but their significance would depend on the facts of each case; the court's role was to take account of all circumstances in assessing the award, and ensure that the award was not out of all proportion to the services rendered or to the values of the property salvaged). SALVAGE AND WRECK/(1) SALVAGE/(vi) Lloyd's Standard Form of Salvage Agreement/985. Lloyd's Standard Salvage and Arbitration Clauses (the 'LSSA Clauses') and Lloyds Procedural Rules.

985. Lloyd's Standard Salvage and Arbitration Clauses (the 'LSSA Clauses') and Lloyds Procedural Rules.

Under LOF 2000¹, the contractors' remuneration or special compensation² (or both) is determined by arbitration in London in the manner prescribed by the Lloyd's Standard Salvage and Arbitration Clauses (the 'LSSA Clauses')³ and Lloyds Procedural Rules⁴.

The LSSA Clauses, which are incorporated into and form an integral part of every contract for the performance of salvage services undertaken on the terms of LOF 2000 (the 'agreement'), make provision with regard to:

- 1068 (1) the overriding objective to be borne in mind when construing the agreement or on the making of any arbitral award or order⁵;
- 1069 (2) salvage security, maritime lien and the right to arrest the property salvaged⁶;
- 1070 (3) the conditions attaching to the appointment of an arbitrator by the Council of Lloyd's⁷;
- 1071 (4) the arbitration procedure and arbitrators' powers⁸;
- 1072 (5) the representation of parties in arbitration⁹;
- 1073 (6) the contractors' right to interest on sums awarded in respect of remuneration or special compensation¹⁰;
- 1074 (7) the consideration of currency correction with regard to any award or appeal award¹¹;
- 1075 (8) the procedure relating to appeals and cross appeals¹²;
- 1076 (9) the payment of sums due from the parties¹³;
- 1077 (10) the status of Lloyd's documents and publications¹⁴;
- 1078 (11) the status and authority of the contractors' personnel and subcontractors¹⁵;
- 1079 (12) disputes that arise under the Scopic clause¹⁶.

The Lloyds Procedural Rules¹⁷ make provision with regard to:

- 1080 (a) the arbitrators' powers¹⁸;
- 1081 (b) the requirement to convene a preliminary meeting with the represented parties for the purpose of giving directions as to the manner in which the arbitration is to be conducted¹⁹;
- 1082 (c) the subject-matter of the initial order for directions²⁰;
- 1083 (d) the classes of document which may be disclosed²¹;
- 1084 (e) the conditions under which expert evidence may be adduced²²;
- 1085 (f) the arbitrator's need to ensure that the represented parties are informed of the benefit which might be derived from the use of mediation²³;
- 1086 (g) the date to be fixed for the hearing of an arbitration²⁴;
- 1087 (h) the procedure relating to appeals²⁵.

The Fixed Cost Arbitration Procedure ('FCAP') may apply in cases (either on the introduction of arbitration under LOF 2000 or on appeal under the LSSA Clauses) where the amount of the salvaged fund is small or where no point of law arises and the facts are uncomplicated²⁶. FCAP aims to limit the recoverable costs of obtaining an award and proceeds on the basis of documents alone²⁷. Any award published in accordance with FCAP falls under the appeal provisions contained in the LSSA Clauses and any such appeal will usually be conducted on a documents-only basis with fixed costs²⁸.

986. The Scopic clause.

Although special compensation is available to salvors under the International Salvage Convention 1989¹, the 'Scopic clause'² was formulated to calculate a contractor's special compensation on the basis of a tariff together with an uplift fixed at 25 per cent³. If the Scopic clause is invoked, its provisions are supplementary to any Lloyd's Form Salvage Agreement⁴, except that the method of assessing special compensation⁵ is substituted by the method of assessment set out in the Scopic clause⁶. The Scopic clause consists of sub-clauses which make particular provision with regard to:

- 1088 (1) invoking the Scopic clause⁷;
- 1089 (2) the provision of security for Scopic remuneration⁸;
- 1090 (3) the contractor's right to withdraw on the owners' failure to provide security under head (2) above⁹;
- 1091 (4) the tariff rates applicable to Scopic remuneration¹⁰;
- 1092 (5) the award of salvage under the International Salvage Convention 1989¹¹;
- 1093 (6) the discount to be applied to the award mentioned in head (5) above if (before currency adjustment and before interest and costs) it is greater than the assessed Scopic remuneration¹²;
- 1094 (7) the date for, and form of, payment of any Scopic remuneration¹³;
- 1095 (8) the entitlement of either party to terminate their obligations under the Scopic clause if certain conditions are met¹⁴;
- 1096 (9) the duties and liabilities of the contractor¹⁵;
- 1097 (10) the interaction between the Scopic clause and the International Salvage Convention 1989 provisions regarding the effect of a salvor's misconduct¹⁶;
- 1098 (11) the right of the owners to appoint a Special Casualty Representative ('SCR')¹⁷;
- 1099 (12) the right of Underwriters of the Hull and Machinery and of any cargo on board to appoint Special Representatives (called respectively the 'Special Hull Representative' and the 'Special Cargo Representative' and collectively called the 'Special Representatives')¹⁸;
- 1100 (13) the extent to which the assessment of SCOPIC remuneration should include efforts made to prevent or to remove pollution¹⁹;
- 1101 (14) the relationship between SCOPIC remuneration and general average²⁰;
- 1102 (15) disputes arising out of the Scopic clause or the operations thereunder²¹.

1 See under the International Convention on Salvage 1989 (London, 28 April 1989; Cm 1526) art 14: see PARA 905. The International Convention on Salvage 1989 has effect under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 224: see PARAS 879, 891 et seq.

2 The latest version of the Scopic clause is known as 'SCOPIC 2007' and, at the date at which this volume states the law, was available at: http://www.lloyds.com/Lloyds_Worldwide/Lloyds_Agents/Salvage_Arbitration_Branch/SCOPIC.htm. An authoritative commentary on SCOPIC is published in John Reeder (ed) Brice on Maritime Law of Salvage (4th Edn, 2003) Ch 8 (see pp 614-632).

3 The salvage services under the Lloyd's Standard Form of Salvage Agreement (the 'main agreement') continue to be assessed in accordance with the International Convention on Salvage 1989 art 13 (as to which see PARA 904), even if the contractor has invoked the Scopic clause: see SCOPIC 2007 sub-clause 6(i). However,

SCOPIC remuneration as assessed under SCOPIC 2007 sub-clause 5 (see head (4) in the text) will be payable only by the owners of the vessel and only to the extent that it exceeds the total award under the International Convention on Salvage 1989 art 13 (or, if none, any potential art 13 award) payable by all salvaged interests (including cargo, bunkers, lubricating oil and stores) before currency adjustment and before interest and costs even if the art 13 award or any part of it is not recovered: see SCOPIC 2007 sub-clause 6(i). Awards under the International Convention on Salvage 1989 art 13 are discounted by 25% of the amount by which any such award exceeds the remuneration calculated under the Scopic clause: see SCOPIC 2007 sub-clause 7; and head (6) in the text.

As to the latest version of the Lloyd's Standard Form of Salvage Agreement, also known as 'Lloyd's Open Form', which was approved and published by the Council of Lloyd's and dated 1 September 2000 ('LOF 2000'), see PARA 983. LOF 2000 makes provision for the invocation of SCOPIC 2007, subject to the agreement of both parties: see PARA 983. Statistics published by Lloyd's indicate that the clause is invoked in approximately 20% of cases in which LOF 2000 has been used.

4 The definitions in the Lloyd's Standard Form of Salvage Agreement (the 'main agreement') are incorporated into the Scopic clause but if the Scopic clause is inconsistent with any provisions of the main agreement (or inconsistent with the law applicable), the Scopic clause, once invoked under sub-clause 2 (see head (1) in the text), overrides such other provisions to the extent necessary to give business efficacy to the agreement: see SCOPIC 2007 sub-clause 1.

5 Ie being, under LOF 2000, the method which is provided for under the International Convention on Salvage 1989 art 14(1)-(4) (as to which see PARA 905): see SCOPIC 2007 sub-clause 1.

6 Accordingly, if the Scopic clause has been incorporated into the main agreement (ie the agreement provided for by LOF 2000), the contractor may make no claim pursuant to International Convention on Salvage 1989 art 14 (as to which see PARA 905) except in the circumstances described in SCOPIC 2007 sub-clause 4 (withdrawal) (see head (3) in the text): see SCOPIC 2007 sub-clause 1.

SCOPIC remuneration under head (4) in the text requires consideration of 'out of pocket' expenses; and as to what is considered reasonable in this context see the LOF Digest-Update Issue Number 16 (July 2007) pp 1-6. As to the LOF Digest-Update see PARA 983 note 4.

11 See SCOPIC 2007 sub-clause 6. Head (5) in the text refers to the award for salvage services which, even if the Scopic clause is invoked, continues to be assessed in accordance with the International Convention on Salvage 1989 art 13 (as to which see PARA 904): see SCOPIC 2007 sub-clause 6(i); and note 3.

(2) WRECK

(i) In general

987. Meaning of 'wreck' and 'derelict'.

'Wreck' may be defined as property cast ashore within the ebb and flow of the tide after shipwreck¹; and the property must be a ship, her cargo or a portion of it². Jetsam, flotsam and lagan or ligam³ are not wreck at common law so long as they remain in or upon the sea, but, if they are cast up on the shore, they become wreck⁴.

For the purposes of the statutory provisions relating to salvage and wreck⁵, however, 'wreck' includes jetsam, flotsam, lagan and derelict found in or on the shores of the sea or any tidal water⁶. The intention of so extending the meaning of 'wreck' was evidently to bring under one term the rights which pertained to the land and those which constituted droits of Admiralty⁷. Fishing boats or fishing gear lost or abandoned at sea and either found or taken possession of within United Kingdom waters⁸ or found or taken possession of beyond those waters and brought within those waters are treated as wreck for the purposes of the statutory provisions relating to salvage and wreck⁹; and 'wreck' includes any hovercraft¹⁰ or any part of it or its cargo found sunk, stranded or abandoned in or on any navigable water¹¹ or on or over the foreshore or place where the tide normally ebbs or flows¹².

'Derelict' is property, whether vessel or cargo¹³, abandoned at sea by those in charge of it without hope on their part of recovering or intention of returning to it¹⁴. A vessel is not derelict which is only left temporarily by her master and crew with the intention of returning to her¹⁵, even though the management of the vessel may have passed into the hands of salvors¹⁶. A vessel deserted by her master and crew with the intention of abandoning her does not, however, cease to be derelict because they subsequently change their intention and try to recover her¹⁷. Whenever the question arises whether a vessel is derelict or not, the test to be applied is the intention and expectation of the master and crew at the time of quitting her, and, in the absence of direct evidence, that is determined by consideration of all the circumstances of the case¹⁸.

See further CROWN PROPERTY vol 12(1) (Reissue) PARA 270 et seq. A raft of timber is not a wreck (Nicholson v Chapman (1793) 2 Hy Bl 254), nor are planks of timber moored in a river which have broken adrift (Palmer v Rouse (1858) 3 H & N 505), nor a gas buoy which has become adrift (Wells v Gas Float Whittin No 2 (Owners) [1897] AC 337, 8 Asp MLC 272, HL), none having formed part of a vessel, her apparel or cargo. There must be paid to the receiver¹ the expenses properly incurred by him in the discharge of his functions and also, in respect of such matters as may be prescribed by regulations made by the Secretary of State², such fees as may be so prescribed³; but the receiver is not entitled to any other remuneration⁴.

The receiver has, in addition to all other rights and remedies for the recovery of those expenses and fees, the same rights and remedies in respect of those expenses and fees as a salvor⁵ has in respect of salvage⁶ due to him⁷.

Whenever any dispute arises as to the amount payable to the receiver in respect of expenses or fees, that dispute must be determined by the Secretary of State whose decision is final⁸.

990. Remuneration for services of coastguard.

Where services are rendered by any officers or men of the coastguard service¹ in watching or protecting shipwrecked property, the owner of the property must pay in respect of those services remuneration according to a scale fixed by the Secretary of State². The scale fixed by the Secretary of State must not exceed the scale by which remuneration to officers and men of the coastguard for extra duties in the ordinary service of the Commissioners of Revenue and Customs³ is for the time being regulated⁴.

Such remuneration⁵:

- 1104 (2) must be paid to the same persons⁷; and
- 1105 (3) must be accounted for and applied in the same manner⁸,

However, no liability in respect of those services so arises¹¹ where: (a) the services have been declined by the owner of the property or his agent at the time they were tendered¹²; or (b) salvage¹³ has been claimed and awarded for the services¹⁴.

The statutory provisions relating to vessels in distress¹ apply in circumstances where a United Kingdom² or foreign³ vessel⁴ is wrecked, stranded or in distress at any place on or near the coasts⁵ of the United Kingdom⁶ or any tidal water⁷ within United Kingdom waters⁸.

Where any function is conferred on the receiver⁹ by any of those provisions, that function may be discharged by any officer of Revenue and Customs or any principal officer of the coastguard¹⁰. An officer discharging any such functions of the receiver is to be treated, with respect to any goods or articles belonging to a vessel the delivery of which to the receiver is required by any of the statutory provisions relating to wreck¹¹, as the agent of the receiver¹². However, an officer discharging such functions is not: (1) entitled to any fees payable to receivers¹³; or (2) deprived of any right to salvage¹⁴ to which he would otherwise be entitled¹⁵.

(vi) Removal of Wrecks

1008. Powers of harbour and conservancy authorities in relation to wrecks.

Where any vessel¹ is sunk, stranded or abandoned in, or in or near any approach to, any harbour² or tidal water³ under the control of a harbour authority⁴ or conservancy authority⁵ in such a manner as, in the opinion of the authority, to be, or be likely to become, an obstruction or danger to navigation or to lifeboats engaged in lifeboat service in that harbour or water or approach thereto, that authority may exercise any of the following powers⁶, namely:

- 1141 (1) to take possession of, and raise, remove or destroy the whole or any part of the vessel and any other property to which the power extends⁷;
- 1142 (2) to light or buoy the vessel or part of the vessel and any such other property until it is raised, removed or destroyed⁸; and
- 1143 (3) to sell, in such manner as the authority thinks fit, the vessel or part of the vessel so raised or removed and any other property recovered in the exercise of the powers conferred by head (1) or head (2) above⁹;
- 1144 (4) to reimburse itself, out of the proceeds of the sale, for the expenses incurred by it in relation to the sale¹⁰.

The other property to which the powers conferred by heads (1) to (4) above extend is every article or thing or collection of things being or forming part of the equipment, cargo, stores or ballast of the vessel¹¹.

Any surplus of the proceeds of a sale under head (3) above must be held by the authority on trust for the persons entitled thereto¹². Except in the case of property which is of a perishable nature or which would deteriorate in value by delay, no sale may be made under head (3) above until at least seven days' notice of the intended sale has been given by advertisement in a local newspaper circulating in or near the area over which the authority has control¹³; and, at any time before any property is sold under head (3) above, the owner of the property is entitled to have it delivered to him on payment of its fair market value¹⁴. The market value of property for those purposes is that agreed on between the authority and the owner or, failing agreement, that determined by a person appointed for the purpose by the Secretary of State¹⁵; and the sum so paid to the authority in respect of any property is to be treated, for the purposes of these provisions, as the proceeds of sale of the property¹⁶.

Any proceeds of sale arising under head (3) above from the sale of a vessel and any other property recovered from the vessel are to be treated as a common fund¹⁷.

If any question arises between a harbour authority or conservancy authority and a general lighthouse authority as to their respective powers¹⁸ in relation to any place in or near an approach to a harbour or tidal water, that question must, on the application of either authority, be referred to the Secretary of State for his decision¹⁹; and any such decision of the Secretary of State is final²⁰.

1009. Respective powers of lighthouse authorities in relation to wrecks.

Where:

- 1145 (1) any vessel¹ is sunk, stranded or abandoned in any fairway or on the seashore or on or near any rock, shoal or bank in the United Kingdom² or any of the adjacent seas or islands³; and
- 1146 (2) there is no harbour authority⁴ or conservancy authority⁵ having power to raise, remove or destroy the vessel⁶,

the general lighthouse authority⁷ for the place in or near which the vessel is situated has, if in the authority's opinion the vessel is, or is likely to become, an obstruction or danger to navigation or to lifeboats engaged in lifeboat service, the same powers in relation thereto as those conferred⁸ on harbour and conservancy authorities in relation to wrecks⁹.

Where a general lighthouse authority has incurred expenses in its exercise of these powers¹⁰ in relation to any vessel, then¹¹:

- 1147 (a) if the proceeds of any sale made¹² in connection with the exercise of those powers in relation to the vessel are insufficient to reimburse the authority for the full amount of those expenses, the authority may recover the amount of the deficiency from the relevant person¹³; or
- 1148 (b) if there is no such sale, the authority may recover the full amount of those expenses from the relevant person¹⁴.

Any expenses so incurred which are not recovered by the authority either out of the proceeds of any such sale or in accordance with head (a) or head (b) above must be paid out of the General Lighthouse Fund¹⁵.

If any question arises between a harbour authority or conservancy authority and a general lighthouse authority as to their respective powers¹⁶ in relation to any place in or near an approach to a harbour or tidal water¹⁷, that question must, on the application of either authority, be referred to the Secretary of State¹⁸ for his decision¹⁹; and any such decision of the Secretary of State is final²⁰.

1011. Protection of sites of historic wrecks.

Material relating to this paragraph has been revised and published under the title NATIONAL AND CULTURAL HERITAGE vol 77 (2010).

1012. Prohibition on approaching dangerous wrecks.

If the Secretary of State¹ is satisfied with respect to a vessel lying wrecked in United Kingdom waters² that:

- 1149 (1) because of anything contained in it, the vessel is in a condition which makes it a potential danger to life or property³; and
- 1150 (2) on that account it ought to be protected from unauthorised interference⁴, he may by order designate an area round the vessel as a 'prohibited area'⁵.

Such an order must identify the vessel and the place where it is lying⁶; and:

- 1151 (a) the prohibited area must be all within such distance of the vessel as is specified by the order, excluding any area above high water mark of ordinary spring tides⁷; and
- 1152 (b) the distance specified for the purposes of head (a) above must be whatever the Secretary of State thinks appropriate to ensure that unauthorised persons are kept away from the vessel⁸.

A person who without due authority enters a prohibited area commits an offence⁹.

Functions of the Secretary of State under the Protection of Wrecks Act 1973 are transferred so as to be exercisable in relation to Wales by the Welsh Ministers, except for those functions under s 2: see the National Assembly for Wales (Transfer of Functions) Order 1999, SI 1999/672, art 2, Sch 1; and PARA 1011 note 2. 1013. Implementation of international agreements.

The Secretary of State¹ may by order made by statutory instrument² make such provision as he considers appropriate for the purpose of giving effect to any international agreement³:

- 1153 (1) to which the United Kingdom⁴ is, or at the time when the order takes effect will be, a party⁵; and
- 1154 (2) which relates to the protection of wrecks⁶ outside United Kingdom waters⁷.

Such an order may⁸ include⁹:

- 1155 (a) provision designating a wreck, or an area in which a wreck is situated, for the purposes of the order¹⁰;
- 1156 (b) provision prohibiting or restricting access to that wreck or area or interference with that wreck¹¹;
- 1157 (c) provision for the granting of licences by the Secretary of State¹²;
- 1158 (d) provision authorising a person authorised by the Secretary of State in accordance with the order to board and search any ship which is in United Kingdom waters and any United Kingdom ship¹³ which is in international waters¹⁴;
- 1159 (e) provision authorising such a person to seize anything found in the course of a search authorised under the order¹⁵;
- 1160 (f) provision that, subject to heads (i) and (ii) below, a contravention of a requirement imposed by the order is an offence punishable, on summary conviction, by a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum¹⁶ or, on conviction on indictment, by a fine¹⁷; and
- 1161 (g) such incidental, supplementary and transitional provision as appears to the Secretary of State to be appropriate for the purposes of the order¹⁸.

However, no person is to be guilty of an offence under such an order unless¹⁹:

- 1162 (i) the acts or omissions which constitute the offence are committed in the United Kingdom, in United Kingdom waters or on board a United Kingdom ship²⁰; or
- 1163 (ii) in a case where those acts or omissions are committed in international waters but not on board a United Kingdom ship, that person is: (A) a British citizen²¹, a British Overseas Territories citizen²² or a British Overseas citizen²³; (B) a person who under the British Nationality Act 1981 is a British subject²⁴; (C) a British National (Overseas) within the meaning of the British Nationality Act 1981²⁵; (D) a British protected person within the meaning of the British Nationality Act 1981²⁶; or (E) a company²⁷.

Subject to heads (i) and (ii) above, any offence under such an order²⁸ is deemed, for the purpose only of conferring jurisdiction on any court, to have been committed in any place where the offender may for the time being be²⁹. However, no proceedings for an offence under any such order may be instituted in England and Wales³⁰ except by or with the consent of the Director of Public Prosecutions³¹.

TEXT AND NOTE 27--Merchant Shipping and Maritime Security Act 1997 s 24(3)(b)(v) substituted: SI 2009/1941.

Halsbury's Laws of England/SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW (VOLUME 93 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-590; VOLUME 94 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 591-1254)/11. LIENS ON SHIPS, FREIGHT AND CARGO/(1) MARITIME LIENS/1014. Nature and extent.

11. LIENS ON SHIPS, FREIGHT AND CARGO

(1) MARITIME LIENS

1014. Nature and extent.

A maritime lien is a claim or privilege on a maritime property (most often a ship or her apparel or cargo, or any combination of those, and referred to, especially historically, as the 'res') in respect of service done to it or damage caused by it¹. Such a lien does not import or require possession of the property against which the claim is brought or privilege claimed, for it is a claim or privilege on the property to be carried into effect by legal process². A maritime lien travels with the property into whosoever possession it may come, even though the property may have been purchased without notice of the lien³ or may have been seized by the sheriff under a writ of fieri facias issued at the instance of execution creditors⁴. A maritime lien is inchoate from the moment the claim or privilege attaches, and, when called into effect by the legal process of a proceeding in rem, relates back to the period when it first attached⁵.

There can be no maritime lien on a res which is not a ship or her apparel or cargo⁶ and, if a lien has attached to a maritime res which is sold by the owner, there is no lien against the proceeds of sale since the lien travels with the property against which the claim is brought or privilege claimed⁷. A maritime lien only attaches to the particular property in respect of which the claim arises and not to any other property of the owner⁸. An owner's lien over cargoes or subfreights is contractual only, having no independent root in Admiralty, common law, equity or statute, and creates a right only as between the parties to the contract in which it is contained⁹.

A maritime lien does not attach when the subject property belongs to the Crown or is owned by a foreign state¹⁰. Nothing in the Crown Proceedings Act 1947¹¹ authorises proceedings in rem in respect of any claim against the Crown, or the arrest, detention or sale of any of Her Majesty's ships, or of any cargo or other property belonging to the Crown, or gives to any person any lien on any such ship, cargo or other property¹².

Where a ship is under requisition by the Crown or a foreign state, no lien attaches in respect of damage done by her whilst under requisition¹³; but, where salvage services are rendered to a ship under requisition and her owners derive some benefit from those services, a maritime lien does attach, although it is unenforceable whilst the ship remains under requisition¹⁴.

Damage giving rise to any claim under the Nuclear Installations Act 1965, in respect of any occurrence which constitutes a breach of duty under ss 7-11, does not give rise to a lien or other right in respect of any ship or aircraft: see s 14; and FUEL AND ENERGY vol 19(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1504.

1015. Extent of judgment in rem.

When a judgment in rem is pronounced in respect of a maritime lien, it binds all the world to the extent that it enables the holder of the maritime lien to enforce the judgment against the property in respect of which the claim is brought (or privilege claimed), irrespective of the personal liability of the person into whose possession the property may have come¹.

A judgment in rem of a foreign court of competent jurisdiction in respect of a maritime lien is regarded by the English courts as conclusive and binding against all the world, even though a maritime lien would not have arisen in the same circumstances under English law². A judgment in rem of a foreign court of competent jurisdiction will be enforced in the English courts by an action in rem; but a judgment in personam of a foreign court of competent jurisdiction will not be enforced in the English courts by an action in rem, even though in the same circumstances there would be a maritime lien under English law³.

1 A maritime lien travels with the res into whosoever possession it may come, even though the res may have been purchased without notice of the lien: see PARA 1014. As to enforcement of liens see PARA 1037 et seq. As to Admiralty claims in rem generally see PARA 158 et seq.

1016. Maritime liens recognised by English law.

The maritime liens recognised by English law are those in respect of bottomry and respondentia bonds¹, salvage of property², seamen's wages³, damage⁴ and a salvor's rights under any international convention or national law⁵. A maritime lien has been held not to exist in respect of towage⁶, the supply of goods, materials etc⁷ or insurance contributions⁸. It is doubtful whether a maritime lien exists in respect of pilotage dues⁹.

Statutory rights and remedies similar to those enjoyed by the holder of a maritime lien, and enforced in similar manner, include claims in respect of the wages, disbursements and liabilities of the master of a ship¹⁰; claims in respect of damage to land caused by persons rendering services to a vessel wrecked, stranded or in distress¹¹; claims in respect of the fees and expenses of a receiver of wreck¹²; and claims in respect of the expenses of a local authority incurred on account of the burial or destruction of the carcase of any animal or carcase thrown or washed from any vessel¹³.

1017. Lien for damage done by a ship.

The lien for damage done by a ship arises when damage is done by the ship¹ to another ship or property², whether on the high seas or within the limits of a port³, through some wrongful act of navigation of the ship from want of skill or from negligence of the persons by whom she is navigated, being at the time of the damage⁴ her owners or the employees of her owners, or having the possession and control of her by their authority⁵.

Thus, charterers who have the control, or any persons who are allowed to have possession, of a ship for the purpose of using or employing her in the ordinary manner are deemed to have authority to subject her to liens, and so to make her liable for their negligence⁶; but the presumption is not absolute and may be rebutted by showing that the person navigating the ship did not derive any authority from the owners⁷, or that the injured party is precluded by the terms of a contract from recovering against them⁸.

Where the person in charge or possession of the ship has no such authority, express or implied, no lien arises. Thus, there is no lien for wilful damage by the master, or for his wilful acts⁹, or for an act of a person in possession of the ship done in asserting a right claimed by him not as an employee or on behalf of the owner¹⁰.

1 The damage must be mediately or immediately caused by an act of navigation. Thus, where the crew of one ship cut the moorings of another ship, as a result of which that other ship was damaged, no lien attached to the first ship: Currie v M'Knight [1897] AC 97, 8 Asp MLC 193, HL, approving Harmer v Bell, The Bold Buccleugh (1852) 7 Moo PCC 267. 1018. Property to which lien attaches.

The moment the damage is done by the ship the lien attaches to her hull, tackle, apparel, furniture and freight¹. It does not originate in possession and it follows the ship into whosoever possession she may pass², and continues even after the ship is wrecked and may be enforced against the wreck³. The lien on freight may, however, only be enforced together with the enforcement of a lien on the ship, being consequential to that lien⁴. A lien for damage is normally unenforceable after two years⁵.

1019. Salvage of property.

The lien for salvage is created by the rendering of salvage services to a maritime res or, in certain circumstances, by the saving of life¹ from a ship². The lien attaches to the ship, freight and cargo severally but not jointly, and each is liable to contribute towards the salvage in proportion to its value³, but cannot, except in cases of express agreement, be made liable for the salvage due from the other⁴. The lien accrues immediately upon the performance of the salvage services⁵ and attaches to the salvaged vessel, her cargo and freight where freight has been saved⁶. It is unaffected by any change in the ownership or possession of the salvaged property⁷, and the benefit of it can be lost only by the laches of the salvor⁸. A lien for salvage services rendered is normally unenforceable after two years⁹.

1 Nothing in the International Convention on Salvage 1989 (London, 28 April 1989; Cm 1526) affects the salvor's maritime lien under any international convention or national law: see art 20(1); and PARA 911. The salvor may not, however, enforce his maritime lien when satisfactory security for his claim, including interest and costs, has been duly tendered or provided: see art 20(2); and PARA 911. As to the right to salvage for saving life see PARAS 907, 927.

See also PARA 114 (Admiralty jurisdiction in respect of salvage of aircraft). 1020. Seamen's wages.

The lien for the wages¹ of the master and seamen² attaches to the ship and freight and every part of it³, provided that the wages have been earned on board the ship⁴ under an ordinary mariner's contract⁵. It does not affect the right to the lien that the master and crew were engaged by some person who had no right to engage them, so long as they have earned the wages on the ship⁶. This lien is not dependent on the earning of freight⁷, but, if it does not attach to the ship, it cannot attach to the freight, for a lien on freight is consequential to the lien on the ship⁸. The lien for wages travels with the res into whosoever possession it may come⁹.

1 'Wages' includes subsistence money, viaticum (ie any sort of travel allowance), compensation for wrongful dismissal, money allowance instead of food, and a bonus to a master to stand by a ship and bring her home: The Madonna d'Idra (1811) 1 Dods 37 at 40; Phillips v Highland Rly Co, The Ferret (1883) 8 App Cas 329, 5 Asp MLC 94, PC; The Tergeste [1903] P 26, 9 Asp MLC 356; The British Trade [1924] P 104, 16 Asp MLC 296; Cassa Nazionale della Previdenza Marinara v Proceeds of Sale of Italian SS Acrux, The Acrux [1965] P 391, [1965] 2 All ER 323, [1965] 1 Lloyd's Rep 565. 4 Morgan v Castlegate Steamship Co, The Castlegate [1893] AC 38 at 52, 7 Asp MLC 284 at 288, HL, per Lord Watson.

5 A lien attaches only in respect of an ordinary contract of employment. As to the contract of employment generally see EMPLOYMENT vol 39 (2009) PARA 1 et seq.

The scope of a master's lien for wages is the same as that of a seaman: The Ever Success [1999] 1 Lloyd's Rep 824. Under a special contract, neither a master nor a seaman has a lien for wages or for damages for wrongful dismissal: The Sydney Cove (1815) 2 Dods 11; The British Trade [1924] P 104, 16 Asp MLC 296; The Great Eastern (1867) LR 1 A & E 384. In The British Trade it was, however, conceded that wages under a special contract, so far as earned on board, conferred a lien.

1021. Disbursements and liabilities.

Disbursements and liabilities properly made or incurred by a master on account of a ship give him a lien on the ship, which may be enforced in the same way as his lien for wages¹; but the only disbursements and liabilities which can create this lien are those made by the master by virtue of his general authority and in the ordinary course of his employment, and for which he can pledge the owner's credit².

1 See the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 41; and PARA 477; Morgan v Castlegate Steamship Co, The Castlegate [1893] AC 38 at 46, 7 Asp MLC 284 at 286, HL, per Lord Herschell; The Ripon City [1897] P 226 at 232, 234, 242, 247, 8 Asp MLC 304 at 308, 311, 312 per Gorell Barnes J. 1022. Bottomry and respondentia.

As soon as a bottomry or respondentia bond¹ is executed, a lien attaches to the property hypothecated, and continues to attach until the total destruction of the property². (2) STATUTORY AND POSSESSORY LIENS 1023. Statutory lien.

A statutory lien attaches when property is arrested in a claim in rem under Admiralty jurisdiction¹. The Admiralty jurisdiction of the High Court, including the cases in which that jurisdiction may be invoked by an action in personam, is defined by the Supreme Court Act 1981².

A statutory lien arising when property is arrested in an Admiralty claim in rem is of no avail against any subsisting charge on the property or against a purchaser in good faith for value³.

Harbour and dock authorities generally have a right under their own private statute to detain vessels in respect of damage to the harbour or dock works⁴, to detain and sell a ship in respect of dock and harbour dues⁵ and to take possession of and remove and sell wrecks and other obstructions and out of the proceeds to reimburse themselves for the conservancy expenses incurred⁶.

4 The right arises where the authority's special Act incorporates the Harbours, Docks, and Piers Clauses Act 1847 s 74 (see PORTS AND HARBOURS vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 754), or includes similar provisions. The mere right to detain does not involve a right to sell and has been held to amount to a possessory lien: see The Veritas [1901] P 304, 9 Asp MLC 237; Mersey Docks and Harbour Board v Hay, The Countess [1923] AC 345, 490, 16 Asp MLC 161, HL. 1024. Possessory lien.

A possessory lien is the right of a person in whose possession a ship or her appurtenances is or are to retain possession of her or them until payment or discharge of a debt or obligation due to that person in respect of her¹. Such a right belongs to one who repairs, alters or otherwise bestows labour or skill on a ship, and retains possession of her². There is no power to realise the security, even though expenses and inconvenience must be incurred in keeping it³.

1 Possessory liens (also sometimes described as common law liens) are now usually referred to as legal liens: see LIEN vol 68 (2008) PARAS 802, 817 et seq.

(3) RANKING OF LIENS

1025. Priority of liens generally.

It would seem that the determination of the priority of liens over one another rests on no rigid application of any rules but on the principle that equity must be done to the parties in the circumstances of each particular case¹. There is, however, a general order of priority, and there are certain general rules which, in the absence of special circumstances, the court tends to apply. As to the general order of priority, the right of a dock and harbour authority exercising its powers under the Harbours, Docks, and Piers Clauses Act 1847², or under the similar provisions of its special Act, to detain a ship in respect of damage to dock works³, or to detain and sell a ship in respect of dock and harbour dues⁴, or to take possession of and sell a wreck in respect of conservancy charges⁵, overrides all maritime liens.

Next in order of priority are maritime liens; these usually rank above mortgages⁶ and statutory liens. A mortgage generally has precedence over a statutory lien. A possessory lien ranks after all liens which have attached before, and before all liens which attach after, the possessory lien holder has taken possession of the ship⁷.

The exercise of a statutory power of sale is not within the ambit of priorities. Priorities are first considered after any reimbursement has taken place, and operate in relation to the residue, if any, paid into court to the ultimate benefit of claimants who have sufficient priority: The Charger, British Transport Docks Board v Owners of Proceeds of Sale of SS or Vessels Charger, Probe, Vigia, Dideki, Surveyor, Constellation, Errol and Regency [1966] 3 All ER 117 at 119, [1966] 1 Lloyd's Rep 670 at 672 per Karminski J (where a claim in respect of dock dues for priority over mortgagees against the proceeds of sale of ships by a harbour authority which had not exercised its power to detain and sell under the Harbours, Docks, and Piers Clauses Act 1847 s 44 (as to which see PORTS AND HARBOURS vol 36(1) (2007 Reissue) PARA 676) was rejected).

1026. Priority of maritime liens generally.

Maritime liens are of two classes:

- 1164 (1) those arising ex delicto; and
- 1165 (2) those arising ex contractu or quasi ex contractu, such as wages, bottomry and salvage.

Although all maritime liens, whether arising ex delicto or ex contractu or quasi ex contractu, are the same¹, in practice they usually rank according to two broad principles. First, liens arising ex delicto, in the absence of laches, rank as between themselves *pari passu*², but in priority to liens arising ex contractu³, except a subsequent lien for salvage⁴. Secondly, as a general rule, maritime liens arising ex contractu or quasi ex contractu, that is to say those for master's wages, disbursements and liabilities, seamen's wages, bottomry⁵ and salvage, are payable in the inverse order of their attachment on the property in respect of which the claim is brought (or privilege claimed)⁶, although as between themselves masters' wages and seamen's wages rank *pari passu*⁷.

1027. Damage.

The lien for damage has priority over wages, whether earned before or after the collision¹, and over a prior bottomry bond, but not over a subsequent bottomry bond to the extent of the increased value of the vessel where the bond is given by a stranger who has advanced money for repairs². Such a lien also has priority over prior salvage³, but not over subsequent salvage services because they have preserved the property for the claimants in respect of damage⁴.

This rule applies even to the crews of foreign ships claiming for wages earned subsequently to the collision. It is not based on the rule as to priority of liens ex delicto (see PARA 1026), but on the Admiralty equitable doctrine that it is unjust to the owners of the damaged ship to allow the fund to be diminished by the payment of wages when the members of the crew have a remedy in personam, which the owners of the damaged ship may not have. Where several claimants seek to satisfy liens for damage against property in respect of which the claim is brought (or privilege claimed), whether arising out of the same collision or out of several collisions, their respective liens, in the absence of laches, rank pari passu without regard to the various times when they attached¹. This result is not affected by the fact that the various claimants obtain their decrees on different dates; the claimant who obtains the first decree is no longer in a specially privileged position, as in modern practice the decree is always made subject to any question of priorities being subsequently determined².

1030. Bottomry.

Liens for bottomry¹ take precedence in the inverse order of the dates of execution² except that, where several bond-holders acting in privity and concert give bonds on different dates, the bonds will be paid pro rata³. A bottomry bond takes precedence over a master's lien for wages earned and disbursements incurred on a previous voyage to that during which the bottomry bond is given⁴, claims for the supply of goods, materials etc⁵, a mortgage made during the voyage upon which the bond was executed if enforced within a reasonable time⁶, prior salvage⁷ and over prior damage to the extent only of the increased value of the ship when the money has been advanced to effect the repair of such damage⁸.

It is postponed to the master's lien for wages earned and disbursements incurred after the date of the bond⁹, to seamen's wages, subsistence money and viaticum whenever earned¹⁰, to subsequent damage¹¹, and to subsequent salvage¹².

1031. Master's lien for wages and disbursements.

The master's lien for wages and disbursements has priority over a bottomry bond given before the wages are earned¹ unless the master is personally liable on the bond², over salvage rendered before the wages were earned³, over a shipwright's possessory lien to the extent that the master's lien originated before the shipwright took possession⁴, and, where the master's lien has already attached, over the claim of a judgment creditor who is in possession of the property in respect of which the claim is brought (or privilege claimed), by reason of execution levied by the sheriff under a writ of fieri facias⁵, over the fees and expenses of a sheriff incurred in seizing a ship under a writ of fieri facias⁶, and over a mortgage⁷, unless the master has guaranteed payment of it⁸.

The master's lien for disbursements ranks on the same footing as his lien for wages⁹. Claims by successive masters for disbursements rank pari passu, and not in the inverse order of their attachment on the property in respect of which the claim is brought (or privilege claimed)¹⁰.

The master's claim for wages ranks pari passu with the seamen's claim for wages¹¹; but the master's lien is postponed to a bottomry bond given after the wages earned¹², to subsequent salvage¹³, to damage¹⁴, and, when the master is part owner and ordered the repairs or gave the instructions, to the claim of a person who has supplied goods, materials etc¹⁵, and to a solicitor's lien for costs¹⁶.

1033. Supply of goods, materials etc.

The statutory lien for the supply of goods and materials to, and the repair of, a ship and disbursements made by a master, shipper, charterer or agent on account of a ship¹ as a general rule ranks after maritime liens but takes priority over a master's lien for wages and disbursements when supplied by the order of a master who is part owner of the ship². It is postponed to a mortgage³, to execution creditors at whose instance the sheriff has seized the property in respect of which the claim is brought (or privilege claimed) before the person supplying the goods, materials etc has arrested it⁴, and to the solicitor's costs in defending an action brought against the ship before the goods etc were supplied⁵.

Where there are several claims for the supply of goods, materials etc, they rank equally and are paid pro rata, provided that the holder of the lien is not guilty of laches in prosecuting his claim, because, when a ship is sold, the court holds the property not only for the first claimant but for all creditors of the same class who assert their claims before an unconditional decree is pronounced⁶. A claimant who supplies goods, materials etc to a ship which is already under arrest obtains no right to priority over other claimants for such supply, unless the goods, materials etc which he supplies are supplied with the sanction of the court⁷. The mere fact that claimants who have maritime liens (and thus have an interest in the preservation of the property in respect of which the claim is brought or privilege claimed) are benefited by the supply of goods, materials etc is not enough to give those claiming for the supply of goods, materials etc priority over those with maritime liens⁸. Nor will those claiming for the supply of goods, materials etc secure priority merely because their services have increased the value of the property⁹.

Possessory liens take priority over all claims arising after the ship is taken into possession, but are postponed to those liens which were created before that time, as the holder of the lien is presumed to have taken the ship into his possession with the obligations then upon her¹. The mere fact that claimants with maritime liens have benefited by the work of the repairers is not, however, a sufficient reason why those maritime liens should be postponed to the repairers' possessory lien². The statutory possessory lien of a dock or harbour authority overrides all maritime liens³.

(4) ENFORCEMENT AND EXTINCTION OF LIENS

1037. Enforcement of maritime liens.

Maritime liens are enforced by a proceeding in rem¹, followed by the arrest, and if necessary by the sale, of the property in respect of which the claim is brought (or privilege claimed)². To enforce such a lien, a court having Admiralty jurisdiction will seize the ship and forcibly dispossess those who claim to detain her or her apparel³. The court will seize and sell a ship even though she is in the possession of the holder of a possessory lien⁴ or the sheriff at the instance of execution creditors⁵. Out of the proceeds of the sale the various claimants will be satisfied according to such rules of priority as are applicable to the case⁶, the holder of the possessory lien retaining such rights of priority as he had while in possession⁷ and the rights of the execution creditors being enforced⁸. Where the property in question belongs to a company registered in England and Wales which is being wound up by the court, that property may not be arrested after the commencement of the winding up⁹; and the proper procedure for enforcing a maritime lien in such an instance is by proceeding in the winding up, in which the maritime lien will have the same priority over other debts as if proceedings had been instituted in rem¹⁰.

1038. Transfer of maritime liens.

As a general rule, maritime liens (other than the lien for bottomry¹) are not transferable²; but a court having Admiralty jurisdiction has in some cases allowed persons who have, with the sanction of the court, paid off claims against a ship to have the same advantages as to priorities as the person had whose claim they have satisfied³. A foreign consul may in the name of his government have certain rights against a fund in court for the recovery of the expenses of repatriating seamen⁴; but a person who advances money to salvors has no lien on an award⁵.

3 In some early cases, persons who had paid off claims without the sanction of the court were allowed to avail themselves of the priority enjoyed by those whose claims they had satisfied. In The Cornelia Henrietta (1866) LR 1 A & E 51, Dr Lushington laid down the rule that these payments must be made with the sanction of the court if the priority of the claim satisfied was to be claimed by the person satisfying the claim. Hill J exhaustively reviewed all the previous authorities in The Petone [1917] P 198, 14 Asp MLC 283, and in view of this judgment it would appear that the cases where parties paid on claims without the sanction of the court and then availed themselves of the priority enjoyed by the person whose claim had been satisfied would no longer be followed. The holder of a possessory lien¹ cannot enforce it by sale, but may only continue to hold the property until his claims are paid, even though to do so entails expense². If, however, he is dispossessed by a court having Admiralty jurisdiction³, then out of the proceeds of the ship he will be paid his claim according to the rules as to priorities⁴.

1041. Extinction of liens.

Claims to enforce liens are liable to be statute-barred. No action is normally maintainable to enforce a lien against a ship or her owners in respect of damage or loss caused by the fault of that ship to another ship, its cargo or freight or any property on board her, or for damages for loss of life or personal injury caused by the fault of that ship to any person on board another ship, unless proceedings are brought within the period of two years from the date when the damage or loss was caused or the loss of life or injury was suffered¹. In certain cases, the court may, however, extend the time limit for bringing such proceedings².

Maritime liens, other than those for collisions between vessels and salvage and for seamen's wages, are not limited to any time for enforcement, but travel with the ship into whosoever possession she may come³, but may be lost through lack of reasonable diligence in enforcing them⁴.

A maritime or statutory lien is extinguished by giving bail or a guarantee to prevent the arrest or secure the release of the property in an action to enforce the lien⁵, by the arrest and sale of the ship in an action in rem by a court of competent jurisdiction, whether English or foreign⁶, by assignment without the sanction of the court⁷, and by failure to bring the claim arising from it within the time ordained by the court in limitation proceedings⁸.

Possessory liens are extinguished by payment, by yielding up possession, or by arrest of the ship by a court of competent authority⁹.

(1) IN GENERAL

(i) Provision Made for Limitation of Liability

1042. The Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims.

The provisions of the Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims¹ (the 'Convention') have the force of law² in the United Kingdom³. They apply in relation to Her Majesty's ships as they apply in relation to other ships⁴; but they do not apply to any liability in respect of loss of life or personal injury caused to, or loss of or damage to any property of, a person who is on board the ship⁵ in question or employed in connection with that ship or with the salvage operations⁶ in question if⁷: (1) he is so on board or employed under a contract of service governed by the law of any part of the United Kingdom⁸; and (2) the liability arises from an occurrence which took place on or after 1 January 1996⁹.

1 The Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims (London, 1 to 19 November 1976; TS 13 (1990); Cm 955) (as to which see PARA 8). The provisions of the Convention are set out in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 185(1), Sch 7 Pt I (arts 1-15, 18) (see PARA 1043 et seq) and are referred to therein, and in Sch 7 Pt II (paras 1-13) (see PARA 1043 et seq), as the 'Convention': see s 185(1). The provisions of Sch 7 Pt II have effect in connection with the Convention; and the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 185(1) has effect subject to the provisions of Pt II: s 185(2).

Her Majesty may by Order in Council make such modifications of Sch 7 Pt I and Sch 7 Pt II as She considers appropriate in consequence of the revision of the Convention by the Protocol (2 May 1996) amending the Convention (the '1996 Protocol'): Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 185(2A) (s 185(2A)-(2E) added by the Merchant Shipping and Maritime Security Act 1997 s 15(1)). If it appears to Her Majesty in Council that the government of the United Kingdom has agreed to any further revision of the Convention or to any revision of the 1996 Protocol art 8, She may by Order in Council make such modifications of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 7 Pt I and Sch 7 Pt II, and of s 185(2C), (2D), as She considers appropriate in consequence of the revision: s 185(2B) (as so added). A draft of an Order in Council proposed to be made by virtue of s 185(2A) or s 185(2B) is not to be submitted to Her Majesty in Council unless it has been approved by a resolution of each House of Parliament: s 185(5) (added by the Merchant Shipping and Maritime Security Act 1997 s 15(2)). As to Orders so made see the Merchant Shipping (Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims) (Amendment) Order 1998, SI 1998/1258; and the Merchant Shipping (Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims) (Amendment) Order 2004, SI 2004/1273.

The Secretary of State may by order make such amendments of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 7 Pt I and Sch 7 Pt II as appear to him to be appropriate for the purpose of giving effect to any amendment of a relevant limit which is adopted in accordance with the 1996 Protocol art 8: Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 185(2C) (as so added). For these purposes, a 'relevant limit' means any of the limits for the time being specified in either of the following provisions of the Convention, namely art 6(1) and art 7(1): Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 185(2D) (as so added). No modification made by virtue of s 185(2A), (2B) or (2C) may affect any rights or liabilities arising out of an occurrence which took place before the day on which the modification comes into force: s 185(2E) (as so added). At the date at which this volume states the law, no such order had been made under s 185(2C)-(2E). As to the Secretary of State see PARA 38; and as to the making of orders by the Secretary of State under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 generally see PARA 41.

2 As to the meaning of 'having the force of law' cf The Hollandia [1983] 1 AC 565, [1982] 3 All ER 1141, sub nom The Morviken [1983] 1 Lloyd's Rep 1, HL.

3 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 185(1). As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 17 note 3. The Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims does not limit the jurisdiction of the Admiralty Court, which is governed by the Supreme Court Act 1981: see Vessel SA v CP Ships (UK) Ltd, sub nom Denise (The Owners) v The Denise (Charterers)[2004] EWHC 3305 (Admlty), [2005] 2 All ER (Comm) 47 (owner was entitled to invoke the jurisdiction of the court to seek a decree of limitation even in circumstances where there was no claim (as yet) brought against it in the jurisdiction). As to the Admiralty jurisdiction of the High Court of Justice generally see PARA 85 et seq.

An Order in Council made for the purposes of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 7 Pt II para 13 and declaring that any state specified in the Order is a party to the Convention as amended by the 1996 Protocol is conclusive evidence, subject to the provisions of any subsequent Order made for those purposes, that the state is a party to the Convention as amended by the 1996 Protocol: Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 7 Pt II para 13 (substituted by SI 1998/1258). A statutory instrument containing an Order in Council under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 7 Pt II para 13 is not subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament: see s 306(3); and PARA 41. However, at the date at which this volume states the law, no such Order in Council had been made but, by virtue of the Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b), the Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims (Parties to Convention) Order 1986, SI 1986/2224, has effect as if so made.

Nothing in the Pilotage Act 1987 s 22(3) or (4) (see PARA 584) affects any liability which may be limited under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 185 (see the Pilotage Act 1987 s 22(7); and PARA 584); nor does anything in the Convention relating to the Carriage of Passengers and their Luggage by Sea (Athens, 13 December 1974; TS 40 (1987); Cm 202) affect the operation of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 185 (see Sch 6 Pt II para 12; and CARRIAGE AND CARRIERS).

4 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 185(3). As to the meaning of 'ship' see PARA 229. 1042 The Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims

NOTE 3--Supreme Court Act 1981 now cited as Senior Courts Act 1981: Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Sch 11 para 1 (in force 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604).

Halsbury's Laws of England/SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW (VOLUME 93 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-590; VOLUME 94 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 591-1254)/12. LIMITATION OF LIABILITY OF SHIPOWNERS ETC/(1) IN GENERAL/(ii) Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims/A. RIGHT OF LIMITATION UNDER THE CONVENTION/1043. Persons entitled to limit liability under the Convention.

(ii) Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims

A. RIGHT OF LIMITATION UNDER THE CONVENTION

1043. Persons entitled to limit liability under the Convention.

Under the Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims¹, shipowners² and salvors³ may limit their liability⁴ for claims that the Convention makes subject to limitation⁵. If any such claims are made against any person for whose act, neglect or default the shipowner or salvor is responsible, such person is entitled to avail himself of the limitation of liability provided for in the Convention⁶.

An insurer of liability for claims subject to limitation⁷ is entitled to the benefits of the Convention to the same extent as the assured himself⁸.

The act of invoking limitation of liability does not constitute an admission of liability⁹.

1 The Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims (London, 1 to 19 November 1976; TS 13 (1990); Cm 955) (as to which see PARA 8). The provisions of the Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims that have the force of law in the United Kingdom are set out in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 185(1), Sch 7 Pt I (arts 1-15, 18) (see PARA 1044 et seq) and are referred to therein, and in Sch 7 Pt II (paras 1-13) (see PARA 1044 et seq), as the 'Convention': see s 185(1); and PARA 1042. The provisions of Sch 7 Pt II have effect in connection with the Convention; and the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 185(1) has effect subject to the provisions of Pt II (paras 1-13): see s 185(2); and PARA 1042.

2 For these purposes, 'shipowner' means the owner, charterer, manager or operator of a sea-going ship: Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims art 1(2). References in the Convention and in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 185(2), Sch 7 Pt II paras 1-10 (see PARA 1044 et seq) to a ship include references to any structure, whether completed or in course of completion, launched and intended for use in navigation as a ship or part of a ship: see Sch 7 Pt II para 12.

3 For these purposes, 'salvor' means any person rendering services in direct connection with salvage operations; and 'salvage operations' also includes operations referred to in art 2(1)(d), (e), (f) (see PARA 1044): art 1(3).

4 In accordance with the rules of the Convention (see PARA 1044 et seq): art 1(1).

5 Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims art 1(1). The claims that are made subject to limitation under the Convention are set out in art 2 (see PARA 1044): see art 1(1).

The right to limit liability under the Convention applies in relation to any ship whether sea-going or not; and the meaning of 'shipowner' in art 1(2) (see note 2) is to be construed accordingly: Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 7 Pt II paras 1, 2 (Sch 7 Pt II para 2 amended by SI 1998/1258). The Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 7 Pt II para 2 is subject to Sch 7 Pt II para 6 (see PARA 1049): see Sch 7 Pt II para 2 (as so amended). In the Convention, the liability of a shipowner includes liability in an action brought against the vessel herself: art 1(5).

A charterer's ability to limit liability pursuant to the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 depends on the type of claim that is brought against him rather than the capacity in which he was acting when his liability arose: CMA CGM SA v Classica Shipping Co Ltd [2004] EWCA Civ 114, [2004] 1 All ER (Comm) 865, [2004] 1 Lloyd's Rep 460. 1044. Claims subject to limitation under the Convention.

Under the Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims¹, the following claims, whatever the basis of liability may be, may be subject to limitation of liability²:

- 1166 (1) claims in respect of loss of life or personal injury or loss of or damage to property (including damage to harbour works, basins and waterways and aids to navigation), occurring on board or in direct connection with the operation of the ship³ or with salvage operations⁴, and consequential loss resulting therefrom⁵;
- 1167 (2) claims in respect of loss resulting from delay in the carriage by sea of cargo, passengers or their luggage⁶;
- 1168 (3) claims in respect of other loss resulting from infringement of rights other than contractual rights, occurring in direct connection with the operation of the ship or salvage operations⁷;
- 1169 (4) claims in respect of the raising, removal, destruction or the rendering harmless of a ship which is sunk, wrecked, stranded or abandoned, including anything that is or has been on board such ship⁸;
- 1170 (5) claims in respect of the removal, destruction or the rendering harmless of the cargo of the ship⁹;
- 1171 (6) claims of a person other than the person liable in respect of measures taken in order to avert or minimise loss for which the person liable may limit his liability in accordance with the Convention, and further loss caused by such measures¹⁰.

Claims set out in heads (1) to (6) above may be subject to limitation of liability even if brought by way of recourse or for indemnity under a contract or otherwise¹¹. Claims set out in heads (4) to (6) above may not, however, be subject to limitation of liability to the extent that they relate to remuneration under a contract with the person liable¹².

The provisions of the Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims that have the force of law in the United Kingdom are set out in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 185(1), Sch 7 Pt I (arts 1-15, 18) (see PARAS 1043, 1045 et seq) and are referred to therein, and in Sch 7 Pt II (paras 1-13) (see PARAS 1043, 1045 et seq), as the 'Convention': see s 185(1); and PARA 1042. The provisions of Sch 7 Pt II have effect in connection with the Convention; and the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 185(1) has effect subject to the provisions of Pt II (paras 1-13): see s 185(2); and PARA 1042.

2 Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims art 2(1). Article 2(1) is subject to art 3 (claims excepted from limitation) (see PARA 1045) and art 4 (see PARA 1046) (conduct barring limitation): see art 2(1). 3 As to the meaning of references to a ship see PARA 1043 note 2. The loss of the ship itself is not a loss of property 'occurring . . . in direct connection with the operation of the ship' for the purposes of the Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims art (2)1(a): Aegean Sea Traders Corp v Repsol Petroleo SA [1998] 2 Lloyd's Rep 39.  The right to limit liability for claims under art 2(1)(d) does not apply to the law of the United Kingdom unless provision has been made by an order of the Secretary of State for the setting up and management of a fund to be used for the making to harbour or conservancy authorities of payments needed to compensate them for the reduction, in consequence of art 2(1)(d), of amounts recoverable by them in claims of the kind mentioned in head (4) in the text, and to be maintained by contributions from such authorities raised and collected by them in respect of vessels in like manner as other sums so raised by them: Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 7 Pt II paras 1, 3(1). Such an order may contain such incidental and supplemental provisions as appear to the Secretary of State to be necessary or expedient: Sch 7 Pt II para 3(2). However, at the date at which this volume states the law, no such order had been made and none has effect as if so made. The rules of the Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims¹ do not apply to²:

- 1172 (1) claims for salvage³ or contribution in general average⁴;
- 1173 (2) claims for oil pollution damage⁵;
- 1174 (3) claims subject to any international convention or national legislation governing or prohibiting limitation of liability for nuclear damage⁶;
- 1175 (4) claims against the shipowner⁷ of a nuclear ship for nuclear damage⁸;
- 1176 (5) claims by servants of the shipowner or salvor⁹ whose duties are connected with the ship¹⁰ or the salvage operations¹¹, including claims of their heirs, dependants or other persons entitled to make such claims, if under the law governing the contract of service between the shipowner or salvor and such servants the shipowner or salvor is not entitled to limit his liability in respect of such claims, or if he is by such law only permitted to limit his liability to an amount greater than that provided for in the general limits¹² of liability¹³.

Claims for damage within the meaning of the International Convention on Liability and Compensation for Damage in Connection with the Carriage of Hazardous and Noxious Substances by Sea 1996¹⁴, which arise from occurrences taking place after that Convention has effect in relation to the United Kingdom¹⁵, are also excluded from the Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims¹⁶.

1046. Conduct barring limitation under the Convention.

Under the Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims¹, a person liable is not entitled to limit his liability if it is proved² that the loss resulted from his personal act or omission, committed with the intent to cause such loss, or recklessly and with knowledge that such loss would probably result³.

1 The Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims (London, 1 to 19 November 1976; TS 13 (1990); Cm 955) (as to which see PARA 8). The provisions of the Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims that have the force of law in the United Kingdom are set out in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 185(1), Sch 7 Pt I (arts 1-15, 18) (see PARAS 1043 et seq, 1047 et seq) and are referred to therein, and in Sch 7 Pt II (paras 1-13) (see PARAS 1043 et seq, 1047 et seq), as the 'Convention': see s 185(1); and PARA 1042. The provisions of Sch 7 Pt II have effect in connection with the Convention; and the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 185(1) has effect subject to the provisions of Pt II (paras 1-13): see s 185(2); and PARA 1042.

2 The policy of the Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims is on the one hand to make it more difficult to deny limitation of liability and on the other to fix much higher limits of liability: see The Breydon Merchant [1992] 1 Lloyd's Rep 373 at 376 per Sheen J.

3 Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims art 4. Cf the position under the Warsaw Convention: see eg Goldman v Thai Airways International Ltd [1983] 3 All ER 693, [1983] 1 WLR 1186, CA; Qantas Airways Ltd v SS Pharmaceutical Co Ltd [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep 319, NSW CA; affd [1991] 1 Lloyd's Rep 288, Aust CA.

The Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims art 4 requires actual knowledge; 'shut-eye' knowledge is not sufficient: MSC Mediterranean Shipping Co SA v Delumar BVBA [2000] 2 All ER (Comm) 458, [2000] 2 Lloyd's Rep 399 (absent any allegation of intent, the person challenging the right to limit must establish both reckless conduct and knowledge that the relevant loss would probably result, these two requirements being cumulative). See also Schiffahrtsgesellschaft MS Merkur Sky MbH & Co KG v MS Leerort Nth Schiffahrts GmbH & Co KG, The Leerort and The Zim Piraeus [2001] EWCA Civ 1055, [2001] 2 Lloyd's Rep 291 (the knowledge or foresight required is of the very loss that has in fact occurred, and not just loss of that type). However, see Margolle v Delta Maritime Co Ltd [2002] EWHC 2452 (Admlty), [2003] 1 All ER (Comm) 102, [2003] 1 Lloyd's Rep 203 (where a master, contrary to regulations, steers his vessel against the flow of traffic in a busy shipping lane, it can be inferred that he has the relevant knowledge that loss will probably result).

Under the Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims¹, where a person entitled to limitation of liability² has a claim against the claimant arising out of the same occurrence, their respective claims must be set off against each other and the provisions of the Convention only apply to the balance, if any³.

1 I.e. the Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims (London, 1 to 19 November 1976; TS 13 (1990); Cm 955) (as to which see PARA 8). The provisions of the Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims that have the force of law in the United Kingdom are set out in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 185(1), Sch 7 Pt I (arts 1-15, 18) (see PARAS 1043 et seq, 1048 et seq) and are referred to therein, and in Sch 7 Pt II (paras 1-13) (see PARAS 1043 et seq, 1048 et seq), as the 'Convention': see s 185(1); and PARA 1042. B. LIMITS OF LIABILITY UNDER THE CONVENTION

1048. General limits of liability under the Convention.

Under the Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims¹, the limits of liability for claims arising on any distinct occasion, other than in respect of claims arising on any distinct occasion for loss of life or personal injury to passengers of a ship², must be calculated as follows³:

- 1177 (1) in respect of claims for loss of life or personal injury:
1. (a) two million units of account⁴ for a ship⁵ with a tonnage not exceeding 2,000 tons⁶;
 2. (b) for a ship with a tonnage in excess thereof, the following amount in addition to that mentioned in head (1)(a) above, that is to say, for each ton from 2,001 to 30,000 tons, 800 units of account, for each ton from 30,001 to 70,000 tons, 600 units of account, and, for each ton in excess of 70,000 tons, 400 units of account⁷;
- 1124
1178 (2) in respect of any other claims:
1125
3. (a) one million units of account for a ship with a tonnage not exceeding 2,000 tons⁸;
 4. (b) for a ship with a tonnage in excess thereof, the following amount in addition to that mentioned in head (2)(a) above, that is to say, for a ship with a tonnage in excess of 2,000 tons, the additional amounts are, for each ton from 2,001 to 30,000 tons, 400 units of account, for each ton from 30,001 to 70,000 tons, 300 units of account, and, for each ton in excess of 70,000 tons, 200 units of account⁹.
- 1126

Where the amount calculated in accordance with head (1) above is insufficient to pay the claims mentioned therein in full, the amount calculated in accordance with head (2) above must be available for payment of the unpaid balance of claims under head (1) above and such unpaid balance ranks rateably with claims mentioned under head (2) above¹⁰.

The limits of liability for any salvor¹¹ not operating from any ship or for any salvor operating solely on the ship to, or in respect of which he is rendering salvage services, must be calculated according to a tonnage of 1,500 tons¹².

In the application of the general limits of liability¹³ to a ship with a tonnage less than 300 tons¹⁴, those limits have effect as if head (1)(a) above referred to one million units of account and as if head (2)(a) above referred to 500,000 units of account¹⁵.

14 For these purposes, a ship's tonnage is its gross tonnage calculated in such manner as may be prescribed by an order made by the Secretary of State: Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 7 Pt II para 5(2). Any such order must, so far as appears to the Secretary of State to be practicable, give effect to the regulations in the International Convention on Tonnage Measurement of Ships (London, 23 June to 23 December 1969; TS 50 (1982); Cmnd 8716) Annex 1 (as to which see PARAS 8, 248 et seq): see the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 7 Pt II para 5(3). As to the Secretary of State see PARA 38; and as to the making of orders by the Secretary of State under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 generally see PARA 41. At the date at which this volume states the law, no such order had been made but, by virtue of the Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b), the Merchant Shipping (Liability of Shipowners and Others) (Calculation of Tonnage) Order 1986, SI 1986/1040, has effect as if so made. Accordingly, for the purposes of the Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims art 6 and the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 7 Pt II para 5, the gross tonnage of a ship must be calculated in accordance with the Merchant Shipping (Tonnage) Regulations 1997, SI 1997/1510 (as to which see PARA 248 et seq): Merchant Shipping (Liability of Shipowners and Others) (Calculation of Tonnage) Order 1986, SI 1986/1040, art 2(1); Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b). In the case of a ship of which, at the time when the limitation is claimed, the tonnage has not yet been and cannot be ascertained in accordance with the Merchant Shipping (Liability of Shipowners and Others) (Calculation of Tonnage) Order 1986, SI 1986/1040, art 2(1), the best evidence available of the measurements of the ship must be used in so calculating the tonnage of the ship: art 2(2).

1049. Limit for passenger claims under the Convention.

Under the Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims¹, in respect of claims arising on any distinct occasion for loss of life or personal injury to passengers of a ship², the limit of liability of the shipowner³ thereof is an amount of 175,000 units of account⁴ multiplied by the number of passengers which the ship is authorised to carry according to the ship's certificate⁵.

1 The Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims (London, 1 to 19 November 1976; TS 13 (1990); Cm 955) (as to which see PARA 8). The provisions of the Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims that have the force of law in the United Kingdom are set out in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 185(1), Sch 7 Pt I (arts 1-15, 18) (see PARAS 1043 et seq, 1050 et seq) and are referred to therein, and in Sch 7 Pt II (paras 1-13) (see PARAS 1043 et seq, 1050 et seq), as the 'Convention': see s 185(1); and PARA 1042. The provisions of Sch 7 Pt II have effect in connection with the Convention; and the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 185(1) has effect subject to the provisions of Pt II (paras 1-13): see s 185(2); and PARA 1042.

2 For these purposes, 'claims for loss of life or personal injury to passengers of a ship' means any such claims brought by or on behalf of any person carried in that ship under a contract of passenger carriage or who, with the consent of the carrier, is accompanying a vehicle or live animals which are covered by a contract for the carriage of goods: Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims art 7(2). In art 7(2), the reference to 'claims brought [. . .] on behalf of a person' includes a reference to any claim in respect of the death of a person under the Fatal Accidents Act 1976 (as to which see NEGLIGENCE vol 78 (2010) PARA 24 et seq): Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 7 Pt II para 6(2). 5 Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims art 7(1) (substituted by SI 1998/1258). The Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims art 7 does not apply in respect of any sea-going ship, and has effect in respect of any ship which is not sea-going as if art 7(1) were to read 'in respect of claims arising on any distinct occasion for loss of life or personal injury to passengers of a ship, the limit of liability of the shipowner thereof, in respect of each passenger, is an amount of 175,000 units of account': Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 7 Pt II para 6(1) (substituted by SI 1998/1258).

Unit of account used in the Convention.

1050. Unit of account used in the Convention.

Under the Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims¹, the unit of account that is referred to for the purposes of setting limits of liability² is the special drawing right as defined by the International Monetary Fund³. The amounts payable under the Convention⁴ must be converted into the national currency of the state in which limitation is sought⁵, according to the value of that currency at the date the limitation fund⁶ has been constituted, payment is made, or security is given which under the law of that state is equivalent to such payment⁷.

Accordingly, for the purpose of converting the amounts payable under the Convention⁸ from special drawing rights into sterling, one special drawing right is to be treated as equal to such a sum in sterling as the International Monetary Fund has fixed as being the equivalent of one special drawing right for⁹:

- 1179 (1) the relevant date¹⁰; or
- 1180 (2) if no sum has been so fixed for that date, the last preceding date for which a sum has been so fixed¹¹.

A certificate given by or on behalf of the Treasury¹² stating:

- 1181 (a) that a particular sum in sterling has been fixed as mentioned in head (1) above for a particular date¹³; or
- 1182 (b) that no sum has been so fixed for that date and that a particular sum in sterling has been so fixed for a date which is the last preceding date for which a sum has been so fixed¹⁴, is conclusive evidence of those matters; and a document purporting to be such a certificate must, in any proceedings, be received in evidence and, unless the contrary is proved, is deemed to be such a certificate¹⁵.

- 1185 (3) against the salvor or salvors who are not operating from a ship or who are operating solely on the ship to, or in respect of which, the salvage services are rendered and any person for whose act, neglect or default he or they are responsible⁹.

C. THE LIMITATION FUND UNDER THE CONVENTION

1053. Constitution of the limitation fund.

Under the Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims¹, any person alleged to be liable may constitute a fund with the court² or other competent authority in any state party³ in which legal proceedings are instituted in respect of claims subject to limitation⁴. The fund must be constituted in the sum of such of the amounts payable⁵ as are applicable to claims for which that person may be liable, together with interest thereon⁶ from the date of the occurrence giving rise to the liability until the date of the constitution of the fund⁷. A fund may be constituted either by depositing the sum, or by producing a guarantee acceptable under the legislation of the state party where the fund is constituted and considered to be adequate by the court or other competent authority⁸. Any fund thus constituted is available only for the payment of claims in respect of which limitation of liability can be invoked⁹.

Where a fund is so constituted with the court¹⁰ for the payment of claims arising out of any occurrence, the court may stay any proceedings relating to any claim arising out of that occurrence which are pending against the person by whom the fund has been constituted¹¹.

6 The Secretary of State may, with the concurrence of the Treasury, by order prescribe the rate of interest for the purposes of the Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims art 11(1): Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 7 Pt II paras 1, 8(1). Any statutory instrument containing such an order must be laid before Parliament after being made: Sch 7 Pt II para 8(2). In exercise of the powers conferred by Sch 7 Pt II para 8(1), the Secretary of State, with the concurrence of the Treasury, has made the Merchant Shipping (Liability of Shipowners and Others) (New Rate of Interest) Order 2004, SI 2004/931. Accordingly, the rate of interest for the purposes of the Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims art 11(1) is the prescribed rate from 31 December 2003, where the occurrence takes place before 1 September 1999 (but the fund is constituted on or after 1 September 1999) or where the occurrence takes place on or after 1 September 1999: Merchant Shipping (Liability of Shipowners and Others) (New Rate of Interest) Order 2004, SI 2004/931, art 4. For these purposes, 'prescribed rate' means 1% more than the base rate quoted from time to time by the Bank of England or the rate of interest set by any body which may supersede it and where there is more than one such rate, the lowest of them: art 2. 1054. Distribution of the limitation fund.

Under the Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims¹, the limitation fund² must be distributed³ among the claimants in proportion to their established claims against the fund⁴.

If, before the fund is distributed, the person liable, or his insurer, has settled a claim against the fund, such person acquires by subrogation, up to the amount he has paid, the rights which the person so compensated would have enjoyed under the Convention⁵. Such right of subrogation may also be exercised by other persons in respect of any amount of compensation which they may have paid, but only to the extent that such subrogation is permitted under the applicable national law⁶.

Where the person liable or any other person establishes that he may be compelled to pay, at a later date, in whole or in part any such amount of compensation with regard to which such person would have enjoyed a right of subrogation⁷ had the compensation been paid before the fund was distributed, the court⁸ or other competent authority of the state where the fund has been constituted may order that a sufficient sum be provisionally set aside to enable such person at such later date to enforce his claim against the fund⁹.

1055. Bar to other actions once limitation fund has been constituted.

Where, under the Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims¹, a limitation fund has been constituted², any person having made a claim against the fund is barred from exercising any right in respect of such a claim against any other assets of a person by or on behalf of whom the fund has been constituted³.

After a limitation fund has been constituted⁴, any ship⁵ or other property, belonging to a person on behalf of whom the fund has been constituted, which has been arrested or attached within the jurisdiction of a state party⁶ for a claim which may be raised against the fund, or any security given, may be released by order of the court⁷ or other competent authority of such state⁸. However, such release must always be ordered if the limitation fund has been constituted:

- 1186 (1) at the port where the occurrence took place, or, if it took place out of port, at the first port of call thereafter⁹; or
- 1187 (2) at the port of disembarkation in respect of claims for loss of life or personal injury¹⁰; or
- 1188 (3) at the port of discharge in respect of damage to cargo¹¹; or
- 1189 (4) in the state where the arrest is made¹².

These rules¹³ apply only if the claimant may bring a claim against the limitation fund before the court administering that fund and the fund is actually available and freely transferable in respect of that claim¹⁴.

D. SCOPE OF APPLICATION OF THE CONVENTION

1057. General application of the Convention.

The Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims¹ applies whenever any person who is entitled to limit liability² seeks to limit his liability before the court³ of a state party⁴ or seeks to procure the release of a ship⁵ or other property or the discharge of any security given within the jurisdiction of any such state⁶.

A state party may regulate by specific provisions of national law the system of limitation of liability to be applied to vessels which are, according to the law of that state, ships intended for navigation on inland waterways⁷, or ships of less than 300 tons⁸. However, a state party which makes use of such an option must inform the depositary of the limits of liability adopted in its national legislation, or of the fact that there are none⁹.

Notwithstanding the limit of liability prescribed for passenger claims¹⁰, a state party may regulate by specific provisions of national law the system of liability to be applied to claims for loss of life or personal injury to passengers of a ship, provided that the limit of liability is not lower than that so prescribed¹¹. However, a state party which makes use of such an option must inform the Secretary General of the International Maritime Organisation¹² of the limits of liability adopted, or of the fact that there are none¹³.

Under the Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims¹, any state² may, at the time of signature, ratification, acceptance, approval or accession, or at any time thereafter, reserve the right to exclude³:

- 1190 (1) the right to make subject to limitation⁴: (a) claims in respect of the raising, removal, destruction or the rendering harmless of a ship⁵ which is sunk, wrecked, stranded or abandoned, including anything that is or has been on board such ship⁶; or (b) claims in respect of the removal, destruction or the rendering harmless of the cargo of the ship⁷; and

(2) EXCLUSION OF LIABILITY FOR LOSS OR DAMAGE

1059. General exclusions.

The owner¹ of a United Kingdom ship² is not liable for any loss or damage in the following cases³, namely:

- 1192 (1) where any property on board the ship is lost or damaged by reason of fire on board the ship⁴; or
- 1193 (2) where any gold, silver, watches, jewels or precious stones on board the ship are lost or damaged by reason of theft, robbery or other dishonest conduct and their nature and value were not at the time of shipment declared by their owner or shipper to the owner or master⁵ of the ship in the bill of lading or otherwise in writing⁶.

Where the loss or damage arises from anything done or omitted by any person in his capacity of master or member of the crew or, otherwise than in that capacity, in the course of his employment as a servant of the owner of the ship, the liability of the following persons is also excluded⁷, namely:

- 1194 (a) the master, member of the crew or servant⁸; and
- 1195 (b) in a case where the master or member of the crew is the servant of a person whose liability would not otherwise be so excluded⁹, the person whose servant he is¹⁰.

These provisions¹¹ do not exclude the liability of any person for any loss or damage resulting from any personal act or omission of his, committed with the intent to cause such loss, or recklessly and with knowledge that such loss would probably result¹².

1 For these purposes, 'owner', in relation to a ship, includes any part owner and any charterer, manager or operator of the ship: Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 186(5). As to the meaning of 'ship' see PARA 229.

LIMITATION OF LIABILITY OF SHIPOWNERS ETC/(3) MULTIPLE FAULT; APPORTIONMENT, LIABILITY AND CONTRIBUTION/1060. Damage or loss: apportionment of liability.

(3) MULTIPLE FAULT; APPORTIONMENT, LIABILITY AND CONTRIBUTION

1060. Damage or loss: apportionment of liability.

Where, by the fault of two or more ships¹, damage or loss is caused² to one or more of those ships, to their cargoes or freight³, or to any property on board, the liability to make good the damage or loss is in proportion to the degree in which each ship was in fault⁴. If, in any such case, having regard to all the circumstances, it is not possible to establish different degrees of fault, the liability must be apportioned equally⁵.

These rules as to apportionment⁶ apply to persons other than the owners of a ship who are responsible for the fault of the ships, as well as to the owners of a ship; and, where, by virtue of any charter or demise, or for any other reason, the owners are not responsible for the navigation and management of the ship, these rules apply to the charterers or other persons for the time being so responsible instead of the owners⁷.

However, nothing in these provisions which govern apportionment of liability⁸:

1196 (1) operates so as to render any ship liable for any loss or damage to which the fault of the ship has not contributed⁹;

1197 (2) affects the liability of any person under a contract of carriage or any contract, or is to be construed as imposing any liability upon any person from which he is exempted by any contract or by any provision of law, or as affecting the right of any person to limit his liability in the manner provided by law¹⁰.

1 As to the meaning of 'ship' see PARA 229. The provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 187 are to be read as if references to ships include references to hovercraft: see the Hovercraft (Civil Liability) Order 1986, SI 1986/1305, art 7; the Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b); and PARA 386.

2 For these purposes, references to damage or loss caused by the fault of a ship include references to any salvage or other expenses, consequent upon that fault, recoverable at law by way of damages: Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 187(7).

3 For these purposes, 'freight' includes passage money and hire: Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 187(6).

1061. Loss of life or personal injuries; joint and several liability.

Where loss of life or personal injuries are suffered by any person on board a ship¹ owing to the fault of that ship² and of any other ship or ships, the liability of the owners³ of the ships is joint and several⁴.

However, nothing in the provisions which govern such liability⁵ may be construed as depriving any person of any right of defence on which he might otherwise⁶ have relied in an action brought against him by the person injured, or any person or persons entitled to sue in respect of such loss of life, or affects the right of any person to limit his liability in the manner provided by law⁷.

1 As to the meaning of 'ship' see PARA 229. The provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 188 are to be read as if references to ships include references to hovercraft: see the Hovercraft (Civil Liability) Order 1986, SI 1986/1305, art 7; the Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b); and PARA 386.

2 For these purposes, references to damage or loss caused by the fault of a ship include references to any salvage or other expenses, consequent upon that fault, recoverable at law by way of damages: Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 187(7), applied by s 188(4).

3 The rules contained in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 188 apply to persons other than the owners of a ship who are responsible for the fault of the ships, as well as to the owners of a ship; and, where, by virtue of any charter or demise, or for any other reason, the owners are not responsible for the navigation and management of the ship, s 188 applies to the charterers or other persons for the time being so responsible instead of the owners: s 187(3), applied by s 188(2).

LIMITATION OF LIABILITY OF SHIPOWNERS ETC/(3) MULTIPLE FAULT; APPORTIONMENT, LIABILITY AND CONTRIBUTION/1062. Loss of life or personal injuries; right of contribution.

1062. Loss of life or personal injuries; right of contribution.

Where loss of life or personal injuries are suffered by any person on board a ship¹ owing to the fault of that ship and any other ship or ships, and a proportion of the damages is recovered against the owners² of one of the ships which exceeds the proportion in which the ship was in fault, they may recover by way of contribution the amount of the excess from the owners of the other ship or ships to the extent to which those ships were respectively in fault³.

However, nothing in these provisions governing the right of contribution⁴ authorises the recovery of any amount which could not, by reason of any statutory or contractual limitation of, or exemption from, liability, or which could not for any other reason, have been recovered in the first instance as damages by the persons entitled to claim therefor⁵.

In addition to any other remedy provided by law, the persons entitled to any contribution so recoverable⁶ have, for the purposes of recovering it, the same rights and powers as the persons entitled to claim for damages in the first instance⁷.

1 As to the meaning of 'ship' see PARA 229. The provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 189 are to be read as if references to ships include references to hovercraft: see the Hovercraft (Civil Liability) Order 1986, SI 1986/1305, art 7; the Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b); and PARA 386.

2 The rules contained in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 189 apply to persons other than the owners of a ship who are responsible for the fault of the ships, as well as to the owners of a ship; and, where, by virtue of any charter or demise, or for any other reason, the owners are not responsible for the navigation and management of the ship, s 189 applies to the charterers or other persons for the time being so responsible instead of the owners: s 187(3), applied by s 189(2).

General time limits for proceedings to enforce claim or lien against a ship or her owners.

(4) TIME LIMIT FOR PROCEEDINGS AGAINST OWNERS OR SHIP

1063. General time limits for proceedings to enforce claim or lien against a ship or her owners.

No proceedings to enforce any claim or lien against a ship¹ or her owners²:

1198 (1) in respect of damage or loss caused by the fault of that ship to another ship, its cargo or freight or any property on board it³; or

1199 (2) for damages for loss of life or personal injury caused by the fault of that ship to any person on board another ship⁴, may be brought after the period of two years from the date when⁵:

1200 (a) the damage or loss was caused⁶; or

1201 (b) the loss of life or injury was suffered⁷.

Nor may any proceedings relating to multiple fault⁸, to enforce any contribution in respect of any overpaid proportion of any damages for loss of life or personal injury, be brought after the period of one year from the date of payment⁹.

Any court having jurisdiction in such proceedings¹⁰ may, however, in accordance with rules of court, extend the period allowed for bringing proceedings to such extent and on such conditions as it thinks fit¹¹.

Any such court, if satisfied that there has not been during any period allowed for bringing proceedings any reasonable opportunity of arresting the defendant ship¹², either:

1202 (i) within the jurisdiction of the court¹³; or

1203 (ii) within the territorial sea of the country to which the claimant's ship belongs or in which the claimant resides or has his principal place of business¹⁴, must extend the period allowed for bringing proceedings to an extent sufficient to give a reasonable opportunity of so arresting the ship¹⁵.

1 As to the meaning of 'ship' see PARA 229. The provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 190 are to be read as if references to ships include references to hovercraft: see the Hovercraft (Civil Liability) Order 1986, SI 1986/1305, art 7; the Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b); and PARA 386. In Steedman v Schofield [1992] 2 Lloyd's Rep 163, a claim for damages against the operator of a jet-ski was held not to be time-barred by the Maritime Conventions Act 1911 s 8 (repealed) (now the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 190). It is submitted that this case would be decided similarly under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 190. Although s 190 is derived from the Maritime Conventions Act 1911 s 8 (repealed), there are significant differences. In particular, the Act of 1911 did not specify that the extent of fault was immaterial (see note 3). Any cases which are cited in the footnotes to this paragraph and which are based on the Maritime Conventions Act 1911 s 8 (repealed) should, therefore, be treated with some caution when interpreting provisions of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 190.

2 See the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 190(1). For this purpose, 'owners' includes any person responsible for the fault of the vessel, and charterers are to be substituted for owners where the owners are not responsible for navigation and management: see HMS Archer [1919] P 1; The Sobieski [1949] P 313, [1949] 1 All ER 701, CA. See notes 1, 3. As to the application of s 190 to the Crown and its ships see PARA 1065.

3 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 190(1)(a). 'Fault' includes fault in the management of the ship: John Franetovich & Co v Ministry of Defence, The Norwhale [1975] QB 589, [1975] 1 Lloyd's Rep 610. The extent of the fault is immaterial for the purposes of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 190: s 190(2). However, because s 190(2) applies only to claims which fall within s 190, claims which arise on board a ship and which lie against owners of that ship are not affected: The Niceto de Larringa [1966] P 80, [1965] 2 All ER 930. See note 1.

4 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 190(1)(b). See note 3. Other passenger claims will be governed by the Convention relating to the Carriage of Passengers and their Luggage by Sea (Athens, 13 December 1974; TS 40 (1987); Cm 202) (the 'Athens Convention') art 16 (as to which see PARA 8; and CARRIAGE AND CARRIERS).

5 See the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 190(3). The provisions of s 190(3) are subject to s 190(5), (6) (see the text and notes 10-15): see s 190(3).

The time limit provided by s 190 applies to counterclaims and cross-claims: The Fairplay XIV [1939] P 57, 65 Ll L Rep 108. See also The Gniezno [1968] P 418, [1967] 2 All ER 738, [1967] 1 Lloyd's Rep 441. A decree of limitation of liability does not override the two year period and rival claimants are therefore entitled to object to claims of persons who have not commenced proceedings within the statutory period, but, where limitation decrees are made, this may be a good reason for not issuing a claim form, so that in general an extension of time will be granted: see The Disperser [1920] P 228 at 235, 15 Asp MLC 112 at 114 per Hill J. See also note 11. The Merchant Shipping Act 1995 is complied with if the claim form is issued within two years, even though it is not served: see The Espanoleto [1920] P 223, 15 Asp MLC 287. The protection afforded by the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 190 is not waived by acknowledging service of a claim form: see The Llandovery Castle [1920] P 119; The Alnwick [1965] P 357, [1965] 2 All ER 569, [1965] 1 Lloyd's Rep 320, CA. See note 1.

6 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 190(3)(a). See note 7.

7 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 190(3)(b). See The Caliph [1912] P 213, 82 LJP 27 (where it was held that a claim could be brought within two years under the Maritime Conventions Act 1911 s 8 (repealed) (see now the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 190), notwithstanding that the Fatal Accidents Act 1846 (repealed) (see now the Fatal Accidents Act 1976) provided that the action had to be brought within 12 months (now three years) (see NEGLIGENCE vol 78 (2010) PARA 28)). See note 1.

As to the distinction between heads (a) and (b) in the text see Sweet v The Owners of Blyth Lifeboat 'Edward Duke of Windsor' (2002) Times, 22 February, [2002] All ER (D) 146 (Jan) (on the true construction of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 190(3)(b), it was possible for time not to begin to run in respect of a personal injury until after the date on which the relevant accident occurred, if in the particular case psychiatric symptoms had not been apparent until after the date of the accident; the wording of s 190(3)(b) provided for the two year period to begin to run from the date when the injury 'was suffered', which contrasted with s 190(3)(a), which provided that the period began when the damage or loss to a vessel or cargo 'was caused').

9 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 190(4). The provisions of s 190(4) are subject to s 190(5), (6) (see the text and notes 10-15): see s 190(4).

10 In proceedings under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 190(3) (see the text and notes 1-7) or under s 190(4) (see the text and notes 8-9): see s 190(5).

11 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 190(5).

Although no rules have been made under s 190 (see also PARAS 152, 153), it is thought that the court's discretion is not thereby affected. This was the position under the Maritime Conventions Act 1911 (repealed): see HMS Archer [1919] P 1.

Accordingly, in an application for an extension of time, there is a two stage test: the court must first consider the question of fact as to whether good reason for the extension has been demonstrated by the claimants and only if the claimant has established good reason should the court proceed to exercise its discretion, taking into account the balance of hardship, as to whether such an extension should be granted: The Al Tabith and The Alanfushi [1995] 2 Lloyd's Rep 336, CA (distinguishing The Zirje [1989] 1 Lloyd's Rep 493). Mere oversight on the part of the claimant in failing to protect the time limit was not a good reason: The Al Tabith and The Alanfushi. There is much case law under the Maritime Conventions Act 1911 (repealed) as to how the discretion is to be exercised but these all need now to be considered in light of the two stage test in The Al Tabith and The Alanfushi. The exercise of the discretion ought not to be interfered with except on substantial grounds: The Arraiz (1924) 132 LT 715, 16 Asp MLC 451, CA. The claim will be allowed to proceed if satisfactory grounds are shown for the delay (The Cambric [1912] WN 272), but the party who wishes to have time extended must show substantial reasons why the other party should be deprived of the right to limitation of action which the law gives (see The Kashmir [1923] P 85 at 89, 16 Asp MLC 81 at 83, CA). The discretion has been exercised where the claimant was induced by correspondence with the defendants' solicitors to delay whilst awaiting settlement of liability in the collision action arising from the same incident: The Vadne [1959] 2 Lloyd's Rep 480. In the exercise of its discretion, the court has allowed a statement of claim in a salvage action to be amended to include allegations of further services arising out of the same occurrence: The Katcher I [1969] P 65, [1968] 3 All ER 344, [1968] 2 Lloyd's Rep 232. As to the exercise of discretion see also The Alnwick [1965] P 357, [1965] 2 All ER 569, [1965] 1 Lloyd's Rep 320, CA; The Disperser [1920] P 228, 15 Asp MLC 112. Applications for an extension have been dismissed where the delay was due to difficulty in ascertaining the amount of the claim (The James Westoll [1923] P 94n, 16 Asp MLC 453n, CA), where agreement had been reached on liability but there was no binding agreement to waive the time limit and there was undue delay (The Sauria and The Trent [1957] 1 Lloyd's Rep 396, CA), where the claimant was ignorant that she had a claim (The Kashmir), where a deliberate decision was taken not to start proceedings (The Lu Shan [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep 386), where unsuccessful proceedings were first taken against another ship (The PLM 8 [1920] P 236, 15 Asp MLC 51), where the institution of proceedings was postponed while diplomatic representations were made (HMS Archer), where owners elected not to sue in the United Kingdom and let time run out (The Nedenes (1925) 23 Ll L Rep 57), where the matter had been allowed to go to sleep and any claim by the defendant against third parties was also statute barred (The Hesselmoor, The Sergeant [1951] 1 Lloyd's Rep 146) and where proceedings were not allowed to run while the parties were in negotiations (see The Albany and The Marie Josaine [1983] 2 Lloyd's Rep 195; and see The Mouna [1991] 2 Lloyd's Rep 221, CA). See note 1.

12 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 190(6). The test of whether there has been any reasonable opportunity to arrest a vessel is to be determined objectively, without regard to whether steps have actually been taken in an attempt to arrest in a particular jurisdiction: Santos v Owners of the Baltic Carrier [2001] 1 Lloyd's Rep 689. A period of ten days during which a ship is under requisition has been held not to constitute reasonable opportunity: The Largo Law (1920) 123 LT 560. The Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 190 has no application to cases in which the defendant vessel is permanently immune from arrest: HMS Archer [1919] P 1. See note 1.

LIMITATION OF LIABILITY OF SHIPOWNERS ETC/(5) LIMITATION OF LIABILITY OF HARBOUR, CONSERVANCY, DOCK AND CANAL AUTHORITIES/1064. General liability of harbour or conservancy authority etc.

(5) LIMITATION OF LIABILITY OF HARBOUR, CONSERVANCY, DOCK AND CANAL AUTHORITIES

1064. General liability of harbour or conservancy authority etc.

The liability of a harbour authority¹, a conservancy authority² or the owners of any dock or canal³ for any loss or damage caused to any ship⁴, or to any goods, merchandise or other things whatsoever on board any ship is limited⁵ by reference to the tonnage of the largest United Kingdom ship⁶ which, at the time of the loss or damage is, or within the preceding five years has been, within the area over which the harbour authority, conservancy authority or owners of the dock or canal discharges or discharge any functions⁷.

Such limitation of liability⁸ relates to the whole of any losses and damages which may arise on any one distinct occasion, although such losses and damages may be sustained by more than one person, and applies whether the liability arises at common law or under any general or local or private Act, and notwithstanding anything contained in such an Act⁹.

These provisions¹⁰ do not exclude the liability of a harbour authority, a conservancy authority or the owners of a dock or canal for any loss or damage resulting from any such personal act or omission¹¹ committed with the intent to cause such loss, or recklessly and with knowledge that such loss would probably result¹²; but nothing in these provisions imposes any liability for any loss or damage where no liability otherwise exists¹³.

1 As to the meaning of 'harbour authority' see PARA 68 note 4.

2 As to the meaning of 'conservancy authority' see PARA 71 note 2.

3 For these purposes, 'owners of any dock or canal' includes any authority or person having the control and management of any dock or canal, as the case may be; and 'dock' includes wet docks and basins, tidal docks and basins, locks, cuts, entrances, dry docks, graving docks, gridirons, slips, quays, wharves, piers, stages, landing places and jetties: Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 191(9).

4 As to the meaning of 'ship' see PARA 229.

5 In accordance with the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 191(5): see s 191(2). Accordingly, the limit of liability must be ascertained by applying to the ship by reference to which the liability is to be determined the method of calculation specified in the Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims (London, 1 to 19 November 1976; TS 13 (1990); Cm 955) art 6(1)(b), read with the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 185(2), Sch 7 Pt II para 5(1), (2) (see PARA 1048): s 191(5).

6 As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom ship' see PARA 230.

7 See the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 191(1), (2). For these purposes, a ship is not to be treated as having been within the area over which a harbour authority or conservancy authority discharges any functions by reason only that it has been built or fitted out within the area, or that it has taken shelter within or passed through the area on a voyage between two places both situated outside that area, or that it has loaded or unloaded mails or passengers within the area: s 191(7).

The Convention on Limitation of Liability for Maritime Claims art 11 (see PARA 1053) and art 12 (see PARA 1054) and the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 7 Pt II para 8 (see PARA 1053) and Sch 7 Pt II para 9 (see PARA 1054) apply for the purposes of s 191: s 191(6).

(6) APPLICATION OF LIABILITY PROVISIONS TO THE CROWN AND ITS SHIPS

1065. General application of liability provisions to Crown and its ships.

The provisions relating to the limitation of liability for maritime claims¹, exclusion of liability², apportionment of liability for damage or loss³, joint and several liability for loss of life or personal injuries⁴, the right of contribution for loss of life or personal injuries⁵ and the time limit for proceedings against the owners or the ship⁶ apply in the case of Her Majesty's ships⁷ as they apply in relation to other ships; and the provisions relating to the limitation of liability of a harbour or conservancy authority or the owners of a dock or canal⁸ apply to the Crown in its capacity as such an authority or owner⁹.

6 Ie the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 190 (see PARA 1063), except s 190(6) (which allows for extension of time to arrest a defendant ship in certain circumstances): see s 192(1).

7 For these purposes, 'Her Majesty's ships' means: (1) ships of which the beneficial interest is vested in Her Majesty; (2) ships which are registered as government ships; (3) ships which are for the time being demised or sub-demised to or in the exclusive possession of the Crown; but it does not include any ship in which Her Majesty is interested otherwise than in right of Her government in the United Kingdom unless that ship is for the time being demised or sub-demised to Her Majesty in right of Her government in the United Kingdom or in the exclusive possession of Her Majesty in that right: Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 192(2). LIMITATION OF LIABILITY OF SHIPOWNERS ETC/(7) REQUIREMENT FOR INSURANCE OR SECURITY AGAINST LIABILITIES/1066. Regulations requiring insurance or security.

(7) REQUIREMENT FOR INSURANCE OR SECURITY AGAINST LIABILITIES

1066. Regulations requiring insurance or security.

The Secretary of State¹ may make regulations² requiring that, in such cases as may be prescribed by the regulations, while a ship³ is in United Kingdom waters⁴, there must be in force in respect of the ship⁵:

- 1204 (1) a contract of insurance insuring such person or persons as may be specified by the regulations against such liabilities as may be so specified and satisfying such other requirements as may be so specified⁶; or
- 1205 (2) such other security relating to those liabilities as satisfies requirements specified by or under the regulations⁷.

Such regulations must not apply in relation to:

- 1206 (a) a qualifying foreign ship⁸ while it is exercising the right of innocent passage⁹ or the right of transit passage¹⁰ through straits used for international navigation¹¹;
- 1207 (b) any warship¹²; or
- 1208 (c) any ship for the time being used by the government of any state for other than commercial purposes¹³.

Such regulations may not require insurance or security to be maintained in respect of a ship in relation to any liability in any case where an obligation to maintain insurance or security in respect of that ship in relation to that liability is imposed under the provisions relating to compulsory insurance against liability for oil pollution¹⁴ or by an Order in Council under the provisions¹⁵ relating to the carriage of hazardous and noxious substances¹⁶.

Such regulations may require that, where a person is obliged to have in force in respect of a ship a contract of insurance or other security, such documentary evidence as may be specified by or under the regulations of the existence of the contract of insurance or other security must be carried in the ship and produced on demand, by such persons as may be specified in the regulations, to such persons as may be so specified¹⁷.

Such regulations may provide:

- 1209 (i) that in such cases as are prescribed a ship which contravenes the regulations is liable to be detained and that the provisions relating to enforcing the detention of a ship¹⁸ are to have effect, with such modifications, if any, as are prescribed by the regulations, in relation to the ship¹⁹;
- 1210 (ii) that a contravention of the regulations is an offence punishable, on conviction on indictment, by a fine and, on summary conviction, by a fine of an amount not exceeding £50,000 or such less amount as is prescribed by the regulations²⁰; and

- 1211 (iii) that any such contravention is an offence punishable only on summary conviction by a fine of an amount not exceeding £50,000, or such less amount as is prescribed by the regulations²¹.

Such regulations may:

- 1212 (A) make different provision for different cases²²;
 1213 (B) make provision in terms of any document which the Secretary of State or any person considers relevant from time to time²³; and 1214 (C) include such incidental, supplemental and transitional provision as appears to the Secretary of State to be expedient for the purposes of the regulations²⁴.

LIMITATION OF LIABILITY OF SHIPOWNERS ETC/(7) REQUIREMENT FOR INSURANCE OR SECURITY AGAINST LIABILITIES/1067. Compulsory insurance etc for ships receiving trans-shipped fish.

1067. Compulsory insurance etc for ships receiving trans-shipped fish.

The owner, charterer and master of a ship, in respect of which a transshipment licence¹ is in force, must ensure that there is in force in respect of the ship, while it is in United Kingdom waters, a contract of insurance which is sufficient for these purposes² and which insures the owner against the following liabilities³, namely:

- 1215 (1) any liability⁴ for pollution caused by oil (other than oil from tankers or bunker oil etc)⁵;
- 1216 (2) any liability for the costs of any operation to remove or render harmless the ship, or any article which had been on the ship, taken under the powers conferred on harbour and conservancy authorities⁶ in relation to wrecks⁷, or under the powers conferred on general lighthouse authorities⁸ in relation to wrecks⁹, or taken under corresponding powers under any statutory provision of local application¹⁰;
- 1217 (3) any liability for payment of salvage awards¹¹ and special compensation¹² under the International Convention on Salvage 1989¹³; and
- 1218 (4) any liability for the cost of providing relief to, and of repatriating, seamen left behind or shipwrecked¹⁴.

However, in place of a contract of insurance, there may be in force such other form of security which is sufficient for these purposes¹⁵ and which will enable the owner to meet the liabilities mentioned in heads (1) to (4) above¹⁶.

Any contravention of the requirements to have compulsory insurance in place (or to have such other form of security which meets those same requirements)¹⁷ is an offence¹⁸.

These requirements¹⁹ are without prejudice to any entitlement to limit liability for maritime claims²⁰ and contracts of insurance and security may be limited accordingly²¹.

Where a person is so required²² to ensure that there is in force a contract of insurance or other security, documentary evidence of compliance with this requirement must be carried in the ship²³; and the master and any other officer on the ship must produce on demand such documentary evidence to any relevant inspector²⁴. Any contravention of the requirements to carry or to produce on demand such documents²⁵ is an offence²⁶.

1 For these purposes, 'transshipment licence' means a licence under the Sea Fish (Conservation) Act 1967 s 4A (prohibition of transshipment of fish unless authorised by a licence) (see AGRICULTURE AND FISHERIES vol 1(2) (2007 Reissue) PARA 986): Merchant Shipping (Compulsory Insurance: Ships Receiving Trans-shipped Fish) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/209, reg 2. 2 Ie a contract of insurance complying with the Merchant Shipping (Compulsory Insurance: Ships Receiving Trans-shipped Fish) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/209, reg 6: see reg 4(1). Accordingly, a contract of insurance, or other security (see the text and notes 15-16), is sufficient for the purpose of the Merchant Shipping (Compulsory Insurance: Ships Receiving Trans-shipped Fish) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/209, only if it satisfies all requirements (whether as to the person issuing it, the amount of compensation available, or for any other reason) as is specified in Merchant Shipping Notice No MSN 1711: see the Merchant Shipping (Compulsory Insurance: Ships Receiving Trans-shipped Fish) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/209, reg 6. For these purposes, 'Merchant Shipping Notice MSN No 1711' means the Notice described as such, issued by the Secretary of State, and includes a reference to any document amending or replacing it which is considered by the Secretary of State to be relevant from time to time: Merchant Shipping (Compulsory Insurance: Ships Receiving Trans-shipped Fish) Regulations 1998, SI 1998/209, reg 2. 13. LIGHTHOUSE AUTHORITIES

(1) THE DIFFERENT LIGHTHOUSE AUTHORITIES

1068. Meanings of 'general lighthouse authorities' and 'local lighthouse authorities'.

For the purposes of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 provisions which relate to lighthouses¹:

- 1219 (1) the Trinity House², as respects England and Wales³ and the adjacent seas and islands⁴;
- 1220 (2) the Commissioners of Northern Lighthouses⁵, as respects Scotland and the adjacent seas and islands⁶; and
- 1221 (3) the Commissioners of Irish Lights⁷, as respects Northern Ireland and the adjacent seas and islands⁸, are the 'general lighthouse authority'⁹.

For the purposes of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 provisions which relate to lighthouses¹⁰:

- 1222 (a) each statutory harbour authority¹¹, as respects its area¹²; and
- 1223 (b) any other existing local lighthouse authority, as respects its area¹³, are the 'local lighthouse authority'¹⁴.

1 For the purposes of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Pt VIII (ss 193-223) (see also PARA 1069 et seq): see s 193(1). For these purposes, 'lighthouse' includes any floating and other light exhibited for the guidance of ships, and also any sirens and any other description of fog signals, and also any addition to a lighthouse of any improved light, or any siren, or any description of fog signal (s 223(1)); and any reference to a lighthouse includes its appurtenances (s 223(2)). As to the meaning of 'ship' see PARA 229.

2 As to the meaning of 'Trinity House' see PARA 1069. Subject to the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 314(3), Sch 14 para 9(1), the Trinity House is also the general lighthouse authority as respects Gibraltar and, subject to Sch 14 para 9(2), the Channel Islands, and the seas adjacent thereto: s 193(5). Section 193(5) ceases to have effect on such day or days as the Secretary of State by order appoints: Sch 14 para 9(1). Accordingly, until that day, the powers of the Trinity House under Pt VIII (see also PARA 1069 et seq) with respect to lighthouses, buoys and beacons in the islands of Guernsey or Jersey, other than their powers under s 204 (see PARA 1082) and s 220 (see PARA 1247), may not be exercised without the consent of Her Majesty in Council (Sch 14 para 9(2)); and any such Order in Council must be laid before Parliament (Sch 14 para 9(4)). Until that day, no dues for any lighthouse, buoy or beacon erected or placed in or near the islands of Guernsey, Jersey, Sark or Alderney may be levied in the islands of Guernsey or Jersey without the consent of the States of those Islands respectively: Sch 14 para 9(3). As to the Secretary of State see PARA 38; and as to the making of orders by the Secretary of State under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 generally see PARA 41.

For these purposes, 'buoys and beacons' includes all other marks and signs of the sea (s 223(1)); and any reference to a buoy or beacon includes its appurtenances (s 223(2)). The Secretary of State may by order provide that references or a particular reference to a buoy or beacon in Pt VIII are or is to be construed as including, in such circumstances as are specified in the order, equipment of a kind so specified which is intended as an aid in the navigation of ships: s 223(3). However, no such order may be made unless a draft of the order has been laid before and approved by resolutions of each House of Parliament: s 223(4). In exercise of the powers so conferred by s 223(3), the Secretary of State has made the General Lighthouse Authorities (Beacons: Maritime Differential Correction Systems) Order 1997, SI 1997/3016, and the General Lighthouse

Authorities (Beacons: Automatic Identification System) Order 2006, SI 2006/1977; and, by virtue of the Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b), the General Lighthouse Authorities (Beacons: Hyperbolic Systems) Order 1986, SI 1986/2285, and the General Lighthouse Authorities (Beacons: Hyperbolic Systems) Order 1991, SI 1991/347, have effect as if so made. Accordingly, all references to a beacon in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Pt VIII are to be construed as including:

- 2 (1) equipment provided for broadcasts in the frequency range 70kHz-130kHz from the North British, North Scottish, Hebridean, Northumbrian, English and South West British transmitter chains of the Racal-Decca Marine Navigation Limited's hyperbolic electronic position-fixing system, known as the Decca Navigator System, together with the support facilities provided by that company for those chains, in the circumstances that, and for so long as, those chains are operated in accordance with any contract in that behalf between that company and the general lighthouse authorities (General Lighthouse Authorities (Beacons: Hyperbolic Systems) Order 1986, SI 1986/2285, art 2; Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b));
- 3 (2) in the circumstances that the United Kingdom is party to an international agreement concerning the establishment and operation of the Loran C system, equipment and support facilities provided for broadcasts in the frequency range 90kHz-100kHz from any transmitters situate in the United Kingdom which form part of a position-fixing system known as the Loran C system (General Lighthouse Authorities (Beacons: Hyperbolic Systems) Order 1991, SI 1991/347, art 2(1), (2); Interpretation Act 1978 s 17(2)(b));
- 4 (3) equipment provided for broadcasts in the medium frequency range 283.5kHz-315kHz from any transmitter situated in the United Kingdom where such equipment forms part of a maritime differential position-fixing, integrity monitoring and data carrying system based on real-time corrections to signals emanating from a global satellite system (General Lighthouse Authorities (Beacons: Maritime Differential Correction Systems) Order 1997, SI 1997/3016, art 2);
- 5 (4) equipment provided for broadcasts in the frequency range 156.025MHz-162.025MHz where such equipment forms part of a system for providing information to ships about the type, position and functioning of aids to the navigation of ships, or to assist the general lighthouse authorities in the efficient provision of aids to the navigation of ships (General Lighthouse Authorities (Beacons: Automatic Identification System) Order 2006, SI 2006/1977, art 2).

5 As to the Commissioners of Northern Lighthouses see PARA 1070. Subject to the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 Sch 14 para 9(1) (as to which see note 2), the Commissioners of Northern Lighthouses are also the general lighthouse authority as respects the Isle of Man, and the seas adjacent thereto: see s 193(5) (prospectively repealed: see note 2).

12 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 193(2)(a) (amended by the Merchant Shipping and Maritime Security Act 1997 Sch 6 para 6(a)). For these purposes, 'area' means:

- 6 (1) in relation to a general lighthouse authority specified in s 193(1)(a), (b) or (c) (see heads (1) to (3) in the text), the area specified therein as the area of that authority (s 193(4)(a));
- 7 (2) in relation to a statutory harbour authority, the area or areas inside the limits within which the authority's statutory powers and duties as a harbour authority are exercisable (s 193(4)(b) (amended by the Merchant Shipping and Maritime Security Act 1997 ss 29(1), 31(3), Sch 6 para 6(b))); and

- 8 (3) in relation to any other existing local lighthouse authority, the existing area over which its authority extends in relation to lighthouses, buoys and beacons (Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 193(4)(c)); and, for the purposes of s 193(2)(b) (see head (b) in the text) and s 193(4)(c) (see head (3) above), 'existing' means existing for the purposes of the Merchant Shipping Act 1894 immediately before the repeal of that Act by the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 (ss 193(4), 223(1)).

A person appointed by the Secretary of State under head (4) above, or a person appointed by the Commissioners under head (b) above, holds office for three years, but is eligible for reappointment¹⁰.

and any enactment relating to the functions in question or to the authorities by which or the areas in which those functions are to be discharged is to be construed accordingly⁶.

Any expenses incurred by any of the general lighthouse authorities in pursuance of the above provisions must be apportioned between that authority and the other authority concerned in such manner as may be agreed between them or, in default of agreement, determined by the Secretary of State⁷.

1076. General powers of general lighthouse authority.

A general lighthouse authority¹ has power, within its area²:

- 1233 (1) to erect or place any lighthouse³, with all requisite works, roads and appurtenances⁴;
- 1234 (2) to add to, alter, or remove any lighthouse⁵;
- 1235 (3) to erect or place any buoy or beacon⁶, or alter or remove any buoy or beacon⁷;
- 1236 (4) to vary the character of any lighthouse or the mode of exhibiting lights therein⁸.

However, a general lighthouse authority must not, in the area of a statutory harbour authority⁹:

- 1237 (a) erect or place any lighthouse, works, roads or appurtenances under head (1) above¹⁰; or
- 1238 (b) erect or place any buoy or beacon under head (3) above¹¹, except in pursuance of a direction given by the Secretary of State¹². The Secretary of State may give such a direction to a general lighthouse authority if he considers it appropriate to do so in the interests of general navigation¹³.

Where any improved light or beacon, or any siren or any description of fog signal has been added to an existing lighthouse, the light or beacon, siren or fog signal may be treated¹⁴ as if it were a separate lighthouse¹⁵.

A general lighthouse authority may acquire any land which may be necessary for the exercise of its statutory powers under heads (1) to (4) above, for the maintenance of its works or for the residence of the light keepers¹⁶; and a general lighthouse authority may sell or lease any land belonging to it¹⁷.

Where it appears to a general lighthouse authority that any of its assets which is held in connection with the discharge of its general statutory functions¹⁸ has spare capacity¹⁹, it may, with the consent of the Secretary of State²⁰, enter into an agreement for the purpose of exploiting that spare capacity²¹. A general lighthouse authority must send to the Secretary of State a copy of every agreement so entered into²².

1077. Inspection of local lighthouses.

It is the duty of the general lighthouse authority¹ for any area², or of any person authorised by that authority for the purpose, to³:

- 1239 (1) inspect all lighthouses⁴, buoys and beacons⁵ situated within its area but belonging to or under the management of any local lighthouse authority⁶; and
- 1240 (2) make such inquiries about them and their management as it thinks fit⁷.

All officers and others having the care, or concerned in the management, of any such local lighthouses, buoys or beacons must furnish all such information and explanations concerning them as the general lighthouse authority requires⁸.

All local lighthouse authorities and their officers must give to the general lighthouse authority all such returns, explanations or information concerning the lighthouses, buoys and beacons under their management and the management of them as the general lighthouse authority may require⁹.

The general lighthouse authority must:

- 1241 (a) communicate to each local lighthouse authority the results of its inspection of its lighthouses, buoys and beacons¹⁰; and

A general lighthouse authority¹ may, within its area², with the consent of the Secretary of State³, direct a local lighthouse authority⁴:

- 1243 (1) to lay down buoys⁵;
- 1244 (2) to remove or discontinue any lighthouse⁶, buoy or beacon⁷; or
- 1245 (3) to make any variation in the character of any lighthouse, buoy or beacon or in the mode of exhibiting lights in any lighthouse, buoy or beacon⁸;

but the authority must not give a direction without first giving due notice of its intention to do so⁹. Such a direction must be given in writing; and it is the duty of a local lighthouse authority to which such a direction is given to comply with it¹⁰.

A local lighthouse authority must not, without the consent of the general lighthouse authority:

(i) General Light Dues

1083. Light dues leviable by general lighthouse authorities.

A general lighthouse authority¹ may demand, take and recover² dues which it may levy in respect of lighthouses³, buoys or beacons⁴ under its management⁵ ('general light dues')⁶, and it may for that purpose appoint persons to collect them⁷. General light dues may be levied only by reference to the voyages made by ships⁸ or by way of periodical payments⁹; and they are payable in respect of all ships whatever, except ships belonging to Her Majesty and ships exempted¹⁰ from payment¹¹.

The Secretary of State¹² may make regulations¹³ with respect to the amounts and the levying of general light dues, including the cases in which the dues are not to be levied, and the regulations may make different provision for different circumstances¹⁴. A copy of the regulations so in force in respect of general light dues must be kept at the principal office of the general lighthouse authority and the office of the appointed collector at every port¹⁵ where such dues are collected¹⁶; and the regulations must be open for inspection there during reasonable hours by any person without charge¹⁷.

Every person appointed by a general lighthouse authority to collect general light dues must collect all such dues payable at the port at which he is so appointed or, as the case may be, such of those dues as he is appointed to collect, whether they are collected on account of that authority or on account of one of the other general lighthouse authorities¹⁸.

Any person appointed by a general lighthouse authority to collect general light dues must pay over to that authority, or as that authority directs, the whole of the general light dues received by him¹⁹.

A general lighthouse authority receiving dues, whether itself or from a collector, must keep accounts of the dues and must cause the dues to be remitted to the Secretary of State, or as he directs, and in such manner as he directs²⁰.

1084. Information to determine light dues.

A general lighthouse authority¹ may, for the purpose of determining whether any and, if so, what general light dues² are payable in respect of any ship³, require any relevant authority⁴ or any person who is liable to pay general light dues in respect of the ship, to furnish to the general lighthouse authority such information in that authority's or person's possession or control relating to the arrival or departure of the ship at or from any port⁵ within its area⁶ as it may reasonably require for that purpose⁷.

A general lighthouse authority may require any relevant authority to furnish to it such information in the relevant authority's possession or control relating to the movements within the relevant authority's area of ships or ships of any class or description for the purpose of determining whether any and, if so, what general light dues are payable in respect of the ships⁸.

The powers so conferred on a general lighthouse authority⁹ are also available to the person appointed by it to collect dues at a port¹⁰.

It is the duty of a relevant authority or person of whom a requirement for information is so made¹¹ to furnish information as soon as is reasonably practicable¹².

The following persons are liable to pay general light dues¹ in respect of any ship² in respect of which such dues are payable³, namely:

- 1249 (1) the owner or master⁴; or
- 1250 (2) such consignees or agents of the owner or master as have paid, or made themselves liable to pay, any other charge on account of the ship in the port⁵ of her arrival or discharge⁶.

General light dues so payable in respect of any ship may, in England and Wales⁷, be recovered summarily as a civil debt⁸.

Any consignee or agent, not being the owner or master of the ship, who is so made liable⁹ for the payment of general light dues in respect of any ship may, out of any money received by him on account of the ship or belonging to its owner, retain the amount of all general light dues paid by him, together with any reasonable expenses he may have incurred by reason of the payment of the dues or his liability to pay them¹⁰.

1086. Distress on ship for general light dues.

If the owner or master¹ of any ship² fails, on demand of the appointed collector, to pay the general light dues³ in respect of the ship, the collector may enter the ship and distrain the goods or any equipment or other thing belonging to, or on board, the ship and detain that distress until those dues are paid⁴.

If payment of the dues so demanded is not made within the period of five days following the distress, the collector may, at any time during the continuance of the non-payment, cause the distress to be independently appraised and thereupon sold by public auction⁵.

The collector must apply the proceeds of the sale in payment of: (1) the general light dues due⁶; and (2) all reasonable expenses incurred by him⁷; and he must pay the surplus, if any, on demand to the owner or master of the ship⁸.

The remedy so conferred⁹ is in addition to any other remedy available to the collector or the general lighthouse authority¹⁰ by which he was appointed¹¹.

(ii) Local Light Dues

1088. Light dues leviable by local lighthouse authorities.

A local lighthouse authority¹, which is not a statutory harbour authority², may demand, take and recover in respect of every ship³ which enters or leaves the port⁴, harbour⁵ or estuary in which is situated any lighthouse⁶, buoy or beacon⁷ over which it has authority, and which passes the lighthouse, buoy or beacon and derives benefit from it, such charges as the authority thinks fit⁸.

The same persons are liable to pay charges leviable by a local lighthouse authority (which is not a statutory harbour authority) in respect of lighthouses, buoys or beacons over which it has authority ('local light dues')⁹ as are liable¹⁰ to pay general light dues¹¹; and local light dues may be recovered in the same manner as general light dues may¹² be recovered¹³.

A list showing the local light dues leviable by a local lighthouse authority must be kept at the authority's office and must be open there during reasonable hours for inspection by any person without charge¹⁴; and copies of the list must be kept for sale there at such reasonable price, if any, as the authority determines¹⁵. A copy of the list so kept by a local lighthouse authority must be supplied by it to the Secretary of State without charge¹⁶.

No local light due may be levied by a local lighthouse authority if, at the time at which it is leviable, the authority is in default in compliance with its obligation¹⁷ to keep a list of dues or the light due is not shown in the list kept there at that time¹⁸.

All local light dues must be applied by the authority by which they are levied for the purpose of the construction, placing, maintenance and improvement of the lighthouses, buoys or beacons in respect of which the dues are levied, and for no other purpose¹⁹.

The local lighthouse authority to which any local light dues are paid must keep a separate account of the receipt and expenditure of those dues²⁰.

The General Lighthouse Fund is administered by the Secretary of State¹. The following must be paid out of that Fund:

- 1251 (1) any expenses incurred by general lighthouse authorities² in connection with the discharge of their functions under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 provisions which relate to lighthouses³ and, in the case of the Commissioners of Irish Lights⁴ as respects their functions in the Republic of Ireland, under the corresponding Part of the Merchant Shipping Act 1894⁵, but subject to the statutory provisions⁶ relating to estimates and accounts of expenses⁷;
- 1252 (2) any expenses, whether of a capital nature or not, incurred by the Secretary of State in pursuance of any international agreement relating to the provision of an electronic position-fixing system intended as an aid to the navigation of ships or incurred by him preliminary to his entering into such an agreement⁸;

- 1255 (5) any other sums made payable out of the Fund by any other provision of Part VIII¹¹ or Part IX¹² of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995¹³.

The following must be paid into that Fund:

- 1256 (a) all general light dues¹⁴ and other sums received by or accruing to any of the general lighthouse authorities by virtue of, or in connection with the discharge of their functions under, Part VIII of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995¹⁵ and, in the case of the Commissioners of Irish Lights as respects their functions in the Republic of Ireland, under the corresponding Part of the Merchant Shipping Act 1894¹⁶;

The Secretary of State¹ may determine²:

- 1260 (2) the annual or other sums to be paid out of the General Lighthouse Fund⁶ in respect of those establishments or to members of the general lighthouse authority for England and Wales⁷.

If it appears that any part of the establishments of the general lighthouse authorities is maintained for other purposes as well as for the purposes of their duties as general lighthouse authorities, the Secretary of State may determine the portion of the expenses of those establishments to be paid out of the General Lighthouse Fund⁸.

For the purpose of approval by the Secretary of State, each of the general lighthouse authorities must submit to him an estimate of all expenses to be incurred by them in respect of lighthouses, buoys and beacons, other than expenses allowed⁷ on account of their establishments⁸; but, in a case where it is necessary for a general lighthouse authority, in providing for any sudden emergency, to incur any such expense without waiting for the approval of the Secretary of State, the authority must as soon as possible submit to him a full account of the expense incurred⁹.

The Secretary of State¹ with the consent of the Treasury² may guarantee, in such manner and on such conditions as he thinks fit, the repayment of the principal of, the payment of interest on, and the discharge of any other financial obligation in connection with, any sums borrowed³ by a general lighthouse authority⁴.

Immediately after such a guarantee is given, the Secretary of State must lay a statement of the guarantee before each House of Parliament; and, where any sum is issued for fulfilling a guarantee so given, the Secretary of State must, as soon as possible after the end of each financial year beginning with that in which the sum is issued and ending with that in which all liability in respect of the principal of the sum and in respect of interest thereon is finally discharged, lay before each House of Parliament a statement relating to that sum⁵.

Any sums required by the Secretary of State for fulfilling any such guarantee must be paid out of money provided by Parliament⁶.

If any sums are issued in fulfilment of any guarantee so given, there must be made to the Secretary of State out of the General Lighthouse Fund⁷, at such times and in such manner as the Secretary of State may determine with the consent of the Treasury, payments of such amounts as the Secretary of State may so determine in or towards repayment of the sums so issued, and payments of interest on what is outstanding for the time being in respect of sums so issued at such rate as the Secretary of State may so determine⁸. 1098. Powers of lighthouse authorities in relation to wrecks.

Where:

- 1268 (1) any vessel¹ is sunk, stranded or abandoned in any fairway or on the seashore or on or near any rock, shoal or bank in the United Kingdom² or any of the adjacent seas or islands³; and
- 1269 (2) there is no harbour authority⁴ or conservancy authority⁵ having power to raise, remove or destroy the vessel⁶,

the general lighthouse authority⁷ for the place in or near which the vessel is situated has, if in the authority's opinion the vessel is, or is likely to become, an obstruction or danger to navigation or to lifeboats engaged in lifeboat service, the same powers in relation thereto as those conferred⁸ on harbour and conservancy authorities in relation to wrecks⁹.

Where a general lighthouse authority has incurred expenses in its exercise of these powers¹⁰ in relation to any vessel, then¹¹:

- 1270 (a) if the proceeds of any sale made¹² in connection with the exercise of those powers in relation to the vessel are insufficient to reimburse the authority for the full amount of those expenses, the authority may recover the amount of the deficiency from the relevant person¹³; or
- 1271 (b) if there is no such sale, the authority may recover the full amount of those expenses from the relevant person¹⁴.

Any expenses so incurred which are not recovered by the authority either out of the proceeds of any such sale or in accordance with head (a) or head (b) above must be paid out of the General Lighthouse Fund¹⁵.

If any question arises between a harbour authority or conservancy authority and a general lighthouse authority as to their respective powers¹⁶ in relation to any place in or near an approach to a harbour or tidal water¹⁷, that question must, on the application of either authority, be referred to the Secretary of State¹⁸ for his decision¹⁹; and any such decision of the Secretary of State is final²⁰.

14. OFFENCES AND LEGAL PROCEEDINGS

(1) PROSECUTION OF OFFENCES GENERALLY

(i) In general

1099. Meanings of the 'prescribed sum', the 'standard scale' and the 'statutory maximum'.

The 'prescribed sum' means £5,000 or such sum as is for the time being substituted by an order¹ in force under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980².

In any Act, unless the contrary intention appears, with reference to a fine or penalty, on summary conviction, for an offence, 'statutory maximum' means the prescribed sum³ within the meaning of the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980⁴.

In any Act, unless the contrary intention appears, with reference to a fine or penalty for an offence triable only summarily, the 'standard scale' has the meaning given⁵ by the Criminal Justice Act 1982⁶, which provides that there is to be a standard scale of fines for summary offences, known as the 'standard scale'⁷. Where any enactment⁸ provides that a person convicted of a summary offence is to be liable on conviction to a fine or a maximum fine by reference to a specified level on the standard scale, it is to be construed as referring to the standard scale for which the Criminal Justice Act 1982⁹ provides, as that standard scale has effect from time to time¹⁰.

1 Ie an order under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 143(1): see s 32(9) (amended by the Criminal Justice Act 1991 s 17(2)(c)). If it appears to the Secretary of State that there has been a change in the value of money since the relevant date, he may by order substitute for the sum for the time being specified in the definition of the 'prescribed sum' in the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 32(9) such other sum as appears to him justified by the change: see s 143(1), (2)(b) (s 143(1) substituted by the Criminal Justice Act 1982 s 48(1)).

The present maximum is £5,000: see the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 32(9); and notes 1-2.

4 See the Interpretation Act 1978 Sch 1 (definition added by the Criminal Justice Act 1988 s 170(1), Sch 15 para 58(b)). See further SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 140.

7 See the Criminal Justice Act 1982 s 37(1). The standard scale is: level 1: £200; level 2: £500; level 3: £1,000; level 4: £2,500; level 5: £5,000: see s 37(2) (substituted by the Criminal Justice Act 1991 ss 17(1), 101(1), Sch 12 para 6).

8 Ie whether contained in an Act passed before or after the Criminal Justice Act 1982: see s 37(3).

9 le the Criminal Justice Act 1982 s 37: see s 37(3).

10 le by virtue of the Criminal Justice Act 1982 s 37 or of an order under the Magistrates' Courts Act 1980 s 143 (see SENTENCING AND DISPOSITION OF OFFENDERS vol 92 (2010) PARA 141): see the Criminal Justice Act 1982 s 37(3). 1100. Time limit for summary offences.

No person may be convicted of an offence under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 in summary proceedings unless¹:

- 1272 (1) the proceedings were commenced within six months beginning with the date on which the offence was committed²; or
- 1273 (2) in a case where the accused happens during that period to be out of the United Kingdom³, the proceedings were commenced within two months after he first happens to arrive within the United Kingdom and before the expiration of three years beginning with the date on which the offence was committed⁴.

However, nothing in this provision⁵ applies in relation to any indictable offence⁶; nor does that provision⁷ prevent a conviction for an offence in summary proceedings begun before the expiration of three years beginning with the date on which the offence was committed⁸, and before:

- 1274 (a) the expiration of the period of six months beginning with the day when evidence which the Secretary of State⁹ considers is sufficient to justify a prosecution for the offence came to his knowledge¹⁰; or
- 1275 (b) the expiration of two months beginning with the day when the accused was first present in the United Kingdom after the expiration of the period mentioned in head (a) above if throughout that period the accused was absent from the United Kingdom¹¹.

For these purposes: (i) a certificate of the Secretary of State stating that evidence came to his knowledge on a particular day is conclusive evidence of that fact¹²; and (ii) a document purporting to be a certificate of the Secretary of State and to be signed on his behalf is presumed to be such a certificate unless the contrary is proved¹³.

No order for the payment of money may be made under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 in proceedings before a magistrates' court unless¹:

1276 (1) the proceedings were commenced within six months beginning with the date on which the matter of complaint arose²; or

(ii) Jurisdiction

1103. Jurisdiction in relation to offences.

For the purpose of conferring jurisdiction, any offence under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 is deemed to have been committed in any place in the United Kingdom¹ where the offender may for the time being be².

For the same purpose, any matter of complaint under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 is deemed to have arisen in any place in the United Kingdom where the person complained against may for the time being be³.

1106 Offences committed by British seamen

NOTE 1--Supreme Court Act 1981 now cited as Senior Courts Act 1981: Constitutional Reform Act 2005 Sch 11 para 1 (in force 1 October 2009: SI 2009/1604).

Halsbury's Laws of England/SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW (VOLUME 93 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-590; VOLUME 94 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 591-1254)/14. OFFENCES AND LEGAL PROCEEDINGS/(1) PROSECUTION OF OFFENCES GENERALLY/(iii) Return of Offenders/1107. Powers exercisable in relation to offenders outside the United Kingdom.

(iii) Return of Offenders

1107. Powers exercisable in relation to offenders outside the United Kingdom.

The powers conferred on a British consular officer¹:

- 1280 (1) to inquire into the case upon oath²; and
- 1281 (2) if the case so requires, to take any steps in his power for the purpose of placing the offender under the necessary restraint and sending him by United Kingdom ship³ as soon as practicable in safe custody to the United Kingdom for proceedings to be taken against him⁴, are exercisable in the event of any complaint being made to such an officer⁵:

- 1282 (a) that any offence against property or persons has been committed at any place, ashore or afloat, outside the United Kingdom by any master⁶ or seaman⁷ who at the time when the offence was committed, or within three months before that time, was employed in a United Kingdom ship⁸; or
- 1283 (b) that any offence on the high seas has been committed by any master or seaman belonging to any United Kingdom ship⁹.

The consular officer may order the master of any United Kingdom ship bound for the United Kingdom to receive and carry¹⁰ the offender and the witnesses to the United Kingdom; and the officer must indorse upon the agreement of the ship such particulars with respect to them as the Secretary of State requires¹¹. A consular officer must not, however, exercise the power so conferred¹² unless no more convenient means of transport is available or it is available only at disproportionate expense¹³; nor may any master of a ship be so required¹⁴ to receive more than one offender for every 100 tons of his ship's registered tonnage, or more than one witness for every 50 tons of his ship's registered tonnage¹⁵.

The master of any ship to whose charge an offender has been so committed¹⁶ must, on his ship's arrival in the United Kingdom, give the offender into the custody of some police officer or constable¹⁷.

If any master of a ship, when so required¹⁸ to receive and carry any offender or witness in his ship either fails to do so or, in the case of an offender, fails to deliver him as required¹⁹, he is liable, on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale²⁰.

The expense of imprisoning any such offender and of carrying him and witnesses to the United Kingdom otherwise than in the ship to which they respectively belong must be paid out of money provided by Parliament²¹.

(iv) Special Evidential Provisions

1108. Depositions of persons abroad admissible.

If the evidence of any person is required in the course of any legal proceeding before a judge or magistrate in relation to the subject matter of the proceeding and it is proved that that person cannot be found in the United Kingdom¹, any deposition that he may have previously made at a place outside the United Kingdom in relation to the same subject matter is admissible in evidence in those proceedings². However, for a deposition to be so admissible in any proceedings, the deposition:

- 1284 (1) must have been taken on oath³;
- 1285 (2) must have been taken before a justice or magistrate in any colony⁴ or a British consular officer⁵ in any other place⁶;
- 1286 (3) must be authenticated by the signature of the justice, magistrate or officer taking it⁷; and
- 1287 (4) must, if the proceedings are criminal proceedings, have been taken in the presence of the accused⁸; and, in a case falling within head (4) above, the deposition must be certified by the justice, magistrate or officer taking it to have been taken in the presence of the accused⁹.

No proof need be given of the signature or official character of the person appearing to have signed any such deposition¹⁰; and, in any criminal proceedings, a certificate stating that the deposition was taken in the presence of the accused is evidence of that fact, unless the contrary is proved¹¹.

These provisions¹² also apply to proceedings before any person authorised by law or consent of the parties to receive evidence¹³; but nothing in these provisions¹⁴ affects the admissibility in evidence of depositions under any other enactment or the practice of any court¹⁵.

- 1294 (2) subject to all just exceptions, evidence of the matters stated in the document³.

A copy of, or extract from, any document so made admissible in evidence is also admissible in evidence and evidence of the matters stated in the document⁴. However, a copy of, or extract from, a document is not so admissible in evidence unless:

- 1338 (1) does any act which causes or is likely to cause: (a) the loss or destruction of or serious damage to his ship or its machinery, navigational equipment or safety equipment³; or (b) the loss or destruction of or serious damage to any other ship or any structure⁴; or (c) the death of or serious injury to any person⁵; or
- 1339 (2) omits to do anything required: (a) to preserve his ship or its machinery, navigational equipment or safety equipment from being lost, destroyed or seriously damaged⁶; or (b) to preserve any person on board his ship from death or serious injury⁷; or (c) to prevent his ship from causing the loss or destruction of or serious damage to any other ship or any structure or the death of or serious injury to any person not on board his ship⁸, and either of the specified conditions is satisfied with respect to that act or omission, he is guilty of an offence⁹. Those conditions are that the act or omission was deliberate or amounted to a breach or neglect of duty¹⁰ or that the master or seaman in question was under the influence of drink or a drug at the time of the act or omission¹¹.

If a master or seaman¹²:

- 1340 (i) discharges any of his duties, or performs any other function in relation to the operation of his ship or its machinery or equipment, in such a manner as to cause, or to be likely to cause, any such loss, destruction, death or injury as is mentioned in head (1) above¹³; or
- 1341 (ii) fails to discharge any of his duties, or to perform any such function, properly to such an extent as to cause, or to be likely to cause, any of those things¹⁴, he is guilty of an offence¹⁵.

A person guilty of any such offence¹⁶ is liable, on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or a fine (or to both) or, on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum¹⁷. In proceedings for such an offence¹⁸, it is a defence to prove¹⁹:

- 1342 (A) in the case of an offence under head (1) or (2) above, where the act or omission alleged against the accused constituted a breach or neglect of duty, that the accused took all reasonable steps to discharge that duty²⁰;
- 1343 (B) in the case of an offence under head (1) or (2) above, that at the time of the act or omission alleged against the accused he was under the influence of a drug taken by him for medical purposes and either that he took it on medical advice or that he had no reason to believe that the drug might have the influence it had²¹;

1344 (c) in the case of an offence under head (i) or (ii) above, that the accused took all reasonable precautions and exercised all due diligence to avoid committing the offence²²; or

1345 (d) in the case of an offence under any of heads (1), (2), (i) or (ii) above, that he could have avoided committing the offence only by disobeying a lawful command, or that in all the circumstances the loss, destruction, damage, death or injury in question, or, as the case may be, the likelihood of its being caused, either could not reasonably have been foreseen by the accused or could not reasonably have been avoided by him²³.

No proceedings for any such offence²⁴ may be instituted against any such person except by or with the consent of the Secretary of State²⁵ or the Director of Public Prosecutions²⁶.

See note 1. As to the Secretary of State for these purposes see

In relation to an offence under Pt 4, specified provisions of the Road Traffic Act 1988 and of the Road Traffic Offenders Act 1988 have effect, subject to specified modifications and to any other necessary modifications: see the Railways and Transport Safety Act 2003 s 83(1), Table; and PARA 1162 note 25.

Halsbury's Laws of England/SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW (VOLUME 93 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-590; VOLUME 94 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 591-1254)/14. OFFENCES AND LEGAL PROCEEDINGS/(2) SPECIFIC OFFENCES/(ii) Crew-related Offences/B. CONDUCT-RELATED OFFENCES COMMITTED BY CREW/(B) Alcohol and Drugs Offences/1164. Powers of police and marine officials where alcohol and drugs offences are suspected.

1164. Powers of police and marine officials where alcohol and drugs offences are suspected.

A marine official¹ may detain a ship² if he reasonably suspects that a person who is or may be on board the ship either is committing an offence related to alcohol or drugs³, or has committed such an offence⁴. This power of detention is conditional upon the marine official making a request (either before the detention or as soon as possible after its commencement) for a constable in uniform to attend, and it lapses when a constable in uniform has decided whether or not to exercise one of the powers available to him in such circumstances⁵ and has informed the marine official of his decision⁶.

A constable may arrest a person without a warrant if the constable reasonably suspects that the person (because his ability to exercise a function required of him is impaired due to drink or drugs) either is committing an offence⁷, or has committed such an offence and is still under the influence of drink or drugs⁸.

A constable in uniform may board a ship if he reasonably suspects that he may wish to exercise one of the powers available to him in relation to suspected alcohol or drugs offences⁹ or exercise his right of arrest without a warrant in such circumstances¹⁰ in respect of a person who is or may be on the ship¹¹. A constable in uniform also may enter any place if he reasonably suspects that he may wish to exercise such a power¹² in respect of a person who is or may be in that place¹³.

1 For these purposes, 'marine official' means:

- 38 (1) a harbour master (or an assistant of a harbour master) appointed by a harbour authority (Railways and Transport Safety Act 2003 s 84(3)(a));
- 39 (2) a person listed in the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 284(1)(a)-(d) (detention of ship) (see PARA 1253) (Railways and Transport Safety Act 2003 s 84(3)(b)); and
- 40 (3) a person falling within a class designated by order of the Secretary of State (s 84(3)(c)).

In construing the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 284(1)(b) (detention by person authorised by Secretary of State) for the purpose of head (2) above, the reference to authorisation to exercise powers under s 284 is to be taken as a reference both to general authorisation to exercise powers under s 284, and to general or particular authorisation to exercise powers under the Railways and Transport Safety Act 2003 s 84: s 84(4). The power under head (3) above for the Secretary of State to designate a class of person includes a power for him to designate either himself, or one or more persons employed in his Department (s 88(2)) and an order under head (3) above is subject to annulment in pursuance of a resolution of either House of Parliament (s 88(5)). Orders under Pt 4 (ss 78-91) may make transitional, supplemental and incidental provision, make provision generally or for specified purposes only, and make different provision for different purposes (s 88(1)); and such orders must be made by statutory instrument (s 88(3)). As to the Secretary of State for these purposes see RAILWAYS, INLAND WATERWAYS AND CROSS-COUNTRY PIPELINES vol 39(1A) (Reissue) PARA 35. As to the meaning of 'harbour authority' see PARA 68 note 4; definition applied by s 89(2)(c).

2 As to the meaning of 'ship' for these purposes, and as to the ships and persons to which the Railways and Transport Safety Act 2003 Pt 4 applies generally, see PARA 1162 note 3. However, s 84 does not have effect in relation to a ship which is being used for a purpose of Her Majesty's forces, or forms part of the Royal Fleet Auxiliary Service: s 90(3).

3 le under the Railways and Transport Safety Act 2003 s 78 or s 79 (see PARA 1162) or s 80 (see PARA 1163): see s 84(1). As to the meaning of 'drug' for these purposes see PARA 1162 note 6.

4 Railways and Transport Safety Act 2003 s 84(1).

5 le by virtue of the Railways and Transport Safety Act 2003 s 83 (see PARA 1162 note 25): see s 84(2).

6 Railways and Transport Safety Act 2003 s 84(2).

7 le an offence under the Railways and Transport Safety Act 2003 s 78(2) or s 79(2) (see PARA 1162) or s 80(2) (see PARA 1163): see s 85(1).

8 Railways and Transport Safety Act 2003 s 85(1). However, a person may not be arrested under s 85(1) while he is at a hospital as a patient: s 85(2). For this purpose, 'hospital' means an institution which provides medical or surgical treatment for in-patients or out-patients, and is not on a ship: s 85(3).

An arrest under s 85 is treated as arrest for an offence for the purposes of the Police and Criminal Evidence Act 1984 Pt IV (ss 34-51) (detention) (see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(2) (2006 Reissue) PARA 938 et seq): Railways and Transport Safety Act 2003 s 85(4).

12 le by virtue of the Railways and Transport Safety Act 2003 s 83 (see PARA 1162 note 25) or by virtue of s 85 (see the text and notes 7-8): see s 86(2).

Unauthorised liquor on board a United Kingdom fishing vessel.

1165. Unauthorised liquor on board a United Kingdom fishing vessel.

As from a day to be appointed, the following provisions have effect¹.

A person who, in the United Kingdom² or elsewhere³:

- 1359 (1) takes any unauthorised liquor⁴ on board a United Kingdom fishing vessel⁵;
- 1360 (2) has any unauthorised liquor in his possession on board such a vessel⁶;
- 1361 (3) permits another person to take on board such a vessel, or to have in his possession on board such a vessel, any unauthorised liquor⁷; or
- 1362 (4) intentionally obstructs another person in the exercise of powers conferred on the other person⁸ in relation to suspected offences under head (1) or head (2) above⁹, is guilty of an offence¹⁰. A person guilty of such an offence is liable, on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or a fine (or to both) or, on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum¹¹.

It is a defence in proceedings for an offence under head (1) or head (2) above to prove:

- 1363 (a) that the accused believed that the liquor in question was not unauthorised liquor in relation to the vessel in question and that he had reasonable grounds for the belief¹²; or
- 1364 (b) that the accused did not know that the liquor in question was in his possession¹³.

It is a defence in proceedings for an offence under head (3) above to prove that the accused believed that the liquor in question was not unauthorised liquor in relation to the vessel in question and that he had reasonable grounds for the belief¹⁴.

If an authorised person¹⁵ has reason to believe that an offence under head (1) or head (2) above has been committed by another person in connection with a fishing vessel, the authorised person¹⁶:

- 1365 (i) may go on board the vessel and search it and any property on it and may, if the other person is on board the vessel, search him there in an authorised manner¹⁷; and
- 1366 (ii) may take possession of any liquor which he finds on the vessel and has reason to believe is unauthorised liquor and may detain the liquor for the period needed to ensure that the liquor is available as evidence in proceedings for the offence¹⁸.

¹ The Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 118 does not have effect until the Secretary of State by order appoints a day for s 118 to come into force: see s 314(3), Sch 14 para 5(1), (2); and PARA 16. Any reference in s 118(6) to the owner of a vessel is to be construed as excluding any member of the crew of the vessel and, subject thereto, as a reference to the person or all the persons who, in the certificate of registration of the vessel, is or are stated to be the registered owner or owners of the vessel: s 118(7). 13 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 118(3)(b). See note 1.

14 Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 118(4). See note 1.

15 For these purposes, 'authorised person', in relation to a vessel, means a superintendent, a proper officer, a person appointed in pursuance of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 s 258(1)(c) (see PARA 48), the master of the vessel in question, the owner of the vessel in question, or any person instructed by the master or owner to prevent the commission of offences under s 118(1) (see the text and notes 1-10) in relation to the vessel: s 118(6). 1166. Contravention of safety requirements applicable to commercially operated vessels.

Contravention of any of the provisions governing the safety requirements that are applicable to commercially operated vessels¹ is an offence by the owner and master of the vessel which renders both of them liable, on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years and a fine, or, on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum².

It is a good defence to such a charge to prove that the person charged took all reasonable steps to avoid the commission of the offence³.

In any case where a ship does not comply with the requirements relating to the carriage of packaged irradiated nuclear fuel by sea¹¹, the ship is liable to be detained¹².

Offences and penalties apply also where various requirements relating to the reporting of dangerous goods¹³ or harmful substances in packaged form¹⁴ which are being carried by merchant shipping¹⁵ are contravened¹⁶, and for the detention of a ship in any such case of non-compliance¹⁷.

1189. Penalties relating to contravention of load line provisions.

Where a ship proceeds, or attempts to proceed, to sea¹, without having been surveyed in accordance with the load lines rules², or marked with the appropriate marks³, or without complying with the conditions of assignment applicable to it⁴, or without the information as to the stability of the ship⁵, or as to the loading and ballasting of any ship of more than 150 metres in length⁶, that must be provided for the guidance of the ship's master⁷, the owner and master of the ship are each guilty of an offence and liable, on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum⁸; and on conviction on indictment, to a fine⁹.

Where a ship has been so loaded that the appropriate load line¹⁰ on each side of the ship either: (1) is submerged¹¹; or (2) would be submerged if the ship were in salt water and had no list¹², that amounts to an offence by both the owner and master and is punishable¹³, on summary conviction, by a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum and by such additional fine, subject to specified limits¹⁴, as the court thinks fit to impose, having regard to the extent to which the earning capacity of the ship was increased by reason of the contravention¹⁵; and, on conviction on indictment, by a fine¹⁶. If a ship which is so loaded¹⁷ proceeds to sea¹⁸, that is an offence by the master and by any other person who, having reason to believe that the ship is so loaded, sends or is party to sending the ship to sea, punishable¹⁹, on summary conviction, by a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum; and, on conviction on indictment, by a fine²⁰.

Any contravention of the duty of the owner and master to keep the ship marked with the appropriate marks²¹ is an offence by both the owner and the master punishable, on summary conviction, by a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale²²; and any contravention by any person of the requirement not to conceal, remove, alter, deface or obliterate the marks without the authority of the Assigning Authority²³, is an offence punishable, on summary conviction, by a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale²⁴.

Any contravention of the requirement, subject to any exemption, not to proceed, or attempt to proceed, to sea unless the appropriate certificate²⁵ is in force in respect of the ship²⁶ is an offence by the master punishable, on summary conviction, by a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum; and, on conviction on indictment, by a fine²⁷.

Any contravention of the requirements relating to publication of the load line certificate or notification of draughts²⁸ is an offence by both the master and owner punishable, on summary conviction, by a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale²⁹.

Any ship which proceeds or attempts to proceed to sea without being duly surveyed and marked³⁰ may be detained until it has been so surveyed and marked³¹; any ship which does not comply with the conditions of assignment applicable to it is liable to be detained until it complies³²; and any ship which is so loaded that the appropriate load line on each side of the ship either is submerged (or would be submerged if the ship were in salt water and had no list)³³ may³⁴ be detained until it ceases to be so loaded³⁵. In any case where a ship is liable to be detained in this way, provision is made in relation to enforcement³⁶; and provisions relating to compensation have effect³⁷.

1194. Penalties for unauthorised presence in restricted areas of ship or port facility.

A person must not:

- 1400 (1) go onto or into any part of a restricted area¹ of a ship except with the permission of the master² or the ship security officer³ or a person acting on their behalf, and in accordance with any conditions subject to which that permission is for the time being granted⁴; or

However, a person who contravenes head (1) above is not guilty of an offence unless it is proved that, at the material time, notices stating that the area concerned was a restricted area were posted so as to be readily seen and read by persons entering the area⁷.

A constable⁸ or the master or the ship security officer (or a person acting on behalf of the master or the ship security officer) may use such force as is reasonable in the circumstances to remove from a restricted area a person remaining in it in contravention of head (2) above⁹.

If there is any contravention of a direction¹, made where deficiencies hazardous to safety, health or the environment are confirmed or revealed by inspection¹, in respect of a ship², the owner³ or master of the ship is guilty of an offence and liable, on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or a fine (or to both) or, on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum⁴.

Where a ship:

- 1405 (2) fails⁹ to proceed to the nearest appropriate port in order to rectify the lack of a functioning voyage data recorder whose use is compulsory, or where a ship fails to comply with a requirement¹⁰ that any such deficiency be rectified within 30 days¹¹;
- 1406 (3) fails to proceed to the nearest appropriate repair yard available¹² where deficiencies hazardous to safety, health or the environment have been confirmed or revealed by inspection but could not be rectified in the port of inspection¹³; or the owner and master are each guilty of an offence and liable, on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or a fine (or to both) or, on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum¹⁵.

If a person obstructs an inspector¹⁶ or any person assisting the inspector, he is guilty of an offence and liable, on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding level 4 on the standard scale¹⁷.

Any pilot¹⁸ who, or, as the case may be, any port authority¹⁹ which fails²⁰ to report deficiencies which may prejudice the safe navigation of a ship, or which may pose a threat of harm to the marine environment, is guilty of an offence and liable, on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale²¹.

1196. Contravention of provisions governing distress signals and prevention of collisions.

Where any of the provisions governing distress signals and the prevention of collisions¹ is contravened, the owner of the vessel, the master and any person for the time being responsible for the conduct of the vessel are each guilty of an offence² and liable, on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years and a fine, or on summary conviction³:

- 1408 (1) in the case of any infringement of the duty to proceed with traffic flow in lanes of separation schemes⁴, by a fine not exceeding £50,000⁵; and
- 1409 (2) in any other case, by a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum⁶.

It is a defence for any person so charged⁷ to show that he took all reasonable precautions to avoid the commission of the offence⁸.

In any case where a ship does not comply with the requirements of the provisions governing distress signals and the prevention of collisions⁹, the ship¹⁰ is liable to be detained¹¹.

1197. Master's failure to comply with his duties to assist ships etc in distress or persons in danger.

If the master¹ of a ship² fails without reasonable excuse to comply with the duty imposed on him³ to assist the other ship in a case of collision, he is liable⁴:

1410 (1) in the case of a failure to render to the other ship, its master, crew and passengers, if any, such assistance as may be practicable and necessary to save them from any danger caused by the collision, or to stay by the other ship until he has ascertained that it has no need of further assistance⁵, on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or a fine (or to both) or, on summary conviction, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months or a fine not exceeding £50,000 (or to both)⁶;

In either case mentioned in heads (1) and (2) above, if the master of the ship is a certified officer, an inquiry into his conduct may be held¹⁰ and his certificate cancelled or suspended¹¹.

If the master of a ship fails to comply with the duty imposed on him¹² to assist an aircraft in distress, he is liable, on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or a fine (or to both) or, on summary conviction, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding six months or a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum (or to both)¹³.

OFFENCES AND LEGAL PROCEEDINGS/(2) SPECIFIC OFFENCES/(iii) Safety Offences/A. OFFENCES UNDER GENERAL SAFETY PROVISIONS/1199. Offences in connection with passenger ships.

1199. Offences in connection with passenger ships.

A person commits an offence if, in relation to a ship¹ for which there is in force a Passenger Ship Safety Certificate or Passenger Certificate, as the case may be, issued under or recognised by safety regulations², he does any of the following things³, that is to say:

- 1422 (1) if, being drunk or disorderly, he has been on that account refused admission to the ship by the owner or any person in his employment, and, after having the amount of his fare, if he has paid it, returned or tendered to him, nevertheless persists in attempting to enter the ship⁴;
- 1423 (2) if, being drunk or disorderly on board the ship, he is requested by the owner or any person in his employment to leave the ship at any place in the United Kingdom⁵ at which he can conveniently do so, and, after having the amount of his fare, if he has paid it, returned or tendered to him, does not comply with the request⁶;
- 1424 (3) if, on board the ship, after warning by the master⁷ or other officer thereof, he molests or continues to molest any passenger⁸;
- 1425 (4) if, after having been refused admission to the ship by the owner or any person in his employment on account of the ship being full, and having had the amount of his fare, if he has paid it, returned or tendered to him, he nevertheless persists in attempting to enter the ship⁹;
- 1426 (5) if, having gone on board the ship at any place, and being requested, on account of the ship being full, by the owner or any person in his employment to leave the ship before it has left that place, and having had the amount of his fare, if he has paid it, returned or tendered to him, he does not comply with that request¹⁰;
- 1427 (6) if, on arriving in the ship at a point to which he has paid his fare, he knowingly and intentionally refuses or neglects to leave the ship¹¹; and
- 1428 (7) if, on board the ship he fails, when requested by the master or other officer thereof, either to pay his fare or show such ticket or other receipt, if any, showing the payment of his fare, as is usually given to persons travelling by and paying their fare for the ship¹²;

but his liability in respect of any such offence does not prejudice the recovery of any fare payable by him¹³.

A person commits an offence if, on board any ship for which there is in force a Passenger Ship Safety Certificate or Passenger Certificate, as the case may be, issued under or recognised by safety regulations, he intentionally does or causes to be done anything in such a manner as to¹⁴:

- 1429 (a) obstruct or damage any part of the machinery or equipment of the ship¹⁵;
or
- 1430 (b) obstruct, impede or molest the crew, or any of them, in the navigation or management of the ship, or otherwise in the execution of their duty on or about the ship¹⁶.

The master or other officer of any ship for which there is in force a Passenger Ship Safety Certificate or Passenger Certificate, as the case may be, issued under or recognised by safety regulations, and all persons called by him to his assistance, may, without any warrant, detain any person who commits any such offence¹⁷ and whose name and address are unknown to the master or officer, and deliver that person to a constable¹⁸.

A person guilty of any such offence¹⁹ is liable, on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding level 2 on the standard scale²⁰; and if any person commits any such offence²¹ and, on the application of the master of the ship, or any other person in the employment of the owner thereof, refuses to give his name and address, or gives a false name or address, that person is liable, on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding level 2 on the standard scale²².

Where a ship¹ which is:

- 1439 (1) in a port² in the United Kingdom³; or
- 1440 (2) at sea in United Kingdom waters⁴, appears to a relevant inspector⁵ to be a dangerously unsafe ship⁶, the ship may be detained⁷. The power of detention so conferred⁸ is exercisable in relation to foreign ships⁹ as well as United Kingdom ships¹⁰, although the power of detention conferred by head (2) above is not exercisable in relation to a qualifying foreign ship¹¹ while the ship is exercising either the right of innocent passage¹², or the right of transit passage through straits used for international navigation¹³.

The officer detaining the ship must serve on the master¹⁴ of the ship a detention notice¹⁵ which must:

- 1441 (a) state that the relevant inspector is of the opinion that the ship is a dangerously unsafe ship¹⁶;
- 1442 (b) specify the matters which, in the relevant inspector's opinion, make the ship a dangerously unsafe ship¹⁷; and
- 1443 (c) require the ship to comply with the terms of the notice until it is released by a competent authority¹⁸.

In the case of a ship which is not a British ship¹⁹, the officer detaining the ship must cause a copy of the detention notice to be sent as soon as practicable to the nearest consular officer for the country to which the ship belongs²⁰.

1205. References of detention notices to arbitration.

Any question as to whether any of the matters specified in relation to a ship¹ in a detention notice² in connection with any opinion formed by the relevant inspector³ constituted a valid basis for that opinion must be referred, if the master⁴ or owner of the ship so requires by a notice given to the relevant inspector within 21 days from the service of the detention notice, to a single arbitrator appointed by agreement between the parties for that question to be decided by him⁵.

A person is not qualified for appointment as an arbitrator for these purposes⁶ unless he is⁷:

- 1444 (1) a person holding a certificate of competency as a master mariner or as a marine engineer officer class 1, or a person holding a certificate equivalent to any such certificate⁸;
- 1445 (2) a naval architect⁹;
- 1446 (3) a person who satisfies the judicial-appointment eligibility condition on a seven-year basis¹⁰; or
- 1447 (4) a person with special experience of shipping matters, of the fishing industry, or of activities carried on in ports¹¹.

Where a notice is so given by the master or owner of the ship¹², the giving of the notice does not suspend the operation of the detention notice unless, on the application of the person requiring the reference, the arbitrator so directs¹³.

The arbitrator must have regard, in coming to his decision, to any other matters not specified in the detention notice which appear to him to be relevant to whether the ship was or was not a dangerously unsafe ship¹⁴.

Where on such a reference¹⁵ the arbitrator decides, as respects any matter to which the reference relates, that in all the circumstances the matter did not constitute a valid basis for the inspector's opinion, he must either cancel the detention notice or affirm it with such modifications as he may in the circumstances think fit; and in any other case the arbitrator must affirm the notice in its original form¹⁶.

The arbitrator must include in his decision a finding whether there was or was not a valid basis for the detention of the ship as a dangerously unsafe ship¹⁷.

1206 Compensation in connection with invalid detention of ship

NOTE 6--See Club Cruise Entertainment and Travelling Services Europe BV v Department for Transport [2008] EWHC 2794 (Comm), [2009] 1 All ER (Comm) 955 (arbitrator may award compensation even though no cause of action against Maritime and Coastguard Agency at common law).

Halsbury's Laws of England/SHIPPING AND MARITIME LAW (VOLUME 93 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 1-590; VOLUME 94 (2008) 5TH EDITION, PARAS 591-1254)/14. OFFENCES AND LEGAL PROCEEDINGS/(2) SPECIFIC OFFENCES/(iii) Safety Offences/B. OFFENCES RELATING TO USE OF UNSAFE SHIPS ETC/1207. Owner and master liable in respect of dangerously unsafe ship.

1207. Owner and master liable in respect of dangerously unsafe ship.

If a ship¹ which is in a port² in the United Kingdom³, or which is a United Kingdom ship⁴ and is in any other port, is dangerously unsafe⁵, the master⁶ and the owner of the ship are each guilty of an offence⁷. However, where, at the time when a ship is dangerously unsafe, any responsibilities of the owner with respect to the matters relevant to its safety⁸ have been assumed, whether wholly or in part, by any person or persons other than the owner, and have been so assumed by that person or, as the case may be, by each of those persons either directly, under the terms of a charterparty or management agreement made with the owner⁹, or indirectly, under the terms of a series of charterparties or management agreements, the reference to the owner for these purposes¹⁰ is to be construed as a reference to that other person or, as the case may be, to each of those other persons¹¹.

A person guilty of such an offence¹² is liable, on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or a fine (or to both) or, on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding £50,000¹³.

It is, however, a defence in proceedings for such an offence¹⁴ to prove that at the time of the alleged offence¹⁵:

- 1450 (1) arrangements had been made which were appropriate to ensure that, before the ship went to sea¹⁶, it was made fit to do so without serious danger to human life by reason of the matters relevant to its safety which are specified in the charge¹⁷; or
- 1451 (2) it was reasonable for such arrangements not to have been made¹⁸.

It is also a defence in proceedings for such an offence to prove:

- 1452 (a) that, under the terms of one or more charterparties or management agreements entered into by the accused, the relevant responsibilities, namely (where the accused is the owner) his responsibilities with respect to the matters relevant to the ship's safety, or (where any of the accused's responsibilities have been assumed by any person or persons other than the owner¹⁹) so much of those responsibilities as had been assumed by him²⁰, had at the time of the alleged offence been wholly assumed by some other person or persons party thereto²¹; and
- 1453 (b) that in all the circumstances of the case the accused had taken such steps as it was reasonable for him to take, and exercised such diligence as it was reasonable for him to exercise, to secure the proper discharge of the relevant responsibilities during the period during which they had been assumed by some other person or persons as mentioned in head (a) above²².

In determining whether the accused had done so, regard is to be had in particular to the following matters²³, namely:

- 1454 (i) whether prior to the time of the alleged offence the accused was, or in all the circumstances of the case ought reasonably to have been, aware of any deficiency in the discharge of the relevant responsibilities²⁴; and

- 1455 (ii) the extent to which the accused was or was not able, under the terms of any such charterparty or management agreement as is mentioned in head (a) above, either to terminate it or to intervene in the management of the ship, in the event of any such deficiency, and whether it was reasonable for the accused to place himself in that position²⁵.

No proceedings for such an offence²⁶ may be instituted in England and Wales²⁷ except by or with the consent of the Secretary of State²⁸ or the Director of Public Prosecutions²⁹.

Proceedings for such an offence⁵ may not be instituted in England and Wales⁶ except by or with the consent of the Secretary of State⁷.

OFFENCES AND LEGAL PROCEEDINGS/(2) SPECIFIC OFFENCES/(iii) Safety Offences/B. OFFENCES RELATING TO USE OF UNSAFE SHIPS ETC/1209. Owner liable for unsafe operation of ship.

1209. Owner liable for unsafe operation of ship.

It is the duty of the owner of:

- 1456 (1) any United Kingdom ship¹; and
- 1457 (2) any ship which is registered under the law of any country outside the United Kingdom and is within United Kingdom waters² while proceeding to or from a port³ in the United Kingdom (unless the ship would not be so proceeding but for weather conditions or any other unavoidable circumstances)⁴, to take all reasonable steps to secure that the ship is operated in a safe manner⁵.

If the owner of a ship which falls within head (1) or head (2) above fails to discharge the duty so imposed on him⁶, he is liable, on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or a fine (or to both) or, on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding £50,000⁷.

However, where any such ship:

- 1458 (a) is chartered by demise⁸; or
- 1459 (b) is managed, either wholly or in part, by a person other than the owner under the terms of a management agreement⁹, any reference to the owner of the ship for these purposes¹⁰ must be construed as including a reference:

- 1460 (i) to the charterer under the charter by demise¹¹; or
- 1461 (ii) to any such manager as is referred to in head (b) above¹²; or
- 1462 (iii) if the ship is both chartered and managed as mentioned above, to both the charterer and any such manager¹³, and accordingly the reference¹⁴ to the taking of all reasonable steps is to be construed, in relation to the owner, the charterer or any such manager, as a reference to the taking of all such steps as it is reasonable for him to take in the circumstances of the case¹⁵.

A person who unlawfully, by the use of force or by threats of any kind, seizes a ship¹ or exercises control of it, commits the offence of hijacking a ship, whatever his nationality and whether the ship is in the United Kingdom² or elsewhere³. However, this offence⁴ does not apply in relation to a warship or any other ship used as a naval auxiliary or in customs or police service unless⁵:

- 1463 (1) the person seizing or exercising control of the ship is a United Kingdom national⁶; or
- 1464 (2) his act is committed in the United Kingdom⁷; or
- 1465 (3) the ship is used in the naval⁸ or customs service of the United Kingdom or in the service of any police force in the United Kingdom⁹.

A person guilty of the offence of hijacking a ship is liable, on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for life¹⁰.

1 For these purposes, 'ship' means any vessel (including hovercraft, submersible craft and other floating craft) other than one which permanently rests on, or is permanently attached to, the sea bed and has been withdrawn from navigation or laid up: Aviation and Maritime Security Act 1990 s 17(1).

2 As to the meaning of 'United Kingdom' see PARA 17 note 3. For these purposes, the territorial waters adjacent to any part of the United Kingdom are to be treated as included in that part of the United Kingdom: Aviation and Maritime Security Act 1990 s 17(2).

3 Aviation and Maritime Security Act 1990 s 9(1).

5 Aviation and Maritime Security Act 1990 s 9(2).

6 Aviation and Maritime Security Act 1990 s 9(2)(a).

For these purposes, 'United Kingdom national' means an individual who is (1) a British citizen, a British overseas territories citizen, a British National (Overseas) or a British Overseas citizen; (2) a person who under the British Nationality Act 1981 is a British subject (see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 9, 66-67); or (3) a British protected person within the meaning of the 1981 Act (see BRITISH NATIONALITY, IMMIGRATION AND ASYLUM vol 4(2) (2002 Reissue) PARAS 10, 72 et seq): Aviation and Maritime Security Act 1990 s 17(1) (definition amended by virtue of the British Overseas Territories Act 2002 s 2(3)). OFFENCES AND LEGAL PROCEEDINGS/(2) SPECIFIC OFFENCES/(iv) Offences against Maritime Security/A. SAFETY OF SHIPS AND FIXED PLATFORMS/1211. Seizing or exercising control of fixed platforms.

1211. Seizing or exercising control of fixed platforms.

A person who unlawfully, by the use of force or by threats of any kind, seizes a fixed platform¹ or exercises control of it, commits an offence, whatever his nationality and whether the fixed platform is in the United Kingdom² or elsewhere³.

A person guilty of such an offence is liable, on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for life⁴.

1 For these purposes, 'fixed platform' means: (1) any offshore installation, within the meaning of the Mineral Workings (Offshore Installations) Act 1971, which is not a ship; and (2) any other artificial island, installation or structure which: (a) permanently rests on, or is permanently attached to, the sea bed; (b) is maintained for the purposes of the exploration or exploitation of resources or for other economic purposes; and (c) is not connected with dry land by a permanent structure providing access at all times and for all purposes: Aviation and Maritime Security Act 1990 s 17(1). In the Mineral Workings (Offshore Installations) Act 1971, unless the context otherwise requires, 'offshore installation' has the same meaning as in the Offshore Installations and Pipeline Works (Management and Administration) Regulations 1995, SI 1995/738, reg 3 (see FUEL AND ENERGY vol 19(3) (2007 Reissue) PARA 1684): see the Mineral Workings (Offshore Installations) Act 1971 s 12(1) (definition added by the Oil and Gas (Enterprise) Act 1982 s 37, Sch 3 para 11; and substituted by SI 1995/738). As to the meaning of 'ship' see PARA 1210 note 1.

OFFENCES AND LEGAL PROCEEDINGS/(2) SPECIFIC OFFENCES/(iv) Offences against Maritime Security/A. SAFETY OF SHIPS AND FIXED PLATFORMS/1212. Destroying ships or fixed platforms or endangering their safety.

1212. Destroying ships or fixed platforms or endangering their safety.

A person commits an offence¹ if he unlawfully² and intentionally³:

- 1466 (1) destroys a ship⁴ or a fixed platform⁵;
- 1467 (2) damages a ship, its cargo or a fixed platform so as to endanger, or to be likely to endanger, the safe navigation of the ship or, as the case may be, the safety of the platform⁶; or
- 1468 (3) commits on board a ship or on a fixed platform an act of violence⁷ which is likely to endanger the safe navigation of the ship or, as the case may be, the safety of the platform⁸.

A person commits an offence⁹ if he unlawfully and intentionally places, or causes to be placed, on a ship or fixed platform any device or substance which¹⁰:

- 1469 (a) in the case of a ship, is likely to destroy the ship or is likely so to damage it or its cargo as to endanger its safe navigation¹¹; or
- 1470 (b) in the case of a fixed platform, is likely to destroy the fixed platform or so to damage it as to endanger its safety¹²;

but nothing in this provision¹³ is to be construed as limiting the circumstances in which the commission of any act may constitute an offence under heads (1) to (3) above¹⁴, or may constitute attempting or conspiring to commit, or aiding, abetting, counselling, procuring or inciting, or being art and part in, the commission of such an offence¹⁵.

These offences¹⁶ apply whether any such act that is required to be committed by them is committed in the United Kingdom or elsewhere and whatever the nationality of the person committing the act¹⁷; but those offences¹⁸ do not apply in relation to any act committed in relation to a warship or any other ship used as a naval auxiliary or in customs or police service unless:

- 1471 (i) the person committing the act is a United Kingdom national¹⁹; or
- 1472 (ii) his act is committed in the United Kingdom²⁰; or
- 1473 (iii) the ship is used in the naval²¹ or customs service of the United Kingdom or in the service of any police force in the United Kingdom²².

A person guilty of any such offence²³ is liable, on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for life²⁴.

1 le subject to the Aviation and Maritime Security Act 1990 s 11(5) (see the text and notes 18-22): see s 11(1).

2 For these purposes, 'unlawfully' means: (1) in relation to the commission of an act in the United Kingdom, so as, apart from the Aviation and Maritime Security Act 1990, to constitute an offence under the law of the part of the United Kingdom in which the act is committed; and (2) in relation to the commission of an act outside the United Kingdom, so that the commission of the act would, apart from the Aviation and Maritime Security Act

1990, have been an offence under the law of England and Wales if it had been committed in England and Wales: s 11(7). As to the meanings of 'England' and 'Wales' see PARA 17 note 2. 7 For these purposes, 'act of violence' means: (1) any act done in the United Kingdom which constitutes the offence of murder, attempted murder, manslaughter, culpable homicide or assault (as to which see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 84 et seq) or an offence under the Offences against the Person Act 1861 s 18 (shooting or attempting to shoot, or wounding, with intent to do grievous bodily harm, or to resist apprehension) (see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 118), s 20 (inflicting bodily injury, with or without weapon) (see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 120), s 21 (attempting to choke, etc, in order to commit or assist in the committing of any indictable offence) (see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 121), s 22 (using chloroform, etc, to commit or assist in the committing of any indictable offence) (see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 122), s 23 (maliciously administering poison, etc, so as to endanger life or inflict grievous bodily harm) (see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 124), s 24 (maliciously administering poison, etc, with intent to injure, aggrieve, or annoy any other person) (see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 124), s 28 (causing bodily injury by gunpowder) (see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 125), s 29 (causing gunpowder to explode, or sending to any person an explosive substance, or throwing corrosive fluid on a person, with intent to do grievous bodily harm) (see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 126) or under the Explosive Substances Act 1883 s 2 (see CRIMINAL LAW, EVIDENCE AND PROCEDURE vol 11(1) (2006 Reissue) PARA 127; EXPLOSIVES vol 17(2) (Reissue) PARA 1022); and (2) any act done outside the United Kingdom which, if done in the United Kingdom, would constitute such an offence as is mentioned in head (1): Aviation and Maritime Security Act 1990 s 11(7).

Other acts endangering or likely to endanger safe navigation.

1213. Other acts endangering or likely to endanger safe navigation.

It is an offence¹ for any person unlawfully² and intentionally³:

- 1474 (1) to destroy or damage any property used for the provision of maritime navigation facilities (including any land, building or ship⁴ so used, and including any apparatus or equipment so used, whether it is on board a ship or elsewhere)⁵; or
- 1475 (2) seriously to interfere with the operation of any such property⁶, where the destruction, damage or interference is likely to endanger the safe navigation of any ship⁷.

It is also an offence⁸ for any person intentionally to communicate any information which he knows to be false in a material particular, where the communication of the information endangers the safe navigation of any ship⁹; but it is a defence for a person charged with such an offence to prove that, when he communicated the information, he was lawfully employed to perform duties which consisted of or included the communication of information and that he communicated the information in good faith in performance of those duties¹⁰.

These offences¹¹ apply whether any such act that is required to be committed by them is committed in the United Kingdom¹² or elsewhere and whatever the nationality of the person committing the act¹³; but, for the purposes of those offences¹⁴, any danger, or likelihood of danger, to the safe navigation of a warship or any other ship used as a naval auxiliary or in customs or police service is to be disregarded unless:

- 1476 (a) the person committing the act is a United Kingdom national¹⁵; or
- 1477 (b) his act is committed in the United Kingdom¹⁶; or
- 1478 (c) the ship is used in the naval¹⁷ or customs service of the United Kingdom or is in the service of any police force in the United Kingdom¹⁸.

OFFENCES AND LEGAL PROCEEDINGS/(2) SPECIFIC OFFENCES/(iv) Offences against Maritime Security/A. SAFETY OF SHIPS AND FIXED PLATFORMS/1216. Master's power of delivery.

1216. Master's power of delivery.

For the purposes of any proceedings before any court in the United Kingdom¹, if the master² of a ship³, wherever that ship may be, and whatever the state, if any, in which it may be registered, has reasonable grounds to believe that any person on board the ship has⁴:

- 1490 (1) committed an offence under any of the provisions relating to hijacking of ships⁵, destroying ships or fixed platforms or endangering their safety⁶, committing other acts endangering or likely to endanger safe navigation⁷ or under the provisions⁸ that govern offences involving threats⁹;
- 1491 (2) attempted to commit such an offence¹⁰; or
- 1492 (3) aided, abetted, counselled, procured or incited, or been art and part in, the commission of such an offence¹¹, in relation to any ship other than a warship or other ship used as a naval auxiliary or in customs or police service, he may deliver that person to an appropriate officer¹² in the United Kingdom or any other Convention country¹³.

Where the master of a ship intends so to deliver any person in the United Kingdom or any other Convention country, he must give notification to an appropriate officer in that country¹⁴:

- 1493 (a) of his intention to deliver that person to an appropriate officer in that country¹⁵; and
- 1494 (b) of his reasons for intending to do so¹⁶; and any such notification must be given¹⁷:

- 1495 (i) before the ship in question has entered the territorial sea of the country concerned¹⁸; or
- 1496 (ii) if in the circumstances it is not reasonably practicable to comply with head (i) above, as soon as reasonably practicable after the ship has entered that territorial sea¹⁹.

Where the master of a ship so delivers any person to an appropriate officer in any country, he must²⁰:

- 1497 (A) make to an appropriate officer in that country such oral or written statements relating to the alleged offence as that officer may reasonably require²¹; and
- 1498 (B) deliver to an appropriate officer in that country such other evidence relating to the alleged offence as is in the master's possession²².

The master of a ship who without reasonable excuse fails to comply with either of these requirements as to delivery or notification²³ is guilty of an offence and liable, on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding level 3 on the standard scale²⁴; but it is a defence for a master of a ship charged with the offence of failing to give notification to an appropriate officer²⁵ to show that he believed on reasonable grounds that the giving of the required notification would endanger the safety of the ship and, except where the country concerned is the United Kingdom, that either he notified some other competent authority in the country concerned within the required time²⁶, or he believed on reasonable grounds that the giving of notification to any competent authority in that country would endanger the safety of the ship²⁷.

12 For these purposes, 'appropriate officer' means: (1) in relation to the United Kingdom, a constable or immigration officer; and (2) in relation to any other Convention country, an officer having functions corresponding to the functions in the United Kingdom either of a constable or of an immigration officer: see the Aviation and Maritime Security Act 1990 s 15(8). A person commits an offence if, in a restricted area¹, he does any of the following things otherwise than under the authority of a licence granted by the Secretary of State (or by the Welsh Ministers, as the case may be)²:

- 1528 (1) he tampers with, damages or removes any part of a vessel lying wrecked on or in the sea bed³, or any object formerly contained in such a vessel⁴; or
- 1529 (2) he carries out diving or salvage operations directed to the exploration of any wreck or to removing objects from it or from the sea bed, or uses equipment constructed or adapted for any purpose of diving or salvage operations⁵; or
- 1530 (3) he deposits, so as to fall and lie abandoned on the sea bed, anything which, if it were to fall on the site of a wreck (whether it so falls or not), would wholly or partly obliterate the site or obstruct access to it or damage any part of the wreck⁶; and he commits an offence if he causes or permits any of those things to be done by others in a restricted area, otherwise than under the authority of such a licence⁷.

A person also commits an offence if, without authority in writing granted by the Secretary of State⁸, he enters a prohibited area⁹, whether on the surface or under water¹⁰.

A person guilty of any such offence¹¹ is liable, on conviction on indictment, to a fine or, on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding the prescribed sum¹²; and proceedings for such an offence may be taken, and the offence may for all incidental purposes be treated as having been committed, at any place in the United Kingdom¹³ where the offender is for the time being¹⁴. Nothing is, however, to be regarded as constituting such an offence where it is done by a person:

- 1531 (a) in the course of any action taken by him for the sole purpose of dealing with an emergency of any description¹⁵; or
- 1532 (b) in exercising, or seeing to the exercise of, functions conferred by or under an enactment, local or other, on him or a body for which he acts¹⁶; or

A licence granted by the Secretary of State (or by the Welsh Ministers, as the case may be) for the purposes of s 1(3) must be in writing (s 1(5)); and:

⁶⁵ (1) the Secretary of State (or the Welsh Ministers, as the case may be) must, in respect of a restricted area, grant licences only to persons who appear to him (or to them, as the case may be) either (s 1(5)(a)):

1. (a) to be competent and properly equipped to carry out salvage operations in a manner appropriate to the historical, archaeological or artistic importance of any wreck which may be lying in the area and of any objects contained or formerly contained in a wreck (s 1(5)(a)(i)); or
2. (b) to have any other legitimate reason for doing in the area that which can only be done under the authority of a licence (s 1(5)(a)(ii));

66 (2) a licence may be granted subject to conditions or restrictions, and may be varied or revoked by the Secretary of State (or by the Welsh Ministers, as the case may be) at any time after giving not less than one week's notice to the licensee (s 1(5)(b)); and 67 (3) anything done contrary to any condition or restriction is to be treated for the purposes of s 1(3) as done otherwise than under the authority of the licence (s 1(5)(c)).

As to the Secretary of State see PARA 38. 1244. Enforcement of orders regulating coastal shipping services which are not British-based.

Where:

- 1556 (1) any ship¹ is used in the course of the provision of any coastal shipping services which are not British-based²; or
- 1557 (2) anything is done on board a ship with a view to its being used to provide such services³, and where the provision of those services is prohibited⁴ and is not sanctioned by any licence duly issued⁵, the master⁶ and the owner of the ship⁷ are each guilty of an offence⁸. It is a defence in such proceedings:

- 1558 (a) against the master of a ship to prove that he did not know and had no reason to suspect that, in the circumstances of the case, the provision of the shipping services referred to in head (1) above or, as the case may be, head (2) above, was prohibited⁹ or that he had reasonable grounds for believing that the provision of those services was sanctioned by a licence duly issued¹⁰;
- 1559 (b) against a person other than the master of a ship to prove that, under the terms of one or more charterparties or management agreements entered into by the accused, the right to determine the purpose for which the ship in question was being used at the time of the alleged offence was wholly vested in some other person or persons party thereto, whether or not such other person or persons had entered into a further charterparty or management agreement providing for that right to be vested in some other person¹¹.

Any person who in connection with an application for a licence¹² or in purported compliance with the requirements of any notice served on him requiring the production or furnishing of documents or information¹³ knowingly or recklessly furnishes information which is false in a material particular is guilty of an offence¹⁴. Any person who:

- 1560 (i) without reasonable excuse, the proof of which lies on him, fails to comply with the requirements of any such notice¹⁵; or
- 1561 (ii) intentionally alters, suppresses, conceals or destroys a document which he has been so required to produce¹⁶, is guilty of an offence¹⁷.

Any person guilty of any such offence¹⁸ is liable, on conviction on indictment, to imprisonment for a term not exceeding two years or a fine (or to both) or, on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding £50,000¹⁹.

Whenever any light is exhibited at such place or in such manner as to be liable to be mistaken for a light proceeding from a lighthouse¹, the general lighthouse authority² within whose area³ the place is situated may serve a notice (a 'prevention notice') upon the owner of the place where the light is exhibited or upon the person having the charge of the light⁴.

A prevention notice is a notice directing the person to whom it is addressed to take, within a reasonable time specified in the notice, effectual means for extinguishing or effectually screening the light and for preventing for the future any similar light⁵.

A prevention notice may, in addition to any other mode of service authorised by the Merchant Shipping Act 1995⁶, be served by affixing the notice in some conspicuous spot near to the light to which it relates⁷.

If a person on whom a prevention notice is served fails, without reasonable excuse, to comply with the directions contained in the notice, he is liable, on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding level 5 on the standard scale⁸.

If a person on whom a prevention notice is served neglects for a period of seven days to extinguish or effectually screen the light mentioned in the notice, the general lighthouse authority may enter the place where the light is and forthwith extinguish it, doing no unnecessary damage⁹. Where a general lighthouse authority incurs any expenses in exercising these powers¹⁰, it may recover the expenses from the person on whom the prevention notice is served¹¹. For the avoidance of doubt, it is declared that, for the purposes of any proceedings before a court in the United Kingdom¹ in respect of piracy, the following provisions² are to be treated as part of the law of nations³.

Piracy consists of any of the following acts:

- 1565 (1) any illegal acts of violence or detention, or any act of depredation, committed for private ends by the crew or the passengers of a private ship or a private aircraft, and directed⁴:
 - 1133 15. (a) on the high seas⁵, against another ship or aircraft, or against persons or property on board such ship or aircraft⁶;
 - 16. (b) against a ship, aircraft, persons or property in a place outside the jurisdiction of any state⁷;
- 1134 1566 (2) any act of voluntary participation in the operation of a ship or of an aircraft with knowledge of facts making it a pirate ship or aircraft⁸;
- 1567 (3) any act of inciting or of intentionally facilitating an act described in head (1) or head (2) above⁹.

The acts of piracy, as so defined, committed by a warship, government ship or government aircraft whose crew has mutinied and taken control of the ship or aircraft are assimilated to acts committed by a private ship or aircraft¹⁰.

Provision is made¹ with respect to the liability of a seaman² employed in a United Kingdom ship³ to damages for being absent from his ship at a time when he is required under his contract of employment to be on board⁴.

If he proves that his absence was due to an accident⁵ or mistake or some other cause beyond his control and that he took all reasonable precautions to avoid being absent, his absence is not to be treated as a breach of contract⁶. Where, however, this does not apply, then, if no special damages are claimed, his liability is £10 and, if special damages are claimed, his liability is not more than £100⁷.

Provision is made¹ where, at a time when a United Kingdom ship² is in the national or territorial waters of any country outside the United Kingdom, a seaman³ employed in the ship is absent without leave and present in that country in contravention⁴ of that country's laws⁵.

If, by reason of the contravention, a penalty is incurred under those laws by the persons employing the seaman, the penalty is to be treated as attributable to his absence without leave and may be recovered⁶ from him as special damages for breach of contract⁷.

(5) DETENTION OF SHIPS

1253. Enforcing detention of ship under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995.

Where, under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995, a ship¹ is to be or may be detained, any of the following officers may detain the ship²:

- 1568 (1) any commissioned naval³ or military⁴ officer⁵;
- 1569 (2) any officer of a Minister of the Crown⁶ who is authorised by the Secretary of State⁷, either generally or in a particular case, to exercise powers⁸ for the purposes of enforcing the detention of a ship⁹;
- 1570 (3) any officer of Revenue and Customs¹⁰; and
- 1571 (4) any British consular officer¹¹.

A notice of detention may¹²:

- 1572 (a) include a direction that the ship either must remain in a particular place¹³, or must be moved to a particular anchorage or berth¹⁴; and
- 1573 (b) if it includes such a direction, specify circumstances relating to safety or the prevention of pollution in which the master may move his ship from that place, anchorage or berth¹⁵.

If a ship, as respects which notice of detention has been served on the master¹⁶, either:

- 1574 (i) proceeds to sea¹⁷, otherwise than in accordance with such a notice, before it is released by a competent authority¹⁸; or
- 1575 (ii) fails to comply with a direction given under head (a) above¹⁹, the master of the ship is guilty of an offence²⁰ and liable, on conviction on indictment, to a fine, or, on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding £50,000²¹. The owner of a ship, and any person who sends to sea a ship, as respects which an offence is committed under head (i) or head (ii) above, is also guilty, if party or privy to the offence, of an offence and liable accordingly²².

Where a ship proceeding to sea in contravention²³ of head (i) above, or failing to comply with a direction given under head (a) above, carries away without his consent any of the following who is on board the ship in the execution of his duty²⁴, namely:

- 1576 (A) any officer authorised²⁵ to detain the ship²⁶; or
- 1577 (B) any surveyor of ships²⁷,

the owner and master of the ship are each liable to pay all expenses of and incidental to the officer or surveyor being so carried away²⁸, and are guilty of an offence²⁹ and liable, on conviction on indictment, to a fine, or, on summary conviction, to a fine not exceeding the statutory maximum³⁰.

Where, under the Merchant Shipping Act 1995, a ship is to be detained, an officer of Revenue and Customs must, and where under that Act a ship may be detained an officer of Revenue and Customs may, refuse to clear the ship outwards or grant a transire³¹ to the ship³²; and, where any provision of the Merchant Shipping Act 1995 provides that a ship may be detained until any document is produced to the proper officer of Revenue and Customs, the officer able to grant a clearance or transire of the ship is, unless the context otherwise requires, that officer³³.
